MISCELLANY.

THE SHOOTING MATCH.

On a beautiful eminence amidst a romantic collection of shade trees, in the mild climate of Mississippi, was situated the house of Mr. Bloomfield and his family. He was blessed with a lovely daughter and a son; the former, Eliza, whose beauty was only exceeded by her sweet disposition, was not less courted, than her brother Robert was respected by all who knew him.

As Eliza one day rambled in the neighboring woods in search of her brother, who had left her for the purpose of finding wild fruit, in a collection of brushwood that was near, she heard the rush of a large animal with its roar, as if in the act of approaching where she stood. She started, and turning beheld a huge bear in the act of attacking her. She trembled, and flying precipitately through the forest at length fell exhausted. So great was her fright, she knew not where she was, or what had happened, till roused by the report of a gun; gazing wildly, she perceived the monster bloody and infuriated, fall dead within a few paces of the spot where she had sunk.

Eliza cast her eyes to heaven with an air of gratitude, and stretching out her arms for the purpose of bringing her hands together, as we do when under the influence of the passions, in her transport shut in her palms the hand of a stranger who had pressed forward to raise her.

"Lovely young woman," said he, "fear not—I will protect you; the horrid animal is no more!" "Twas I, passing on a hunt and seeing your danger, that brought him to the ground with my rifle."

"Generous youth," said the charming girl, "I owe you my life! Take me to my father's house—he will delight in the preserver of his child."

The stranger supported her, and taking up his gun, they proceeded through the woods to the house. As soon as they reached the habitation of the fair Eliza, they were met by a gentle young beau, who had for some time past visited the family, and was believed by most spectators to be in love with the young lady. His name was Lovel. As soon as he perceived the stranger, he accosted him in these words:—

"Sir, I request you will permit me to converse with you—I request to know your name, and where you became acquainted with that young lady?"

To which the stranger replied:

"My name is Charles Sherwood; and I glory in saying that I had the happiness of doing a noble action at the moment I saved the life of the sweetest girl my eyes ever beheld."

"What!" interrupted Lovel, "you saved Eliza's life?"

"Alas! I fear I saved it to put my own in danger—for without her I cannot live."

Lovel perceived he had a rival, and suffered to much from the agitation of his feelings, that he called for his horse and took leave of the family. Mr. Bloomfield was much pleased with the noble countenance and manly form of Sherwood; and when he learned the danger from which he had rescued Eliza, he almost was tempted to give her to him in marriage immediately. Mr. Sherwood was of a respectable family and had been well educated; and he wanted a partner in life worthy of him to make his happiness complete. No sooner had Eliza reached home, than after calling the young stranger her deliverer and preserver, she retired to her mother's arms in another apartment, to assuage and tranquilize her feelings. In a few moments her brother, Robert, hastened in, with apparent delight depicted in his countenance, and announced that he had a few minutes before, seen a friend who told him there was to be a great shooting match on the day following, at 'Hunter's field,' an open plain with a small village near it, that on former occasions had been used as a place of much sport. These 'shooting matches,' as they were called, were superintended by the best marksmen in the country, and were instituted among the early settlers of many new territories of the west, for the purpose of bringing rifle-shooting to perfection, in order the better to repel the savages. The prize was generally a fat beef, which, when the sport was over, was given to the best shot, who after the whole ox was barbecued, was elevated for the day to the presidential chair at a large table under the spreading oaks.

Robert's joy at hearing the noble behaviour of the young stranger was extreme, and he requested he would, on the morrow, accompany him to the looked for sport. The young gentleman assented, and their guns were put in order on the instant. Sherwood was requested to spend the night with the Bloomfields, (a very usual custom on the Mississippi) and Eliza, in the evening, having recovered from her fright, appeared most lovely. As they were sitting in conversation, a servant entered with a letter and presented it to Mr. Bloomfield. It was from Lovel, and couched in these terms:

"My dear Sir—To-morrow I shall be at the shooting match, where I have made a large bet that I will bear off the prize; I request you will attend, and as you know I never yet allowed myself to be surpassed in skill at any thing, I wish you to have the pleasure of witnessing my success. This, I trust, will without doubt, persuade you to grant the request I have made of the charming Eliza; as I have heard you declare you would give your daughter to no man who could not excel in shooting—for you are of opinion it is the noblest art in the world; as I have frequently heard you say, had it not been that you yourself excelled at a mark, in former days, Bloomfield hall would have often been without food. I shall dream of my prize the whole night, and pray that to-morrow's dawn may crown my hopes."

LOVEL.

Mr. Bloomfield at the request of his daughter, read it aloud;—while Sherwood secretly prayed that the trial moment had arrived.

"Yes, my father," said Robert, "since a rifle saved the life of my sister, a rifle shall always be found to support it. Mr. Lovel prides himself much on his close shooting, but to-morrow will prove how just are his boasts."

Eliza had gazed on Sherwood with emotions she had never before experienced for any one; she was only in her sixteenth year, and the child of innocence, and having spent most of her life at her father's and in some degree retired from what is called the fashionable world, the passion of love, till her acquaintance with young Sherwood, had been an exile from her mind. Soon after they had discoursed on the subject of Lovel's letter, the night growing old, the family with their guests retired to rest.

In the morning the marksmen mounted their horses and set out for the scene of the day. As they rode along, almost every one they saw was going in the same pleasure; and each keen-eyed rifleman bore in his visage all that ardor so much remarked in the high blood race horse, as he stamps the trembling earth with impatience. Arriving near a grove of pines by the way-side, Robert perceived a large bird cut the air and perch on a branching limb near the top of a lofty tree. He requested his friend would show a specimen of his good shooting; to which Sherwood replied in these terms:

"That is a hawk of the largest kind—his shyness causes him to perch on the tallest tree he can find. I will shoot—and if, when he falls, you do not see his head divided, I forfeit all claims to a license at the shooting match."

The polished rifle was laid on the manly cheek of the noble youth, and touching the hair-trigger with the ease of a zephyr the huge monarch of the feathered tribe was seen to reel amidst the branches—while the delighted Robert and his father exclaimed, 'He comes! he comes!' with a hollow crash weltered on the ground. Half of the head was gone; at which the old gentleman exclaimed: 'So may our marksmen divide the heads of tyrants!' They proceeded, and soon came in sight of 'Hunter's field,' where the whole strength of the country for miles around seemed collected. Here were to be seen leather jackets and hunting shirts—men that had never in their lives worn a shoe except that of a deer skin—and men that had never seen a city—smoky hunters who could speak no other tongue than that of the Chickasaw or Cherokee Indians—boys of twelve years raging with desire—and dandies who had never aimed at any thing larger than a snipe. The shooting had commenced, and Mr. Bloomfield soon perceived Lovel among the crowd. He had shot several times, but always had the ill-luck to be surpassed. Most of the noted shots had appeared on the ground but none had the expertness to decide the fate of the day. Sherwood fired, and pierced the mark in the centre. All eyes were on him and wondering at such skill in young a man; several marks of unusual description were held for him, all of which he made his balls meet in the greatest nicety. The beef was proclaimed his—and with three cheers he was hailed chief of the marksmen. Lovel stood abashed, and stung to the quick; vexed, and thinking there yet might be fortune in a chance shot, he proposed that he and Sherwood should have a trial—and that the latter should name the object to be fired at. Mr. Bloomfield and Robert were all anxiety, for they had conceived an exalted idea of the young marksman, and in reality wished he might gain the affection of Eliza and become her husband. Lovel was aware that he could please the father in many ways; but he also knew that old gentleman had discovered his weak side, which was that propensity, in many persons so common, of trying to appear far greater in many things than he really was. This, Mr. Bloomfield could never bear—and on that account did not think he would make as good a husband as the young female merited. Lovel, calling the father aside, said to him:

"You know my wealth, my respectability, my good education and disposition—and you must be conscious that you could not on any of those important points, refuse Eliza to me. You wish that I should let no one excel me in shooting—and this is the reason you have declared no man shall have your daughter that is not an adept in the art. I will now try with Mr. Sherwood; and request you to say if he who shoots best shall have the lovely girl."

Mr. Bloomfield made no hesitation to comply with his request, and the news was conveyed to Sherwood with the most heartfelt joy. Sherwood proposed a lighted candle, to be snuffed at eighty paces—which the trembling Lovel, never thinking how difficult a shot he would have to make, turned pale at hearing. He was requested to shoot first, and broke the candle two inches below the blaze, which falling was extinguished. It was again adjusted with a long blaze. Sherwood fired, and neatly snuffed it, as if by a fairy. Lovel fainted in the arms of an attendant, who instantly bore him from the ground. Shout succeeded shout, and the day was spent in the greatest carousal. It was concluded between the parents, that young Sherwood should have Eliza at any time he wished to marry, and henceforth should be beloved as one of the family, and Mr. Bloomfield concluded by saying:

"My dear Charles, may kind Heaven grant Eliza and you to shed your mutual light upon each other—and may you improve, without putting out so gentle a light, that she may shine the glory of your soul and the admiration of the world!"

"Remember," said Robert, "and don't let love so unnerve your arm, as to abandon shooting, when you bear it in mind that the lovely prize was gained by that most useful of all weapons in a new country—an American rifle."

TWO HEADS BETTER THAN ONE.

Adrian had frequently heard his father say that children have but little knowledge with respect to what is most proper for them; and that the greatest proof they could give of their wisdom, would be in following the advice of people who have more age and experience than themselves. But this was a kind of doctrine Adrian did not understand, or at least would not, and therefore it is no wonder that he forgot it.

This wise and good father had allotted him and his brother Arthur a convenient piece of ground, in order that each might be possessed of a little garden, and display his knowledge and industry in the cultivation of it. They had also leave to sow whatever seeds they should think proper, and to transplant any tree they liked out of their father's garden into their own.

Arthur remembered those words of his father, which his brother Adrian had forgotten, and therefore he went to consult their gardener, Rufus. "Pray tell me," said he, "what is now in season to sow in my garden, and in what manner am I to set about my business?"

The gardener hereupon gave him several roots and seeds, such as were most proper for the season. Arthur instantly ran, and put them into the ground, and Rufus very kindly, not only assisted him in the work, but made him acquainted with many things very necessary to be known.

Adrian, on the other hand, shrugged up his shoulders at his brother's industry, thinking he was taking much more pains than was necessary. Rufus, not knowing his disposition, offered him likewise his assistance and instruction; but he refused it in a manner that clearly discovered his vanity and ignorance. He went into his father's garden, and took from thence a quantity of flowers, which he immediately transplanted into his own. The gardener took no notice of him, but left him to do as he pleased.

When Adrian visited his garden, the next morning, all the flowers which he had planted hung their heads as so many mourners, and, as he plainly saw, were in a dying state. He replaced them with others from his father's garden; but on visiting them the next morning, he found them perishing like the former.

This was a matter of great vexation to Adrian, who consequently soon became disgusted with this kind of business, and gave it up as an unprofitable gain. Hence his piece of ground soon became a wilderness of weeds and thistles.

As he was looking into his brother's garden, about the middle of summer, he saw something of a red color hanging near the ground, which, on examination, he found to be strawberries, of a delicious flavor. "Ah!" said he, "I should have planted strawberries in my garden."

Some time afterward, as he was walking again in his brother's garden he saw little berries, of a milk-white color, which hung down in clusters from the branches of a bush. Upon examination he found they were currants, which even the sight of was a feast. "Ah!" said he, "I should have planted currants in my garden."

The gardener then observed to him that it was his own fault that his garden was not as productive as his brother's. "Never, for the future," said Rufus, "despise the instruction and assistance of any one, since you will find, by experience, that two heads are better than one."

SCHOOL GOVERNMENT.

We select the following appropriate remarks from a Lecture on the "First Principles of School Government," by Rev. J. P. Cowles of Ipswich, published in the "Practical Educator and Journal of Health," a work devoted to the education of the mind and health of the body.

"There must, then, be in each school one head, invested with rightful and supreme authority to govern it, for its own good."

Obedience to the authority of this one head must be secured. Not eye-service, rendered from mere fear, which, alone, is base, whatever it may be, when linked and blended with love; not weak yieldingness, which would give up every thing to every body, on asking; not self-complaisance, which, even in obeying, seems to say, "I do it to please myself, and not you," thus spoiling the whole; but a cheerful and affectionate compliance of the pupils with the teacher's will, beginning in principle, grown into habit, and even far more delightful to the subject to feel and render, than to the spectator to behold;—though, to him, it be infinitely more fragrant than Sabaean odors to the sense. This is not a hard doctrine. None is,—none can be—milder, as none can be more important. No cultivation can exterminate the thorns and briars which forever grow in the path of the froward. No instruction, no practice, no power, no time, no eternity, can make it easy, can make it other than folly and woe, resist just authority; while all kinds of real good, now and ever, by a sure and unfailing tenure, belong to the obedient.

There can be no right or useful character, without submission to rightful authority. What is all knowledge and skill, what are polished manners, what are all personal accomplishments;—what is eloquence, what is genius even, if linked with an obstinate and universal frowardness of temper, contrary to all law and authority, reckless of duty, hateful to God? A "meek and quiet spirit" is indeed above all price. No lawful care, no just efforts to secure it, can be deemed extravagant. Once secured, it is easily made habitual; and it is among the other virtues as the sun in the heavens, as the heart in the animal frame.

It is not for his own sake, but for the pupil's, that the teacher should endeavor to secure the spirit, and form the habit in question. It is true, that as disobedience is the greatest of all trials to him, as a man, and the greatest of all hindrances to his labors, he may, and must, feel the wound it inflicts on him; but infinitely greater interests are at stake. There are characters before him, that must be changed, and soon changed, or the consequences must naturally be fatal for all worlds, under all just and wise government. All beauty of character, all the happiness of existence are in peril, and the teacher is called to the rescue. Can there be any doubt what he should do, and that he should do it quickly and thoroughly? There is for him no alternative. He may not whine about the cost to his feeling, much less the cost to his reputation, if he enforces obedience. He has consented to put himself where it is his first duty to govern; and he must take up his cross. It may be to him a task; it cannot but be a heavy responsibility; but what then? Shall a task not be done, because it is hard? Whoever would escape heavy responsibilities, must slip ignominiously back into his native nothingness. Forward, there is nothing but responsibility. Nor is there any greater folly than to think that prompt and efficient measures are the most difficult, and will not bear to be executed. Insubordination, let alone, grows like Jonah's gourd. While we linger, and cry peace, and soft measures, it mounts above our head, and rules the hour. If it were to our shame and confusion of face alone, that might be but small loss; but every thing goes to wreck and ruin, when the spirit of insubordination bears sway. It is not the school only; it is all life; it is the entire interest of the deluded ones through all coming duration, and that of millions more, it may be, bound up with theirs, that is concerned. If a teacher would be faithful, then, he cannot choose but to set out with the purpose of securing at all events the spirit and habit of cheerful and affectionate obedience. This is the first thing in parental government. It is the first thing in the government of God. The laws of Nature are His, and He teaches us submission to them every day. With line upon line, and precept upon precept, He teaches us the path of natural prudence; and for penalties to enforce obedience, stops at no weak measures. It is a narrow path which we have to tread under this dispensation of Nature, with much to shun on the right hand, and on the left, and heavy loss often befalling even the careless wanderer. Why, then, should false delicacy and cautiousness of exercising authority make us so lax in government, that it shall offer no longer the faintest image of the Divine and all-Perfect.

That government is weak, whose whole strength consists in the love of its subjects; and that government is equally weak, whose whole strength lies in their fear. It is not love only that makes the willing feet move in cheerful obedience. No more can fear, alone, do it. Despotisms are as feeble as that fond and foolish type of nursery-government, whose maximum of discipline is the tender inquiry, "why do ye so?" Love and fear must go together, in that harmonious union ordained from the beginning, and perfectly exemplified in the natural and moral system under which we live. Goodness and severity are mingled in all the ways of God towards us. Who is so unwise as ever to think that either can be dispensed with? or who can say which exceeds, the attractiveness of the one, or the dreadfulness of the other? It is vain to talk of a government all mercy. The thing cannot be. It were as easy to pick up spilt water with the fingers, as to gather together the scattered remnants of an authority that has been completely melted away under the laxative principle of mere mercy. Authority must have body and substance; it must make itself respected and feared; it must have the power and the will to punish, if necessary, in order that the cases of necessity may be few and far between.

BE ECONOMICAL. No matter if your parents are worth millions; it is not the less proper that you should understand the value of money, and the honest, honorable means of acquiring it. What multitudes of young men, particularly in our cities, make shipwreck of reputation and health, by neglect of this maxim. They are aware that their parents obtained their wealth by habits of industry, but they are ashamed of the name. They forget that wealth in this country passes rapidly from one to another, and that he who is rich to-day may be poor to-morrow; or that he who relies on wealth amassed by his father, may end his days in a pauper house. It is for the young man to say, whether by industry and economy, he will secure competence and respectability; or, by idleness, become a worthless beggar, and a sponging outcast.

CURIOSITIES. It would be a curiosity for a woman to return from church without saying a word about the dresses of her neighbors. It would be a curiosity to see a woman in the street who was not able to follow the fashions of the day. It would be a curiosity for a woman to sit in the back room on a Sabbath, when people were passing by the front windows going to church. It would be a curiosity for a woman not to get angry, if you didn't compliment her new bonnet and new dress.

WEALTHY WRETCHES. The People's Journal states, upon the authority of the Roman Catholic Curate of Mallow, in Cork, (Ireland,) that there is a "gentleman" (?) in his district who has a pack of fourteen greyhounds—each is allowed a pint of new milk every day, and a competent quantity of oatmeal, and the milk would be given in greater abundance were it not for its fattening qualities. The owner has lately come in possession of an unnumbered property estimated at from ten thousand to twelve thousand pounds per year. There is at his gate a hamlet containing a pauper population of at least two hundred souls, and those dogs consumed more milk during the past winter than that number of human beings! As for oatmeal, it is an article of diet they never indulge in.

This wretch, who can feed his dogs to the full, when his fellow men are starving, was written to by the Relief Committee, but vouchsafed no reply. It is also said that others like him, refused to give the smallest contribution. Another case is mentioned of a "gentleman" who keeps a pack of hounds, and adds to their food fresh beef or mutton before each hunting meeting. Let it be tested whether such hard-hearted wretches can hold up their heads beneath the execrations of a world.

ACQUIRE INFORMATION. The amount of valuable information, on all kinds of subjects, with which many individuals have in their power to store their minds, and which by incidental circumstances may be brought to bear on some useful object, merely by attending to things apparently trifling—by considering no source of information too low, provided it be an honorable one—is altogether astonishing. The time that some people are consuming in indolence, or with a total disregard to the minutia of general occupation, others who are aware of the value of knowledge, are assiduously picking it up wherever it may be found, and carefully applying it wherever it is useful. By this means a man becomes impregnable on all points; he obtains the reputation of a man of intelligence, which leads him to offices of distinction and respectability in the community.

BENEFIT OF ADVERTISING. By advertising, business men give the strongest evidence that they are desirous of acquiring and retaining custom, and are anxious to do every thing requisite on their part to deserve it. They show also, that they are not only disposed to live themselves but are willing to let others live, and such a disposition merits and deserves encouragement. The miser and the niggard who grudges a penny for advertising, is cherishing a disposition which leads men to take advantage of the opportunities afforded in trade to deceive and defraud their customers. Money may be saved by purchasing, as far as practicable, of those who invite customers through the ordinary channels.

DISGUISE OF SEX. There died at Brussels recently, a person who had long been in the employ of the Minister of France, known by the name of Thomas de Croismare, and sixty-eight years old at the time of decease. At the washing of the body previous to interment, it was discovered to be that of a female. Croismare was a lieutenant at the battle of Moskowa, and was wounded at the battle of Waterloo in the shoulder and mouth. After giving up her commission she entered into civil life, held an office in the custom house, and was book-keeper to two different merchants. In the service of the minister of France, subsequently, she had risen to a post of considerable trust.

In social life she was esteemed for her talents in poetry and music, playing admirably on the violoncello, and giving lessons gratuitously to several friends. It was thought to be a nervous peculiarity that she was uneasy and annoyed if any one fixed his eyes on her very attentively, and her walk was thought to be rather affectedly cavalier. Thomas de Croismare was particularly gallant in attentions to women, and at one time made proposition of marriage to a young lady of Brussels, who fortunately declined the proffered hand.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JULY 3, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

THE CELEBRATION. Arrangements are being made in this town for the celebration of our National Independence, by the Mt. Wollaston and other Lodges of Odd Fellows with citizens generally, a general invitation having been given. A Banner will be presented to the Mt. Wollaston Lodge by the ladies of this place, previous to the services in the meeting-house. We notice that ladies are to be admitted to the dinner—an arrangement which will add much to the festivities of the day. The Committee of Arrangements will doubtless spare no pains to make every thing satisfactory to the company. The following programme of the procession and services has been handed us by the Chief Marshal, Mr. Henry Souther:

The procession will be formed at half past nine o'clock A. M., at or near the Lodge Rooms, in Washington Street.

ORDER OF PROCESSION.

Aid. Chief Marshal. Aid.
Band.
Members of Encampments.
Officers of Lodges, two abreast.
President of the Day and the Orator.
Chaplain and Poet.
The Clergy.
Invited Guests.
Lodges of Neighboring Towns.
Mt. Wollaston Lodge.
Citizens.

The Banner will be presented from the steps of the Stone Temple at ten o'clock.
Galleries reserved for the Ladies, will be opened at ten o'clock. The body of the Meeting-house will not be opened until the procession arrives.

ORDER OF SERVICES IN THE CHURCH.

1. Voluntary, by the Choir.
2. Declaration of Independence.
3. Prayer, by the Chaplain.
4. Singing.
5. Oration, by William E. Parmenter, Esq.
6. Music, by the Band.
7. Poem.
8. Voluntary, by the Choir.
9. Benediction.

A Procession will be formed immediately after the services in the Church, and proceed to the dinner tables in the Town Hall.

Tickets to the dinner may be had at the bar of the Hancock House, at Gill's Bookstore, and at the stores of E. Packard and Abercrombie & Bent.

MILITARY VISIT. On Tuesday last, the City Greys of Boston, accompanied by an excellent band of music, visited this town and partook of a late dinner at the Hancock House. It is represented to have been in the landlord's usual style, composed of the best and choicest varieties of the market, and in great abundance. They came here in citizens' dress, having been thoroughly drenched with rain while performing escort duty for the reception of the President. In the evening the company visited, for a few minutes before they departed, Col. Dimmock, a past commander of the corps, and saluted him.

GOODS RECOVERED. A part of the goods stolen from the store of E. Packard, in this town, a week since—about two hundred dollars in value—have been found at the store and dwelling-house of a person named O'Brien, at South Boston. The rogue escaped while in the act of removing some of the property. Other stolen goods were recovered and part of them recognized.

VISIT OF THE PRESIDENT. The President of the United States arrived in Boston on Tuesday last, he was received in great style, although the display was not so great on account of the rain. He also visited Charleston and Lowell, and then went to New Hampshire and will afterwards go to Maine, from whence he will proceed to Washington. At every place he has been received in a very cordial manner, and with great pomp and parade.

CARAVAN. One of the most extensive and well conducted menageries in the United States will visit this town on the 20th instant, as will be seen by their advertisement. They will probably exhibit on the Hancock Lot.

"FLORA'S FESTIVAL." A Juvenile Oratorio is announced [see advertisement] to be performed in this town on Thursday evening next, under the direction of Mr. D. F. Felt. It has been very successfully performed, we learn, in various places, and gentlemen who were present at the entertainment at South Weymouth last week, say it afforded the highest gratification to all present. All for a nippence too.

ICE CREAM. This cooling and delicious luxury may be obtained every evening at the Palo Alto Restorator, in this town, the proprietor of which manifests a desire to serve his patrons worthy of success.

MEXICO. The news from this unfortunate Republic is not of much interest. No more battles have been fought, but a few skirmishes have taken place with guerrilla parties. The rumors, that proposals of peace had been offered by the Mexicans as well as the advance of Gen. Scott upon the Capital, have not been confirmed. The Americans are now waiting for reinforcements, after which some decisive steps will be taken. The political affairs of Mexico are in a gloomy state.

The King of Prussia has granted a constitution to his subjects, with the right of representation.

The Mississippi steam frigate cost five hundred and twenty thousand dollars; the Missouri, built at New York, five hundred and fifty thousand dollars; and the new steamer Washington, just started on her European voyage, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The tonnage of these vessels is about the same.

A person residing in England, placed an effigy in his garden to frighten the birds, but soon one of the family, on examining the scarecrow, found in one of the pockets a bird's nest, ready for the reception of eggs.

Seven hundred millions barrels of breadstuffs have been sent from this country to Europe the past year.

The House of Representatives of New Hampshire, by a vote of one hundred and forty nine to one hundred and seven, have conferred upon Thomas W. Dorr of Rhode Island, the privileges of a citizenship.

It is a fact, says the Boston Transcript, worthy of note, that the three Presidents who have visited Boston, during the last fourteen years, have been greeted with showers of rain on their entrance into town, viz: Gen. Jackson on Friday, June 21st, 1833; Mr. Tyler, on Friday, June 16th, 1843; and Mr. Polk, on Tuesday, June 29th, 1847.

James W. Hale, the Independent Postmaster General, announces that he will carry letters for three cents, between Boston and New York.

The horse of Capt. Lincoln, who fell at Buena Vista, is en route to Worcester, (Mass.) having been purchased for his father, Ex-Gov. Lincoln.

A new steamboat is building in New York to be called the 'Plymouth Rock,' is intended for the Fall River line, and will be constructed after the same design as the Bay State.

The County Commissioners of Hampden County have granted licenses very generally to those who have applied for them.

The importation of corn into France from the 1st of July, 1846, to the 18th of May, 1847, of 7,308,306 hectolives—equal to rather more than twenty millions of bushels.

Upwards of five thousand dollars worth of Strawberries and Milk were brought into New York city by the Erie Rail Road one day last week, reckoning at four cents per basket and quart.

A man has been arrested at New Orleans, charged with killing his own mother.

Not far from five millions of dollars are yearly earned in Massachusetts by females employed in the various factories and manufactories of straw, hats, stocks, etc. About forty thousand females are thus annually employed.

The city of New York actually pays more for sweeping her streets annually, than Connecticut does for the support of her State Government, the amount being two hundred thousand dollars.

In Paris, lately, a couple of rival vegetable vendors, male and female, got into a quarrel, and undertook to outdo each other. The man bawled, the woman yelled, the man whooped, the woman screamed, the man screamed, the woman shrieked: at length the man won the victory by a mighty effort which burst his lungs, and he fell dead.

A young lady of Princeton, (N. J.) of highly respectable connections, has been sued for elopement by a young gentleman, who is there at College.

Several floor speculators in New York have failed in consequence of the great decline in prices.

The catechism used in the Government schools in Austrian Italy, teaches that deserters from the army will be punished in the next world with eternal damnation.

Thirty nine years ago, only one house, and that a log one, occupied the present site of the city of Rochester, (N. Y.) the present population of which is about twenty seven thousand.

The beautiful grounds and mansion at Borden-town, (N. J.) belonging to the late Joseph Napoleon Bonaparte, ex-king of Spain, has been sold at auction for the sum of thirty thousand five hundred dollars. It is said that the buildings alone cost over sixty thousand dollars.

It is stated in an Illinois journal, that the famous Mormon Temple at Nauvoo, has been sold for a Catholic church at the large price of seventy five thousand dollars.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

Three Companies of United States soldiers left Charleston, (S. C.) on the 19th ult. for Vera Cruz.

A London church-builder provides wood and iron churches for transportation to the colonies. He offers a church, with stained-glass windows, bell, etc., capable of seating eight hundred persons, for five hundred guineas. But if you cannot afford to buy a church, he will lend you one 'on hire.'

A steam engine of ten horse power is in constant operation in New York city, manufacturing ice cream.

When you see a young lady looking at you, do not decide that she has fallen in love with you. Perhaps she discovers a rum blossom on the end of your nose, and thinks you ought to sign the pledge.

A vessel, which has arrived in London from Calcutta, has brought fifty thousand buffalo hams.

There have arrived at the Quarantine Ground, Staten Island, (N. Y.) between the 2d of April and 20th of June, inclusive, a period of eighty five days, seventy five thousand emigrants, by far the largest portion of which are Germans, having the means and intention of moving to the 'Far West,' and very little sickness amongst them.

NOTICES.

Mr. Mandeville, who in the providence of God is deprived of sight, and who has been lecturing with acceptance in our towns and cities, will lecture on SUNDAY (to-morrow) EVENING, July 4th, in Rev. Mr. Allen's church, commencing at eight o'clock, on the nature and claims of sacred music as connected with divine worship.

Mr. M. will sing some appropriate pieces, and a collection will be taken at the close.

Rev. J. Blackmar will deliver a Temperance lecture in the Lyceum Hall in Quincy, TO-MORROW (Sunday) AFTERNOON, commencing at half past five o'clock.

The public are invited to attend.

JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT. The virtues of this efficacious and cheap medicine for the cure of Consumption and other diseases cannot be too well known. Very many lives have been saved by it.—New York Morning Atlas.

Sold at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE.

The Washington Total Abstinence Society of Norfolk County will hold their annual meeting at Harrison Grove, in Dedham, on MONDAY, the 5th day of July.

CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA.—No remedy has ever been found to remove the above diseases so promptly and effectually as Jayne's Expectorant. It cleanses the lungs from all irritating matters, while at the same time it heals and invigorates them. Prepared only at No. 8, South Third Street, Philadelphia.

Champanoing.

Champanoing is a great luxury, and those ladies who have not yet experienced it should go at once and have it done. Ambush, at his rooms in Southern Building, is prepared to operate in a manner to delight and please, and his charges are very moderate. Ladies call and see him, as he is always ready and willing to wait on you.

VALUABLE MEDICINE.

We do not wish to commend one good medicine at the expense of another, but we cannot forbear to notice the valuable properties possessed by the 'Carmine Balsam,' and the 'Expectorant,' prepared by Dr. Jayne, of South Third Street in this city. We have forborne to give evidence until after a thorough trial in our own family. They are invaluable in a family of children.—Philadelphia Saturday Courier.

Real Estate for Sale.

A LARGE two story House, situated on the Weymouth Turnpike, formerly occupied by Thomas G. Sylvester, nearly opposite the Episcopal Church, and about four minutes walk from the Old Colony Railroad Depot. The House contains six lower rooms and five chambers, is very convenient for two families; also, two Wood Sheds, and a large and commodious Shoe-makers Shop. The whole has been thoroughly repaired and painted in the best manner. There are two Gardens and several choice and valuable Fruit Trees. The Land is seven rods and a half long on the Turnpike, and the whole is a pleasant situation. It offers a rare opportunity for the man of leisure or the mechanic to make a profitable investment.

If the above Estate is not sold at private sale before the NINETEENTH of July, at three o'clock P. M., it will then be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, without reserve.

For further information, apply near the premises to JOHN NEWCOMB, or to THOMPSON BAXTER, Auctioneer.

UNRIVALLED AND LONG ESTABLISHED

MENAGERIE

RECENTLY Fitted and Embellished with entirely New Decorations, Trappings, Equipage, &c. for 1847—containing an extensive and varied collection of the most rare and interesting productions of Nature, which afford to all an ample source for study and reflection on the science of Natural History.

This Menagerie, on entering each Town or Village, forms a most imposing Train or Procession, preceded by a Gorgeous

ROMAN CHARIOT,

LITERALLY COVERED WITH GOLD.

The splendor and magnificence of this Gorgeous and Colossal Carriage baffles description. Whoever has read of the funeral Chariot of Alexander, or the Triumphal Car of Nero, may form some conception of the grandeur of this superlatively beautiful vehicle, which was taken from an antique model recently exhibited in London. It has required the constant labor of twenty men for nine months to complete it, at an expense of more than Five Thousand Dollars!

The length of Chariot, 30 feet.

Height to summit of Canopy, 20 "

The weight in full, 8000 lbs.

The Chariot will be followed by THIRTY CARRIAGES, containing the VARIOUS ANIMALS IN THIS IMMENSE EXHIBITION, drawn by ONE HUNDRED HORSES!

The Exhibition of this Menagerie is rendered intensely interesting by the Wonderful and unparalleled Performance of

M. E. PIERCE,

The great Napoleon of the age, with

LIONS, TIGERS, & LEOPARDS.

This great Artist will fondle, caress, and render himself, apparently, as one of these Animals in their own Den. After this he assumes command, orders each to their respective departments, and finally dignifies himself by

DRIVING AN AFRICAN LION IN HARNESS!

The animals in this collection are confidently offered for public inspection, as being the choicest and most perfect specimens ever exhibited. The majority of them have been imported during the last two years, without regard to price, and they form not only the BEST but the LARGEST COLLECTION ever presented to the public.

Tuesday, July 20th, 1847.

The PROCESSION will enter Town about ten o'clock in the morning.

Admission only 25 cents—children under 10 years, 12 1-2 cents. Doors open from 1 to 4 P. M.

The above will exhibit at South Bridgewater on SATURDAY, July 17th, and Randolph on MONDAY, July 19th.

Quincy, July 3.

MANHOOD.

CAUSES of its Premature Decline, with directions for its Perfect Restoration. Addressed to those suffering from the destructive effects of Excessive Indulgence, Solitary Habits, etc. By L. Deslandes, M. D. Translated from the French, with many additions; By an American Physician. Twenty-seventh edition. 252 pp. 16 mo.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

"Physicians of extensive observations, and superintendents of establishments for the moral management of Lunatics, concur in assuring us that the canker worm of death is gnawing at the vitals of many youths of all ages, in all countries, as, portrayed by the author. If it were once freely circulated, the tendency would be beneficial, because like an alarm gun, it would give warning in season to avert threatened danger. It might thus drive away a fiend that would ruin soul and body at the same time and blight the dawn of life before the individual is conscious of his duty to himself, to society, or to his Maker.—Boston Medical and Surgical Journal.

"I consider Deslandes' book, as decidedly the best treatise extant in the French or English Language. The subject is extremely important, and one too much overlooked by our profession generally, and the evils of the vice, on which your publication treats are not appreciated by the community, although the cases presented in your book are frightful. Yet judging from many patients who have been under treatment they have not been overdrawn."—A. Sidney Doane, M. D. New York.

"The work of Deslandes, by pointing out the diseases resulting from excesses, the evils of which are manifest in every insane asylum, no less than in the shattered constitution of those indulging, will do much to prevent the vice, which by its prevalence among the young has so much influence on the present as on the future well being of the many."—Winslow Lewis, Jr., M. D., Boston.

"This vice is doubtless very much more common in this country than is generally supposed, or than most medical men are ready to believe; and it is a frightful source of ill health and disease with the young. I have no doubt; I hope therefore it will go into extensive circulation. The views of the writer are excellent on this subject."—Dr. S. B. Woodward, Superintendent of the Insane Hospital at Worcester.

"The present work abounds in well authenticated cases going fully to substantiate the position taken by the author, and cannot be read without producing a deep conviction that something ought to be done to check this deplorable evil."—Zion's Herald.

"The volume as now published will prove eminently useful, and deserving the consideration of all to whom is committed the responsible trust of moral and physical education."—John W. Francis, M. D., New York.

"We recommend the work, entitled Manhood, etc. to the careful perusal of persons of all classes. The moral as well as the physical diseases sure to result from such perusal will be most readily recognized and felt by those who stand most in need of them."—Phoenix Journal.

"We do not think we go too far in saying that society is deeply indebted to the author for producing so useful, so much wanted, so valuable, and so truly moral a book."—Conservative Journal.

"The work entitled Manhood, is one of the few books now coming before the public on such a subject which can lay claim to the character of being strictly professional, at the same time that it is fully intelligible to all who read it. The moral and medical properties given in it render it invaluable."—Maguet.

POETRY.

ODE TO ANDREW JACKSON.

Favorite of fortune and of fame,
First of thy country, song of mine
Can add no lustre to a name,
Honored and blest as thine;
A nation sounds thy praise!
Wherever float the stripes and stars,
Borne by her bold, adventurous tars,
Far as the sun eyed eagle soars,
Her roving sons, on distant shores,
Their grateful voices raise:
For thou hast been, as thou shalt be,
On every land and every sea,
The pride and glory of the free.

Warrior and Statesman of the age!
Thy deeds, on history's faithful page,
Shall brighten with the lapse of time;
Thy life, by sober judgment viewed,
Shall furnish for the wise and good,
A moral, simple and sublime.
The orphan boy, of humble birth,
Spurning with scorn his country's foe,
And mingling in the bloody fight,
With freedom's fire and freedom's might,
To strike the vengeful blow;
Advancing with increasing worth,
Through years of service and of toil,
In battle camp, and council hall,
Alike pre-eminent in all,
Above the proudest Lords of earth,
Who riot on its spoil.

Enthroned upon thy country's love,
The servant of thy sovereign will,
Nor gold, nor taunts, nor threats could move
The high and stern resolve, to prove True to her interest still.

Thy days of fiery trial past,
The voice of calumny at last,
Is silent as the grave,
And, spite of party zeal and strife,
The bane and curse of social life,
United hearts and tongues shall vie,
To shout the patriotic cry,
Jackson, the generous and the brave!

And when the humble bard is laid,
By stranger hands, as soon he must,
Beneath some cool and quiet shade,
To slumber with his mother dust,
Her fam'less, wayward son;
Thy country's heroes, yet unborn,
Shall rank thee as the worthiest one,
On Freedom's joys, and natal morn,
To share their memories with him,
Whose glory none can ever dim,
Whose fame shall live till time shall cease,
The "first in war, the first in peace,"
The peerless Washington!

Let gouts, and stone, and spleen's day,
Conspire to show me fouler play;
Than e'er did fox or goose or gander;
Let painsumatic and the itch
Deform my skin, my muscles twitch,
But save me from the tongue of slander.

Let ghostly visions hunt my sleep,
And drive me headlong down the steep,
Or bare through nettles make me wander:
Let devils blue, and gray, and black,
Ride me and lash my reeking back,
But spare me from the tongue of slander.

Let doctors vex me with their skill,
And freely use their art—to kill;
I'll not refuse to be trepanned, or
With powders, pills or plaster plied, Pukes, patches, poultices beside,
If plagued with the disease of slander.

This is the mildew of the soul,
Forever marring joy's control—
This is the misbegotten pander,
Who raises to our forced embrace Foul shame and infamous disgrace,
This is the fiendish work of slander.

It is the solemn knell of all
Our noblest hopes;—it is the call Bidding the desperate heart to wander
O'er wastes which it hath never known,
Until its all of life had flown
At the invidious touch of slander.

ANECDOTES.

* Run and get me an armful of wood," said a woman to her husband one rainy day, "as you are wet and I am dry." "The same plea was used for a dozen more errands. At last it was: "Get me a bucket of water for you are wet and I am dry." "The bucket of water was brought and thrown over her, the husband exclaiming, "Now do your share for you are wet too."

A man at breakfast lately, sat a long time after the others were done. "You are a great while at breakfast," said his impatient friend. "You don't expect me to eat all that beef steak in a moment?" was the reply.

A well dressed and genteel-looking person, who was curious to see the Giraffe, on exhibition at New Orleans, stepped up to the "man who" receives the money, with: "Is the Giraffe to be seen here?" "Yes sir," "I want to see him." "Very well, sir." "It is fifty cents, isn't it?" "One dollar, sir. Fifty cents for seats." "Well, I'm a servant." "You a servant?" "Yes, sir." "The d—l! Whose?" "Yours, sir—your humble servant." "Walk in and take a seat. The joke is worth the price of admission."

A schoolmaster who was as fond of his grog as the use of his gloves, was asked the difference between gravity and gravitation; "When I've drunk five glasses of grog," replied the pedagogue, "my gravity vanishes, and my gravitation begins to operate."

"You look like death on a pale horse," said a gentleman to a toper, who was pale and emaciated. "I don't know anything about that," said the toper, "but I am death on pale brandy!"

"To be kissed to death by a pretty girl, is said to be a capital punishment."

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to this community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, or to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality, at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULATING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading of a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c.

To all we say, that we are a home manufacture, and a patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign.

MISCELLANY.

WHAT A PAIR OF ANDIRONS COST.

'Peter,' said my uncle, knocking the ashes from his pipe, and laying it on the corner of the mantelpiece, and then fixing his eyes on the andirons, 'Peter, those andirons cost me one thousand dollars!'

'Dear me!' exclaimed my aunt.

'Oh, father!' cried the girls.

'Impossible!' said I.

'True, every word true. One thousand did I say?—yes—two thousand—full two thousand dollars.'

'Well, well,' said my aunt, folding up her knitting for the night, 'I should like to know what you are talking about.'

My uncle bent forward and planted his hands firmly on his parted knees, and with a deliberate air, which showed no doubt of his being able to prove his assertion he began:

'Well, you see, a good many years ago, we had a pair of common old andirons. Your cousin Letty says one day, 'father, don't you think those old andirons are getting too shabby?' Shabby or not, I thought they would hold the wood up as nicely as if they were made of gold. So I paid no attention to Letty. I was afraid she was growing proud. Soon after that, Peter,' continued my uncle, 'your aunt took it up—'

'There it goes,' interrupted my aunt, 'you can't get along without dragging me in.'

'Your aunt took it up, Peter, and she said "our neighbors could afford brass andirons, and were no better off than we were." And she said "Letty and her sister Jane were getting old enough to see company, and the stinky looking old andirons might hurt their market." I knew that women will have their own way, and there is no use objecting, and so I got the andirons.

'The price of them was four dollars and a half—'

'Ah that's more like it,' cried my aunt; 'I thought you said two thousand dollars.'

'My dear, I wish you would not interrupt me. Four and a half. Well the first night after we got them, as we all sat by the warm fire talking over the matter, Letty called my attention to the hearth, the stones of which were cracked and uneven. The hearth was entirely out of keeping with the new andirons, and I thought I might as well have it replaced first as last. The next day a mason was sent for to examine it. He came in my absence, and when I returned home, your aunt and cousins all beset me at once, to have a marble slab. The mason had convinced them the hearth would not look decent without a marble slab, and they put their heads together.'

'La me!' exclaimed my aunt, 'there was no putting heads together about it. The hearth was a real old worn out thing, not fit for a pigpen.'

'They put their heads together, Peter, as I was saying, and continued till I got a marble hearth, which cost me twenty dollars. Yes, twenty dollars, at least. Then I thought I was done with expense, but I thought wrong. Pretty soon I began to hear sly hints thrown out about the brick work around the fire-place not corresponding with the hearth. I stood out for a month or two against your aunt and the girls, but they at last got the better of me, and I was forced to have marble instead of brick. Then the old wooden mantelpiece was so out of character that it was necessary to have a marble one. The cost of all this was nearly one hundred dollars. And now that the spirit of improvement had got a start, there was no stop-place. The new marble mantle put to shame the old white-washed walls, and they must be painted, of course, and to prepare them for paint, sundry repairs were necessary. While this was going on, your aunt and the girls appeared to be quite satisfied, and when it was done, they had no idea the old parlor could be made to look so spruce. But this was only a short respite. The old rag carpet began to raise a dust, and I found there would be no peace—'

'Now, my dear!' said the old lady, with a pleasing smile, accompanied with a partial rotation of the head—

'Now, father!' exclaimed the girls—

'Till I got a new carpet. That again shamed the old furniture, and it had to be turned out and replaced with new. Now, Peter, count up, my lad—twenty dollars for the hearth and one hundred for the mantelpiece, and thirty for repairs. What does that make?'

'One hundred and fifty, uncle.'

'Well, fifty for paint and paper—'

'Two hundred.'

'Then fifty for a carpet, and one hundred at least for furniture—'

'Three hundred and fifty.'

'Ahem! There's that clock, too, and the blinds—blinds fifty more—'

'Four hundred exactly.'

My aunt and cousins winked at each other.

'Now,' continued my uncle, 'so much for this one room. No sooner was the room finished, than the complaints came from all quarters, about the dining room and entry. Long before this I had surrendered at discretion and handed in my submission. The dining room cost two hundred more. What does that count, Peter?'

'Eight hundred, uncle.'

'Then the chambers—at least four hundred to make them rhyme with the down stairs.'

'Twelve hundred.'

'The outside of the house had to be repaired and painted, of course. Add two hundred for that.'

'Fourteen hundred.'

'Then there must be a piazza in front—that cost two hundred.'

'Sixteen hundred.'

Here aunt began to yawn, Letty to poke the fire, and Jane to twirl over the leaves of a book.

'A new carriage came next, Peter, that cost two hundred dollars.'

'Eighteen hundred dollars.'

'Then there was a lawn to be laid out and neatly fenced—a servant to be hired—parties given occasionally—bonnets and dresses at double the former cost, and a hundred other little expenses in keeping with the new order of things. And all these grew out of those very andirons. Yes, Peter, I was entirely within bounds when I said two thousand dollars.'

The opposition was silenced. My aunt immediately rose and guessed it was bed time. I was left alone with my uncle, who was not inclined to drop the subject. He was a persevering man, and never gave up what he undertook, till he had done the work thoroughly. So he brought out his books and accounts, and set about making an exact estimate of the expenses. He kept me up till after midnight, before he got through. His conclusion was that the pair of andirons cost him twenty four hundred and fifty dollars.

SLANDER.

Slander is one of the many evils which exist in society. Its voice is heard amongst all classes of people, from the king upon his throne, who rules over millions, to the lowly and obscure peasant whose name and jurisdiction extends no farther than his humble village. The power of speech was bestowed upon us by our Creator as a blessing, and there is no pleasure more worthy to be sought than that which is to be found in the society of those who are our friends. If we are so successful as to confide in those by whom our regard is appreciated, and who are worthy of our esteem, we realize much pleasure and satisfaction in the possession of such friends. They will rejoice with us in prosperity, and, if misfortune, an ever unwelcome guest, overtakes us, they will extend the arm of consolation to assuage our grief. If our cup is filled with adversity and sorrow they will support and comfort us until we look forward with hope, and feel that there is no sorrow unmingled with pleasure. But how often are the hopes of many blasted by reposing their thoughts with those who profess to be their friends, but alas! are friends only in name. How often do the erring and unfortunate feel that the language of man has been perverted, and made the means of producing misery. In vain do they look for sympathy. The destructive influence of slander has severed them from their friends, and they feel that those who once cheered them in their hours of prosperity, have forsaken them, and they have reposed on a broken reed. Memory often brings the past before them, and they would fain commune with their former friends, and return to the paths of virtue and peace. But they are aliens and strangers—they have no hope upon the good feelings of those around them—the better purposes of the heart are crushed and they sink deep into the paths of sin and misery. If we could open the volume and scan the language of every individual it would reveal many a tale of sadness—it would tell words which have caused the tear of anguish to flow—it would speak of hopes crushed, expectations defeated and ties forever sundered. All are liable to misuse the faculty of speech, but if each one would premeditate their speeches, endeavor to follow the example of their Savior, the voice of slander would be hushed—its influence would cease to exist. If we have thoughts which concern none but ourselves it is better to conceal them within our own bosoms, than to trust them with those who will convey them to the world on the wings of the wind. If we speak of others we should be careful to utter nothing that will injure them, for words once spoken can never be recalled, and if we inflict a wound time cannot heal it. The person who robs others of their good name takes from them the greatest blessing on earth; deprives them of that which neither riches, nor time can restore, and renders them objects of contempt and pity.—Barnstable Patriot.

HOW SOME MEN SUCCEED.

It is a mystery to some how others succeed. For years they do nothing apparently to support themselves—live in the highest style, and are perfectly independent of every body—that is if we may judge from their conversation. Finally, they go into business, and make a wonderful dash—pretend to have the best stock and will do better than others to their customers. How do they succeed? Simply by their gift of gab—their brow beat propensity, and their lying tongues. When they want money they do not hesitate to ask this one and the other—offering good notes, as 'good as wheat'—that will be paid and no mistake. If the gentleman accosted is determined not to loan money, he is dogged at every corner, and the case is made so plausible, that he finally consents. When such notes are due by the powerful gift of gab, it is renewed by the payment of ten per cent. Men of the stamp we are describing, get money from a dozen concerns in this way, and for years do an extensive business—make a great noise and a great deal of show—till they are obliged to fail—and woe to the poor creditors! If they get five per cent. of their debts, they think themselves lucky.

A man who has a large share of brass and a glib tongue, is furnished by nature with quite a capital to work upon—especially among Americans, who appear to love to be gulled by such characters. We have seen an honest, industrious, unoffending young man refused a favor, when the same has been granted to a worthless fellow, full of words, airs, brass and wind—and which favor was never returned. We have but little patience with such scamps. They are always just jammed in a corner, from which you alone can extricate them. Do your best to relieve them, and they will not appreciate your kindness, but the first opportunity they find to run you down, they will not hesitate to belabor you unmercifully—especially if you happen to be in the same line of business.

Brass, windy words, and a smooth tongue, which is never still, are the secrets of success with not a few. Bear this in mind when you see such characters flourish in pride, full of pomp, and brow beating their fellow creatures; and we charge you to be careful of them. Never trust them. You will rue it if you do; they pretend their business is profitable, that they are successful. It is only a cloak to gull you. An honest man in rags is worth a million of such fellows.

Oh, glorious laughter!—Thou man-loving spirit, that for a time dost take the burden from the weary back; that dost lay salve to the feet, bruise and cut the flints and sharps; that takest blood baking melancholy by the nose, and maketh it grin despite itself; that all the sorrows of the past the doubts of the future, confoundest in the joy of the present; that makest man truly philosophic, conqueror of himself and care!—What was talked of as the golden chain of Jove, was nothing but a succession of laughs, a chromatic scale of merriment that reaches, from earth to Olympus. It is not true Prometheus stole the fire, but the laughter of the Gods, to deify our clay, and in the abundance of our merriment to make us reasonable creatures. Have you ever considered what man would be, destitute of the ennobling faculty of laughter? Laughter is to the face of man what synovia—I think anatomists call it—is to his joints; it oils, lubricates, and makes the human countenance divine. Without it our faces would have been rigid, hyena-like; the inequities of our heart, with no sweet antidote to work upon them, would have made the face of the best among us a horrid, lousy thing, with two sullen, hungry, cruel lights at the top—the forehead would have been gone out of fashion—and a carvenous hole below the nose; Think of a babe without laughter—as it is its first intelligence. The creature shows the divinity of its origin and end by smiling upon us. Yes, smiles are its first talk with the world, smiles the first answer that it understands. And then, as worldly wisdom comes upon the little thing, it crows, it chuckles, it grins, and shakes in its nurse's arms, or, in waggish humor, playing bo-peep with the breast, it reveals its high destiny, declares to him with ears to hear the heirloom of its immortality. Let materialists blaspheme as gingerly and acutely as they will. They must meet confusion in laughter. Man may take a triumph, and stand upon his broad grins; for he looks around the world, and his innermost soul, sweetly tickled with the knowledge, tells him that he of all creatures laughs. Imagine if you can, a laughing fish. Let man, then sound a loud ha! ha! through the universe, and be reverently grateful for the privilege.

When you see flower pots tastefully arranged in the windows of a house, or a selection in the front yard, you may suppose an elegant lady lives there.

SCENERY AT MONTEREY.

Nothing can exceed the loveliness of the place and climate, or the magnificence and grandeur of the scenery that surrounds it. Surrounded on three sides by high and towering mountains, whose tops ascend to the clouds, the great Sierra Madre, or mother of mountains, at the very foot or base of which the city is built, with only the San Juan river intervening, forming a kind of amphitheatre, stretching out on one side into a boundless plain of the greatest fertility, watered by clear and rapid streams. The houses are generally of one story, built of stone, of great thickness, and flat roofs. The best buildings are built in a quadrangle, or three sides of a square, with a court-yard in the centre, ornamented with rare flowers and plants. Some have spacious corridors running across this open space. Each house has a garden adjoining, surrounded by a high stone wall, in which are the greatest abundance of orange, lime, lemon, and banana tree. Bushes of these fruits, of the choicest kind, can be had for the trouble of collecting them. From Saltillo, they bring apples, pears, peaches, and grapes, the most luscious I ever ate. The streets of Monterey are all paved, with sidewalks of flat stone, and are remarkably clean. You would be astonished to see the delinquent of the town, which, with the advantages afforded by the houses, make it a perfect Gibraltar. In addition to a series of forts and fortifications surrounding the whole town, every street was strongly barricaded by a strong wall built across, with a deep ditch in front, and mounted with cannon, so as to sweep its whole length. Every house was loopholed for musketry, and behind every stone wall were posted strong bodies of infantry. The moment a body of our troops made their appearance in them, a storm of cannon, grape, and musket balls, swept every thing down. In addition to these, several howitzers were throwing shells incessantly among them, killing more or less at every explosion. Nothing could exceed the awfulness and grandeur of the scene, as witnessed by me on the 23d. From a slight elevation, a short distance from town, I could witness the advance of our troops by the heavy fire of rifle and musketry from the tops of houses, around which they were gradually approaching the Grand Plaza, and their occasional huzzas as the Mexicans retreated. The incessant roar of cannon, fired from the batteries and barricades, and shells buzzing through the air in every direction, and bursting with loud explosions, made it a most impressive scene, and threw the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca immeasurably into the shade.

BATHING.

Bathing is very conducive to health at all times, but especially in the Spring as in Winter while spontaneous perspiration is less free and frequent than in Summer, the pores of the skin have become much less active. It is very important that these pores should be opened and restored to healthful exertion and operation, and nothing will serve to effect this desirable object better than frequent bathing of the entire body in either warm or cold water. People have no idea of the beneficial results arising from the practice of this simple and cheap preventative to disease, till they have made trial of its efficacy.

In some countries where bathing is almost universal, health also prevails with scarcely an exception. Where bathing is one characteristic of a people, health is almost always another. The experience of many who have made trial of the practice, shows that the habitual use of a common bathing tub, a plenty of water of a little higher temperature than the blood, a flesh brush, and soap, will be found to be the best means of cleansing, opening and aiding the wanted action of the pores of the skin, and thereby equalizing the circulation of the blood and all the functions, relieve the head, quiet the nerves, remove fatigue, aid digestion, and produce an agreeable and pleasant state of both body and mind. Should this become more common we should here less complaining.

ROMANCE. It is probable that, of all the causes which have injured the health of woman, the principal have been the prodigious multiplication of romances during the last century. From the most advanced age they read them with an eagerness which keeps them almost without motion and without sleep. A young girl, instead of running about and playing—reads, perpetually reads, and at twenty becomes full of vapors, instead of being qualified for the duties of a good wife or nurse. These causes which influence the physical equally influence the moral man. I have known persons of both sexes, whose constitution would have been robust, weaken gradually by the too strong impressions of impassionate writings. The most tender romance hinder marriages, instead of promoting them.

Woman, while her heart is warmed by the languor of love, does not seek a husband; a hero must lay his laurels at her feet. The fire of love does not warm her heart, it only inflames her imagination.—Tissot.

PAYING. A well known political economist says: "We pay best, first, those who destroy us—generals; second, those who cheat us—politicians and quacks; third, those who amuse us—singers and musicians; and least of all, those who instruct us."

WELCH SAYINGS. Three things that never become rusty—the money of the benevolent, the shoes of the butcher's horse, and a woman's tongue. Three things not easily done—to allay thirst with fire, to dry wet with water, to please all in every thing that is done. Three things that are as good as the best—brown bread in famine, well water in thirst, and a grey coat in cold. Three things as good as their better—dirty water to extinguish the fire, an ugly wife to a blind man, and a wood sword to coward. Three warnings from the grave—thou knowest what I was, thou seest what I am, remember what I thou art to be. Three things of short continuance—a lady's love, a chip fire, and a brook's flood. Three things that ought never to be from home—the cat, the chimney, and the house-wife. The essentials to a false story teller—a good memory, a bold face, and tools for an audience. Three things seen in the peacock—the garb of an angel, the walk of a thief, and the voice of the devil. Three things it is unwise to boast of—the flavor of thy ale, the beauty of thy wife and the contents of thy purse. Three miseries of a man's house—a smoky chimney, a dripping roof, and a scolding wife.

MERITED REBUKE. Alexander Dumas, the great French dramatist, is of colored origin. A capital story is told of him.

It seems that a person more remarkable for inquisitiveness than for correct breeding—one of those who, devoid of delicacy and recklessness of rebuff, pry into everything—took the liberty to question M. Dumas rather closely concerning his genealogical ties.

'You are a quadroon, M. Dumas?' he began.

'I am sir,' quietly replied Dumas, who has sense enough not to be ashamed of a descent he cannot conceal.

'And your father?'

'Was a mulatto.'

'And your grandfather?'

'A negro,' hastily answered the dramatist whose patience was waning.

'And may I enquire who your great-grandfather was?'

'An ape sir,' thundered Dumas, with a fierceness that made his impertinent interrogator shrink into the smallest possible compass. 'An ape sir—my pedigree commences where yours terminates.'

DON'T BOTHER EVERY BODILY MAN who works a horse during the hot months, can promote its comfort by the use of the following simple shield against the teasing of flies:—Take two or three handfuls of walnut leaves, upon which pour two or three quarts of cold water; let it infuse one night, and pour the whole, the next morning, into a kettle, and boil for a quarter of an hour; when cold it is fit for use. Moisten a sponge with it, and before the horse goes out of the stable, let those parts which are most irritable be washed over with the liquor.

GIVE NO PAIN. Breathe not a sentiment—say not a word—give not an expression of the countenance, that will offend another, or send a thrill of pain to his bosom. We are surrounded by sensitive hearts, which a word, look even, might fill to the brim with sorrow. If you are careless of the opinions and expressions of others, remember that they are differently constituted from yourself and never, by a word or sign, cast a shadow on a happy heart, or throw aside the smiles of joy that love to linger on a pleasant countenance.

HOME. No marvel that poets have chosen home and the native land, as grateful themes of song. In themselves, the words are full of melody; in their associations they form exquisite music. It is a blessed thing to have a heaven of rest, where love lights its beacon and keeps its vigils to greet the returning wanderer, weary of a cheerless pilgrimage by flood or field. God help those for whom every country wears a foreign aspect—who avert their steps from the dwelling of their fathers, banished by the clouds of discord, or the rank weeds of desolation.

WOMAN. The government of families leads to the comfort of communities and the welfare of States. Home, that scene of purest and dearest joy—home is the empire of woman. There she plans, directs, performs—the acknowledged source of dignity and felicity. Where female virtue is most pure, female sense is most approved, female deportment most correct, there is most social manners. The early years of childhood, those most precious years of life and opening season, are confined to woman's superintendence; she therefore may be presumed to lay the foundation of all the virtues, and all the wisdom that enrich the world.

CONSCIENCE. Neighbor Jones has a conscience that looks forward and keeps him from doing wrong. But neighbor Smith's conscience is of the ex-post-facto order, never manifesting itself till after the wrong deed is done, and then acting as a terrible avenger. How many there are of this kind, always sinning and always repenting! No class of men, in a moral point of view, suffer so much as they.

EARLY RISING. Now is the time to rise early, and breathe the pure morning air. The flowers are springing at our feet, the birds are singing their sweetest songs, and every thing invites us to rise with the lark, and go forth to praise our Creator.

CELEBRATION OF INDEPENDENCE. This national jubilee happening on Sunday, this year, the usual festivities of the occasion were held on Monday, the 5th instant. The day was one of the finest of the season, with a light northwesterly breeze which rendered it quite comfortable considering the thermometer was somewhere about ninety. Our citizens were aroused at an early hour by the ringing of bells, firing of guns, and other noisy accompaniments. The Tiger Engine Company, No. 2, in parade dress, were out early in the morning, with their engine handsomely decorated; and after marching through several streets and a trial of their 'tub' at the canal, partook of breakfast, served in French's usual tasty and beautiful style, at the Hancock House.

But the chief attractions of the day were the banner presentation and services of the I. O. of O. F. celebration. Our streets were filled with strangers throughout the forenoon, and some time previous to the hour announced, the steps of the Stone Temple were thronged with the beauty and fashion of Quincy. A procession was formed at the Rooms of the Mt. Wollaston Lodge, in Washington Street, under the direction of Capt. Henry Souther, chief marshal, and accompanied by the Stoughton Band, marched to the Temple, where they formed to receive the banner. A delegation of young ladies then came forward and Miss Maria Frederick, in behalf of the ladies, presented the banner and delivered the following Address:

Most Noble Grand, Officers and Brothers of the Mt. Wollaston Lodge:

Sir—The ladies of the Odd Fellows of your highly respected lodge, feeling a deep interest, and sincere regard, for the welfare and prosperity of your Order, have endeavored to concentrate an expression of their sympathizing feelings, in some one act, that one and all may express more forcibly, more manifestly, and more unanimously, their ready sympathy, their heartfelt co-operation, and their undiminished affection of your spirit of benevolence, which claims a character wide as the globe. Wherever falls the widow's tear, wherever is uttered the wail of the unprotected and sorrowing orphan, there the benefits of the Order are exhibited; there the kind brothers lend pecuniary aid, if the stern arm of poverty encircles the sufferer, and give kind and affectionate counsel to the anguished stricken heart. Nor is the lone wanderer forgotten; overtaken by sickness, he is not left to the casual care of strangers, nor the heartless attendance of hirelings; but is ministered unto by interested brothers, eager to alleviate mental and physical suffering; and if summoned hence, he is not then forgotten, but interred with many a tear by the Order.

The ladies, wishing by some act to show to you that they appreciate your labors, present to this banner, which they desire you to accept in Friendship, Love, and Truth.

Mr. S. A. Bates, V. G. of Mt. Wollaston Lodge, replied as follows:

MADAM—Permit me, in behalf of Mt. Wollaston Lodge, No. 50, of the I. O. of O. F., to present our sincere and heartfelt thanks for the beautiful banner which you have this day bestowed upon us. And as we look upon its glittering folds may we be reminded of those duties which we have obligated ourselves to perform; "to visit the sick, relieve the distressed, bury the dead and educate the orphan." May it incite us to a more faithful performance of these duties and urge us onward to the relief of our fellow-men. We feel that it is indeed a privilege to know that the ladies are willing to co-operate with us in this good work; that they entertain a sincere regard for, and take a deep interest in the welfare of our beloved Order. And with your kind wishes and assistance we trust that we shall continue to prosper and increase, until all shall bow to the gentle influences which flow from the streams of Friendship, Love and Truth. Then shall one law bind all nations, tongues, and kindred of the earth, and that shall be the law of Universal Love.

It is woman's peculiar sphere to perform the duties of Old Fellowship. Whose voice fills upon the ear of the afflicted with such consoling influence as that of woman? Whose hand so gentle as hers to wipe away the falling tear? Whose heart so open and ready to sympathize with the bereaved mourner? None. None. She needs no instructions to make her extend the hand of sympathy, for it was created with her, and it flows from her bosom as free and as pure as she received it from the hands of her Creator. May this expression of your sympathy tend to unite us stronger in the bonds of Friendship, Love and Truth, in those bonds which naught can sever, but which after we shall have passed the valley of the shadow of death may again unite us around the throne of God. Then shall Old Fellowship be perfected, the fabric which is commenced on earth shall be completed, the temple shall be finished and the capstone be put on amid shouts of glory, glory unto it.

In conclusion, allow me to say, that if ever the clouds of adversity should lower around you, if the waves of disappointment should roll over and engulf you, if sickness should lay its withering grasp upon you, may the guardian arm of Old Fellowship be thrown around you to protect you from the storms and tempests of life, to support your aching head, and finally, when you shall be summoned to depart from this world to join the band of ministering angels in the skies, to close your eyes in peace.

The Banner was very rich and beautiful. The appropriate devices, etc. were painted on white satin and were executed, as we learn, by Mr. A. M. Burrell of this town. It reflects much credit both on the artist and the ladies who were instrumental in getting it up.

The procession now moved through some of the principal streets, to the music of the Band. The members of the Order were in full regalia, and with their new banner, presented quite an attractive appearance. Returning, the body entered the church and listened to an Oration from William E. Parmenter, Esq., and a Poem by Rev. Mr. Pearson of this town, which were highly satisfactory to the audience. After the services usual on such occasions, the company repaired to the dinner table.

bles at the Town Hall, and feasted on the profusion of delicacies there provided.

The venerable Ex-President Adams was in attendance on the services at the Temple, but his health would not admit of his joining in the festivities of the day.

"FLORA'S FESTIVAL." A Juvenile Oratorio with instrumental accompaniment, came off at the Town Hall last Thursday evening. Notwithstanding the sultriness of the weather the hall was well filled, and all who attended, judging from the repeated bursts of applause,—were well pleased with their evening's entertainment. In the desk was placed the orchestra, and the children arranged in front on a raised platform, presented a picture of happiness and innocence seldom witnessed. To the superior manner in which they acquitted themselves in their musical performances, was added the most perfect order, which reflects the highest praise on the talents of Mr. Felt, their accomplished teacher. We know not what magic power he possesses over his pupils, yet 'twas plain that he could lead them at will. Happy are the children in having such a teacher, and thrice happy the parents in being able to secure his services, and proud may they well be of the progress of their offspring.

Of the many present all appeared highly gratified and it was more pleasing that the performers were the children of our friends and neighbors, and not dragged from some polluted source in Europe. In time past, foreign talent has been too highly applauded, while that of our own land has been suffered to sink in forgetfulness or be dissected by criticism. It is for teachers like Mr. Felt to correct this error, by proving, as he has in this and other instances, that we need not go abroad for musical talent; thereby producing a feeling of self reliance and respect that will do more to develop the talent of our people and elevate the standard of vocal music, than all the foreign strings that ever twanged before an audience.

P. S. The Oratorio will be repeated next week, as will be seen by advertisement. Don't fail to go.

FROM EUROPE. The steamship Caledonia, from Liverpool, June 19th, arrived in Boston on Sunday morning last. There is a great decline in prices of all kinds of Breadstuffs in England, and the prospects of an abundant harvest are favorable.

The Cotton market has been steady, and a fair amount of business transacted.

In the House of Commons, on the 10th June, a resolution was adopted to extend the time for the admission of foreign grain without paying duty, until the 1st of March next.

Emigration proceeds very extensively,—during the past two months one hundred and twenty thousand persons, chiefly Irish, left the shores of Great Britain for America.

In Ireland, a great deal of business is made and money is in the hands of the country appears to be not in the least improved. Crime and outrage still stalk through that unhappy land. The prospects of the crops however, are in general of a gratifying character, and the farmers are in the best possible spirits.

The Journal des Debats announces the receipt of letters from all parts of France, which are unanimous in describing the appearance of the growing crops as most favorable.

THE CROPS. From every quarter we hear the most gratifying accounts of the growing wheat crop. Occasionally there is a note of complaint that the crop here or there has been winter-killed; but the news of the death is never confirmed. The truth is the crops, as a general thing, was never more promising. With even a tolerable crop, the unusual quantity of seed which has been put in both of wheat and Indian corn, will produce a greater quantity of breadstuff than our country has ever seen before. An Albany paper says the oats, in the vicinity of that city, come up so thick, that they rub one another's beards off! and what is true of oats is equally true of the potatoes, corn, rye, and bean crops. The latter will be especially prolific, as we have had no frost to injure the plants since they first appeared above the ground. As for fruit and butter, we expect to see them go a begging. Since the world was six months old the trees and cows never gave such goodly promise as they do at present.

NEWSPAPER CHANGES. The Norfolk County American, published at Roxbury (Mass.), has been enlarged and will be hereafter known as the "Roxbury Gazette."

The Hingham Patriot has also been enlarged and put in a new dress. J. Franklin Farmer has become associate publisher with John Gill, former and present editor.

ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE. We learn from Thompson's Weymouth and Boston Express, that a Mrs. Porter made an attempt on her life in Weymouth, on Thursday last, by cutting her throat with a razor,—nearly severing the windpipe. The services of Dr. Ball were immediately called in, and our informant states that through his skill and promptness the woman is likely to survive. Dr. B. has recently established himself in that place and bids fair to win an enviable reputation in his profession.

N. B. If you want something cooling these warm evenings, call at the "Palo Alto" and get an ice cream. The proprietor and his lady are very attentive to the wants of the suffering.

MEXICO. The news from the seat of war is not important. It consists principally of rumors and contradictions of rumors. It is rumored that the Massachusetts regiment has been ordered to Veracruz. Gen. Taylor would not advance on San Luis Potosi for some time. There is no prospect of peace at present.

Colonel May, of Palo Alto memory, has arrived in Boston.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS. A man was found lying dead on the track of the Fall River Railroad on Tuesday morning, a short distance from South Braintree. His head was entirely severed from his body, his wrists broken, and his body considerably mangled. He was probably lying across the track, and was run over by the late train on Monday night. His name was Harris, and he was a carpenter by trade belonging to South Randolph.

On Monday afternoon, a locomotive on the Worcester Railroad, came in collision with a hack, in which were two men and two small children, a boy and girl. The boy was instantly killed, and all the others, including the driver, more or less injured. The horses were killed, and the carriage, of course, completely wrecked.

A Mr. Willey, of East Boston, while in a state of intoxication, Monday, fell upon the track of the Eastern Railroad, near Ipswich, his right arm extending over the rail. He was not observed in season to prevent the train of cars passing over his arm, which was consequently severed, about half way between the shoulder and elbow.

THE PRESIDENT'S VISIT. President Polk returned to Boston on Monday from his visit to the state of Maine, where he was everywhere received with great enthusiasm by the people. He immediately proceeded to Taunton in company with Ex-Governor Morton, and from thence went to Fall River and took the steamboat Bay State for New York.

THANKS. Hon. J. G. Palfrey, Secretary of the Commonwealth, has our acknowledgments for a copy of the Acts and Resolves, passed by the Massachusetts Legislature for the year 1847.

A BIG PEBBLE. The committee of the Jackson Monument Association invite proposals to deliver in the centre of Lafayette square, Washington City, "a solid rude rock of granite, or other durable stone, of between 600 and 1000 tons in weight, —as near as may be of the latter weight." It is designed as the pedestal of said monument, and must be on the ground by the 1st day of March next. Proposals received until the 31st of August.

PROTEST AGAINST SLAVERY. Three hundred and ninety-six ministers of the Free Will Baptist persuasion, publish in the Morning Star, at Dover (N. H.), a declaration of sentiment on the subject of slavery. The following is an extract:—

"We, therefore, by refusing to support slavery, its principles, or its advocates, and by withholding Christian and Church fellowship from all guilty of the sin of slavery, and by remembering those in bonds as bound with them, wash our hands from the guilt of this iniquity."

LAUNCH. A new bark, called the Prescott, of about three hundred tons burthen, built by Mr. John L. Souther, will be launched from his shipyard at Roxbury, on Wednesday next, between twelve and one o'clock.

Gen. Jackson in his will, directed that the pistols which were presented by Washington to Lafayette, at the commencement of the War of the Revolution, and which were subsequently presented to General Jackson by the Washington family, be presented to the son of Lafayette at Paris. This has been done through Mr. J. L. Martin, United States Charge d'Affaires in France; and their receipt is acknowledged in a letter from Lafayette.

Edmund Quincy, of Dedham, has become an Assistant Editor of the "Prisoner's Friend."

There were probably twenty thousand persons who left Boston Monday night, after the fireworks, in the railroad trains.

The Legislature of New Hampshire has granted a charter for the railroad from Manchester to the new town of Lawrence.

More than twenty thousand persons have ascended the Bunker Hill monument during the year; the income derived from them is devoted to improve the grounds.

Ex-Governor Morton was relieved of his pocket book in the cars between Boston and Taunton, one evening last week. The rogue obtained possession of some valuable papers but not one cent in cash.

The total amount of the debts of the several states in the Union, according to the American Almanac, compiled from official returns, is $225,023,827.

Texas has already cost us over seven thousand lives, and Mexico probably an equal number.

The Massachusetts Bible Society have presented an elegant bound copy of the Bible to the Revenue Cutter Hamilton, Capt. Sturgis.

A letter from Dr. Judson, the celebrated Missionary, states that the house in which his effects were left, had been set on fire and totally destroyed. His clothes and his wife's, all their American presents, &c., were consumed. He is allowed to remain in Rangoon, but is strictly prohibited from making proselytes.

Frederick Douglass, the fugitive slave has abandoned his intention, for the present, of issuing a paper.

In Essex (N. H.) lately, an unmitigated scoundrel has been guilty of mutilating fruit trees, and made to pay a fine of fifty dollars, besides being lodged for one year in the House of Correction.

The mother of William Cullen Bryant, the poet, died at Princeton, (Ill.) on the 5th of May last.

The Genesee Farmer says that "the hog crop in the United States this year is three times the worth of the cotton crop. The 'standing army' of swine consumes annually two hundred millions of bushels of corn."

A lot of new wheat has been received in New York from the South, and sold for one dollar eighty cents per bushel.

NORFOLK SS. At a meeting of the County Commissioners at Dedham, June Term, 1847—

ON the Petition of APPLETON HOWE and others, presented at a meeting of said Commissioners at Dedham on the 27th day of October last, by adjournment from the September term then next preceding, praying that a new public highway may be laid out in the town of Braintree, from a point at or near the Western end of a town road in Weymouth, near the Rail Road crossing, over lands of John Vining, heirs of Cotton Tufts and of Samuel Penniman, to a point on Liberty Street, so called, near the house of said Samuel Penniman. And also that certain alterations may be made in said Town Road in Weymouth called West Street. The Commissioners having duly notified the parties interested in the matter, and after hearing the parties, and viewing said roads, do now adjudge that common convenience and necessity require that said new public highway should be laid out as prayed for, without the alteration of said Town Road.

It is therefore Ordered, That the County Commissioners will meet at the house of said Samuel Penniman in Braintree, on FRIDAY, the sixth day of August next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, and thence proceed to lay out and locate said new highway, and that an attested copy of the adjudication and order be served upon the Clerks of the towns of Braintree and Weymouth thirty days, at least, before the said day of meeting, and that like copies be posted up in two or more public places in each of said towns of Braintree and Weymouth, fourteen days, at least, before said day, and also that a like copy be published three weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed in Quincy the last publication thereof to be fourteen days at least before said day, that all persons and parties interested may then and there appear and be heard if they see fit.

EZRA W. SAMPSON, Clerk.

A true copy of the adjudication on file and order thereon.

Attest: EZRA W. SAMPSON, Clerk.

July 10. 3w

To the Honorable the County Commissioners within and for the County of Norfolk:

THE subscribers, inhabitants of the town of Weymouth in said County of Norfolk, respectfully represent, that application was made to the Selectmen of said town by John W. Loud and others, for a Town-way from Washington Street to land of Nancy White within said town of Weymouth, the same being forty one rods and fifteen and a half links in length and running over land of Thomas C. Webb, George S. Holden, George S. Gove, John C. Wright and Nancy White, where a way has already been laid out and worked by the said proprietors of the land aforesaid. That said Selectmen gave due notice and heard all parties interested, as well those against as those for said application, and thereupon proceeded to lay out said Town-way agreeably to the prayer contained in the application therefor. That said Selectmen reported the same to the town at a public meeting thereof, regularly called, warned and notified, and which was held on the fifth day of April last, having filed the laying out thereof in the Town Clerk's Office seven days prior thereto agreeably to the law in such case made and provided. That said town, at said public meeting, held on said fifth day of April last, for the purpose aforesaid, did unreasonably refuse and delay to approve and allow of said Town-way so laid out by the Selectmen as aforesaid, and to place the same upon the records of said town, and to cause the same to be entered on the records of the town, agreeably to the law in such case made and provided. That said town, at said public meeting, held on said fifth day of April last, for the purpose aforesaid, did unreasonably refuse and delay to approve and allow of said Town-way so laid out by the Selectmen as aforesaid, and to place the same upon the records of said town, and to cause the same to be entered on the records of the town, agreeably to the law in such case made and provided. MISCELLANY.

THE CHRYSARMA.

The following description of Raymond & Waring's Golden Chariot, an appendage to their extensive Menagerie, which is to be exhibited in this town next week, is from the New York Evening Post:

It is unquestionably the most stupendous creation of sculptural and decorative art that has been produced in any nation of the modern world, and it probably rivals any of those renowned triumphal chariots of Cambyse or Sardanapalus, Cleopatra or Alexander. Alcibiades or the Cæsars, with which classical history and poetry exalt our conceptions of the splendor of the ancient empires.

It is a blazing prodigy of crimson, purple and gold, seventeen feet high, and twenty-one feet in length, exhibiting classical figures, of colossal stature, in bold and vigorous sculpture, grouped with lordly animals of the forest, projected in similar proportions. It is free from all tinsel and flimsy ornament, and makes a predominant impression of sumptuous and substantial grandeur, blended with the highest compatible degree of grace and beauty. The first figure that commands the eye, on the right side, over the hind wheel, is that of an Herculean archer, in the attitude and act of aiming, with a well-drawn bow and barbed arrow, at the open mouth of a massive tiger, crouched over the fore wheel, and turning with ferocious rage towards his assailant. These figures of the archer and tiger are not carved merely in high-relief, but, at most points, in all the free force and full effect of detached statuary; the former figure being apparently a study from the Grecian antique of Sagittarius, and the latter from some superb specimen of the tiger in the Menagerie—so natural and living is its expression. About midway between these conspicuous figures, and, therefore, on the waist of the carriage, above the space between the wheels, is a remarkably gorgeous profusion of carved work, surrounding a convex compartment or panel, containing a soft and charming painting of the Genius of America, seated in the chariot of Neptune on the waves, bearing the banner of the Union and heralded by Fame. This picture forms a medallion in the centre of a capacious golden shield which expands into a radiating border of the boldest relief, and of that peculiar style technically known as the shell-frill, so famous in the higher efforts of arabesque carving, and of which this probably constitutes the largest and richest example extant in any country. On the right front, in advance of the couchant tiger, is a full-sized statue of Pan, the tutelary deity of the Arcadian shepherds and patron of hunters, seated on his shaggy haunches, blowing his syrinx or pastoral reeds, (the origin of the organ) and bearing on his right arm his curved staff. This one of the best and most elaborately executed classical statues with which this vast vehicle is adorned, although it might possibly have been still more effective in an erect attitude. Like all the other figures and carved work, it glows in burnished gold, so solidly metallic to the sight as to seem rather a cast in that precious metal than an exterior plating. But it would be great injustice to the sumptuousness of this astonishing fabric not to award the warmest encomiums to the carved flowers and foliage which occupy every accessible and appropriate space around the animated forms on either side. That pre-eminently ornate and graceful stem-foliage, flowing in long arches and curved branches, known in its two varieties of Franco-English and English arabesque, which has excited the emulous study of American artists for several years past, is here displayed in a mastery of taste and workmanship demonstrative of the transcendent success which that emulation has achieved. For the Quincy Patriot.

HYMN FOR JULY FOURTH.

Again Columbia plumes her crest,
With garlands deck the Eagle's nest,
Rejoice, rejoice, ye greatly blest,
Descendants of the free;
Alas! the cheering chorus fly,
Light on the blazing bonfires high,
With earthquake Cannon shake the sky,
Ye sons of Liberty.

To Freedom's Temple now repair
With bounding bosoms free from care,
And on your fathers' altars swear,
To guard the boon they gave.
Remember now each Patriot's name
Of seventy six who lit the flame,
Engrave them on the rock of fame,
And trumpet o'er their grave.

With grateful hearts to Heav'n praise
The conscious eye, the voice of praise,
For blessings in ten thousand ways,
And first that we are free,
Our Fathers' Guardian, Guide and Friend,
To thee and only thee we bend;
The children as the sires defend,
Preserve their liberty.

SLANDER.

Slander! I hate thy deadly name,
I hate thy poisonous breath;
The influence thou breathest around
Is worse, ah! worse than death.

'Tis thou that robs the innocent,
And wounds the cause of truth,
Who stains with deepest dye, the path
Of unsuspecting youth.

Oh slander! whoe'er thou art,
Look thou within thy breast,
And ask thyself if thou hast robbed
The innocent of rest.

Art thou a parent?—recollect
You'll justly meet your due,
For know the measure that you meet
Will be returned to you.

Hast thou confessed before the world,
The author of thy day,
And humbly pledged thyself, that thou
Wouldest follow in his way?

Slander! reflect, confess thy guilt,
Before it be too late;
Seek the forgiveness of thy God,—
I tremble for thy fate.

Plymouth Rock.

THE COOLING SHADES OF EVE.

The cooling shades of evening,
With lightsome heart I see,
While by the easel's glowing
To meet, my love, with thee.

Oh, then each flower closing,
Looks fairer than by day;
It tells by its reposing,
Thou wilt not long delay.

The birds in valleys singing,
Delight my listening ear;
And tell the hour is bringing My dearest Charles here.

Methinks more brightly beaming
The moon looks from above;
And with a fond eye gleaming
With joy to see my love.

O! haste then, love, why linger?
For day has gone to rest,
And night with dewy finger,
The flowers in gray has drest.

The moon has sought the fountain,
Thy fairy form to see,
And the starlight on the mountain,
Looks mildly down on thee.

ANECDOTES.

"Susan, stand up and let me see what you have learned. What does e-h-a-i-r spell?"
"I don't know marm."
"Why, you ignorant critter! What do you always sit on?"
"Oh, marm, I don't like to tell."
"What on airth is the matter with the gal—tell what it is?"
"I don't like to tell—it was Bill Crass' knee, but he never kissed me but twice!"
"Arrhquake and apple-sauce!" exclaimed the school-mistress, and she fainted.

"Would it were lawful to marry two wives!" exclaimed an enthusiastic young bachelor, desperately in love with a couple of country cousins. "Try one to begin with," was the rejoinder of a surly old Benedict.

A servant girl, writing a letter, asked her master if the next month had come in yet; he laughed.
"Well," said she, "what I mean is,—has the last month gone out yet?"

"What's the matter, Cesar?"
"Dat nigger dat lib down cat alley hit me on de meuf wid his fist."
"Well, didn't you strike him back, Cesar?"
"No, massa, but I strike him head!"

A teetotaler, the other day asked a neighbor if he were not inclined to the temperance Society.
"Yes," replied he, "for when I saw the wine my mouth watered."

"Well, Charley," said a gentleman the other morning to a discharged boot black, "How do you get along?"
"Oh, very well, massa; we rub and go, Massa."

A sleepy deacon, who sometimes engaged in popular games, hearing the priest use the words "shuffle off this mortal coil," started up rubbed his eyes, and exclaimed, "hold on! it's my deal!"

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to this community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality, at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Sissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, and a general assortment of Fancy Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULATING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading of a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c.

To all we say "encourage home manufacture, and patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign."

MISCELLANY.

THE CHRYSARMA.

The following description of Raymond & Waring's Golden Chariot, an appendage to their extensive Menagerie, which is to be exhibited in this town next week, is from the New York Evening Post:

It is unquestionably the most stupendous creation of sculptural and decorative art that has been produced in any nation of the modern world, and it probably rivals any of those renowned triumphal chariots of Cambyse or Sardanapalus, Cleopatra or Alexander, Alcibiades or the Cæsars, with which classical history and poetry exalt our conceptions of the splendor of the ancient empires.

It is a blazing prodigy of crimson, purple and gold, seventeen feet high, and twenty-one feet in length, exhibiting classical figures, of colossal stature, in bold and vigorous sculpture, grouped with lordly animals of the forest, projected in similar proportions. It is free from all tinsel and flimsy ornament, and makes a predominant impression of sumptuous and substantial grandeur, blended with the highest compatible degree of grace and beauty. The first figure that commands the eye, on the right side, over the hind wheel, is that of an Herculean archer, in the attitude and act of aiming, with a well-drawn bow and barbed arrow, at the open mouth of a massive tiger, crouched over the fore wheel, and turning with ferocious rage towards his assailant. These figures of the archer and tiger are not carved merely in high-relief, but, at most points, in all the free force and full effect of detached statuary; the former figure being apparently a study from the Grecian antique of Sagittarius, and the latter from some superb specimen of the tiger in the Menagerie—so natural and living is its expression. About midway between these conspicuous figures, and, therefore, on the waist of the carriage, above the space between the wheels, is a remarkably gorgeous profusion of carved work, surrounding a convex compartment or panel, containing a soft and charming painting of the Genius of America, seated in the chariot of Neptune on the waves, bearing the banner of the Union and heralded by Fame. This picture forms a medallion in the centre of a capacious golden shield which expands into a radiating border of the boldest relief, and of that peculiar style technically known as the shell-frill, so famous in the higher efforts of arabesque carving, and of which this probably constitutes the largest and richest example extant in any country. On the right front, in advance of the couchant tiger, is a full-sized statue of Pan, the tutelary deity of the Arcadian shepherds and patron of hunters, seated on his shaggy haunches, blowing his syrinx or pastoral reeds, (the origin of the organ) and bearing on his right arm his curved staff. This one of the best and most elaborately executed classical statues with which this vast vehicle is adorned, although it might possibly have been still more effective in an erect attitude. Like all the other figures and carved work, it glows in burnished gold, so solidly metallic to the sight as to seem rather a cast in that precious metal than an exterior plating. But it would be great injustice to the sumptuousness of this astonishing fabric not to award the warmest encomiums to the carved flowers and foliage which occupy every accessible and appropriate space around the animated forms on either side. That pre-eminently ornate and graceful stem-foliage, flowing in long arches and curved branches, known in its two varieties of Franco English and English arabesque, which has excited the emulous study of American artists for several years past, is here displayed in a mastery of taste and workmanship demonstrative of the transcendent success which that emulation has achieved. Better specimens of this enchanting ornament, in free wood carving, do not certainly exist; and those soaring over the head of the bearded archer, above described, give an outline of imposing grandeur to this lofty portion of the vehicle which scarcely any other design could equal.

The front of the carriage rests upon the backs of two monstrous and grotesque alligators, in bronze, who seemed compressed beneath its ponderous weight. Both in design and execution, these huge figures possess great merit, evincing a daring freedom with the grotesque upon which few modern artists have presumed, and which it requires a poetic taste, cultivated amid the mythologic and heraldic forms of old oriental art, fully to appreciate.

But passing around these to the left front of the chariot, we arrive at a piece of sculpture with the subject of which the popular mind is more familiar. It is that of Diana, the huntress, the free, healthful, strong and active maiden-goddess of the chase, with bow and quiver, bare breasts, and flowing tunic, careering onward in pursuit, attended by her fond and faithful hound. Even to the uncouth figure of the classic hound, in this production true to the standard models; and no critic would hesitate to pronounce it the best copy, of the size of life, that has been produced in the same material.

It necessarily occupies nearly the whole space over the left fore wheel, and brings us to the central compartment of carved work on this side. We have here another convex panel, medallioned, like the former, in a spacious shell-frill, spreading into similar projecting frill-work, of equal workmanship and splendor. But the painting, on this side, is a highly finished gem, that will elicit universal admiration. The scene is a wooded and rocky mountain dell, affording a distant and soft perspective, and exhibiting, on the foreground, a group of three or four figures, of which the centre one is a fine and spirited conception of manly beauty and vigor very rarely equalled. It is that of a tamer of savage beasts in their own forest haunts, who has pursued and subdued a royal tiger in its den, and who stands with his foot upon its prostrate and submissive form, while two lovely females approach him with a long wreath of flowers, pendant in rich festoons, as if to enchain even the victor, with the power of their rewards and charms. This picture is remarkably felicitous and striking, and the flowers, particularly, are finished with a minuteness and brilliancy seldom seen even in the choicest treasures of a studio. We pass from this fascinating object, however, to a colossal lion over the left hind wheel, bearing a striding cupid with a lifted torch. This subject stands in fine contrast with that of the athletic and destructive archer on the opposite side, since we have here the brute monarch of the forest subdued and guided by a child. Over this massive statuary, ascends an arch of branching and curving foliage, in harmony with that which we have mentioned on the opposite compartment, and which loses no favor upon a renewed inspection. We finally reach the lofty back of this gigantic car, and see an immense eagle of flaming gold, in the act of rising upon expanded wings with our national escutcheon of stripes and stars. When we state that this work occupies the whole of the back compartment, some idea may be formed of its magnitude, and of the undivided force of its effect.

But we must again take a position in front of this magnificent structure, in order to obtain a view of its interior, its canopy, and its drapery. It has, within its body, five ascended seats, covered, like its interior sides, with plush and velvet, richly figured and piled; and the high canopy which overarches the last two seats, is curtained with fine purple cloth, bespangled with silver disks, and fringed with a border of silver lace and stars. In the centre of the back interior of the canopy, is a hemisphere or rising sun, composed of large golden scales or spangles, in close radiation, and of vivid resplendency. But tasteful and superb as is the whole of this portion of the drapery, it is far surpassed by that of the hammer cloth, which covers the elevated front seat of the chariot. This consists of imperial purple velvet, profusely covered with gold and silver stars. Upon the corner folds, in front, are eagles, in form like those of the Roman standards, embroidered in silver; and the whole is deeply bordered with golden lions rampant, among stars and silver flowers, and fringed with mural lappets in silver binding, each bearing a crimson asterisk. Upon the front of the canopy, embraced in a wreath of golden palm branches, are the letters J. R. and M., the latter merely denoting the Menagerie, and the former being the initials of Mr. Raymond, its opulent, enterprising, and estimable proprietor. Descending from this altitude to the wheels upon which this stupendous car moves, it is only necessary to say that they are of amply substantial strength, wrought in the Moorish arabesque of Spain, the interlacing curves between the spokes, forming the pointed arches of that style.

This vast and marvellous vehicle, was built, sculptured, and embellished under the constant superintendence of Mr. Raymond, the proprietor, and Mr. John Stephenson, the manufacturer, at his Coach Factory in 27th street, New York, and it will bear his already extensive celebrity to every portion of the Union. We understand that the skillful artist who executed the carved work, are the Messrs. Willard, that the meritorious artist of the paintings, is Mr. Holme; and that the designer and manufacturer of the drapery, is Mr. Andrew Jackson Allen, the eminent costumer. We further learn that Mr. Raymond, the proprietor of the unrivalled Menagerie to which this grand chariot is a mere appendage, has given Mr. Stephenson an order for another of at least equal dimensions and splendor, and that the cost of both will amount to about ten thousand dollars. This one alone, however, being undeniably the greatest mechanical and artistic prodigy of the age, and not even distantly approached by any similar production in Europe, cannot fail to be an object of unrivalled curiosity and amazement wherever it appears.

FIRST PIANO IN ILLINOIS.

During the summer following the termination of the Black Hawk war—being among the first of the down east emigrants to the country then barely evacuated by the red man of the forest—Dr. A., of Baltimore, removed to what has since become a small town near the Illinois river, by the name of P—. The doctor's family was composed of three young ladies and his wife, all of whom were performers on the piano, and one of them the possessor of the instrument in question.

As is usually the case in all new settled places when a "new comer" makes his first appearance, the neighbors (that were to be) had collected together, for the purpose of seeing the doctor's "plunder" unpacked, and making the acquaintance of its possessor.

Dr. A.'s "household" was stowed away in seven large wagons; being first packed into pine boxes, on which was painted, in large black letters, the contents, address, &c.

One wagon after another was unloaded, without much sensation on the part of the little crowd of lookers on, except an occasional exclamation similar to the following, from those who had "never seen the like before."

"Glass! This side up with care! Why, I thought this ere fellow was a doctor! What on yearth is he going to do with that box full of windows?"

"This side up with care!" exclaimed one,—"He's got his paragonic and ile-of-spike fixins in that. Won't he fizzle them agar fellows down on the river?"

In the last wagon there was but one large box, and on it were printed the words, "piano forte—keep dry and handle carefully." It required the assistance of all the bystanders to unload this box, and the curiosity excited in the crowd, upon reading the foregoing words, and hearing the musical sounds emitted as it struck the ground can only be gathered by giving a few of the expressions that dropped from the spectators.

"Pine forte!" said a tall, yellow haired, fever and ague looking youth; "wonder if he's afeared of the Injuns? He can't scare them with a pine forte!"

"Ke-e-p-d-r-y," was spelled by a large raw boned man, who was evidently a liberal patron of "old bald face," who had broken off at the latter "y," with a "d-o your temperance characters—you needn't come round here with your tracts!"

He was interrupted at this point by a stout built personage, who cried out,

"He's got his skeletons in thar, and he's afeared to gin them liker, for they'll break out if he does. Poor fellers! they must suffer powerfully."

"Handle carefully," said a man in a red hunting shirt, and the fize of whose fist, as he doubled it up, was twice that of an ordinary man. "Thar's some live critter in thar. Don't you hear him groan?" This was said as the box struck the ground, and the concussion caused a vibration of the strings.

No sooner had all the hands let go of the box, than Dr. A. was besieged by his neighbors, all of whom were determined to know what were its contents, and what was the meaning of "piano forte." On his telling them that it was a musical instrument, some reckoned that it would take a ternal sight of wind to blow it; others, that "it would take a lot of men to make it go," &c. The doctor explained its operations as well as he could, but still, his description was anything but satisfactory, and he could only get rid of his inquisitive neighbors, promising a sight at an early day.

Three days—days that seemed like weeks to the persons before mentioned—elapsed before the premises of Dr. A. were arranged for the reception of visitors; and various and curious were surmises among the settlers during this time. Dr. A. and his "plunder" were the topics of conversation for miles around. The doctor's house had but one room, but this was one of double the ordinary size, and the carpets were all too small to cover the entire floor; hence a strip of bare floor appeared at each side of the room. Opposite to and facing the door, was placed the "pine forte." All was ready for the admission of visitors, and Miss E. was to act as the first performer. The doctor had but to open the door, and half a score of men were ready to enter. Miss E. took her seat, and at the first sounding of the instrument the party present rushed in. Some went directly up to the "critter," as it had been called, on account of its having four legs; some, more shy, remained close to the door, where, if necessary, they could more easily make their escape; while others, who had never seen a carpet, were observed walking round on the strip of bare floor, least by treading on the "handsome kaliker," they might spoil it.

The first tune seemed to put the whole company in ecstasies. The raw boned man, who was so much opposed to temperance tracts, pulled out a flask of whiskey, and insisted that the "gal," as he called Miss E., should drink. Another of the company laid down a dime, and wanted "that's worth" more of the "forty pains," as the name of the instrument had come to him after travelling through some five or six pronunciations. Another with a broad grin on his face, declared that he "would give his claim and all the truck on it if his darter could have such a cupboard!" The "pine forte" man suggested that if that sort of music had been in the Black Hawk war, "they would have skered the Injuns like all holler."

It is needless to say that it was late at night before Miss E. and the other ladies of the house could satisfy their delighted hearers that they were all tired out. The whole country for twenty miles round rung with the praises of Dr. A.'s "consarns" and "musikal kubbard." The doctor immediately had any quantity of patients, all of whom, however, would come in person for advice, or for "fever agur pills," but none of whom would leave without hearing the "forty pains."

With an easy and good natured disposition, Dr. A. soon formed an extensive acquaintance, obtained a good practice, and became a popular man. He was elevated to some of the most respectable offices in the gift of the people, one of which he held at the time of his death. So much for the charms of a piano forte!

ECONOMY IN A FAMILY.

There is nothing which goes so far towards placing young people beyond the reach of poverty, as economy in the arrangement of their domestic affairs. It is as much impossible to get a ship across the Atlantic with half a dozen bolts started, or as many bolt holes in her bottom, as to conduct the concerns of a family without economy. It matters not whether a man furnish little or much for his family, if there is a continual leakage in the kitchen or in the parlor, it runs away, he knows not how, and that demon, waste, cries more, like the horse-leech's daughter, until he that provides has no more to give. It is the husband's duty to bring into the house and it is the duty of the wife to see that nothing goes wrongly out of it; not the least article, however unimportant in itself, for it establishes a precedent; nor under any pretence, for it opens the door for ruin to stalk in. A man gets a wife to look after his affairs, and to assist him in his journey through life. The husband's interests should be the wife's care, and her greatest ambition carry her no farther than his welfare and happiness, together with that of her children. This should be her sole aim, and the theatre of her exploits in the bosom of her family, where she may do as much towards making a fortune as he possibly can do in the counting-room or workshop. It is not the money earned that makes a man wealthy; it is what is saved from his earnings. A good and prudent husband makes a deposit of the fruits of his labor with his best friend—and if that friend be not true to him, what has he to hope; if he dare not place confidence in the companion of his bosom, where is he to place it? A wife acts not for herself only, but she is the agent of many she loves, and she is bound to act for their good, and not for her own gratification. Her husband's good is the end at which she should aim—his approbation is her reward. Self-gratification in dress, or indulgence in appetite, or more company than his purse can well entertain, are equally pernicious. The first adds vanity to extravagance—the second fastens a doctor's bill to a long butcher's account, and the latter brings intemperance, the worst of all evils, in its train.

WOMAN. Man is the creature of interest and ambition. His nature leads him forth into the struggle and bustle of the world. Love is but the embellishment of his early life, or a song piped in the intervals of the acts. He seeks for fame, for fortune, for space in the world's thought, and dominion over his fellow men. But a woman's whole life is a history of the affections. The heart is her world—it is there her ambition strives for empire; it is there her avarice seeks for hidden treasures. She sends forth her sympathies on adventures, she embarked her whole soul in the traffic of affection—and if shipwrecked her cause is hopeless, for it is a bankruptcy of the heart. When disappointed she is like some tender tree, the pride and beauty of the grove; graceful in its form, bright in its foliage, but with the worm preying at its heart. We find it suddenly withering when it should be most fresh and luxuriant. We see it drooping its branches to the earth, and shedding leaf by leaf until wasted and perished away. It falls even in the stillness of the forest—and as we muse over the beautiful ruin, we strive in vain to recollect the blast or thunder-bolt that could have smitten it with decay.

TAKE IT EASY. The more quiet and peaceably we get on, the better for ourselves, the better for our neighbors. In nine cases out of ten, the wisest policy is, if one cheat you, to quit dealing with him; if he is abusive, to quit his company; if he slanders you, take care so to live as that nobody will believe him; no matter who he is, or how he misuses you, the wisest way is, generally, just let him alone. There is nothing better than this cool, calm, quiet way of dealing with the wrongs we meet.

HONEST PRIDE. If a man has a right to be proud of anything, it is of a good action, done as it ought to be, without any base interest lurking at the bottom of it.

House Maids. Major Noah thinks he has found out why "first rate waiting girls in England, make most indifferent servants in America," and says it is because "they all become infected with liberty and equality." Well, say I, that is right; but when a girl gets infected with superiority over our folks, it is unpleasant. Our landlady knows how to cook, etc, therefore no girl can get the better of her. She treats them kindly, yet with a prudent independence, and just dignity; and if all would observe that wisdom, they could do better than they do. But the main reason why we have good house help so scarce is, because our American girls, that know how to do house work, are foolish enough to kill themselves at some set-still employment, before they live out half their days, and work for less pay, too, than the stupidest Irish girl gets. The reason so many American girls become old maids, is because they lose their beauty so much by that sedentary "needle" life, that no man of taste wants them. I never knew a good house maid, but that was in demand by somebody for a wife.

BURNS. Burns, the poet, paid little deference to the artificial distinctions of society. On his way to Leith one morning, he met a man in hoddin gray a west country farmer. He shook him cordially by the hand, and stopped and conversed with him. All this was seen by a young Edinburgh blood, who took the poet roundly to task for his defect of taste. "Why, you fantastic gomeil," said the poet, "it was not the great coat, the Scotch bonnet and the Sanghar boot-hose, I spoke to, but the man that was in them; and the man, sir, for true worth, would weigh down you and me, and ten more such any day."

CURIOUS COINCIDENCE. Mr. William Reed, of Carlton, Orleans county, New York, born in Cummington, Hampshire county, Mass., was the 7th child of his parents, born the 7th day of June, in the year 1777, and was 75 years old the 7th day of June, 1847. He married 7 wives, by whom he had 7 children in 7 times 7 years. He was 7 times elected to the State Legislature, where he made 7 set speeches, and received for his services in the 7 sessions $777.

I'LL CONSULT MY WIFE. That is what old Judge Thatcher, of Massachusetts, said to Blount, of North Carolina, when they were members of Congress, at Philadelphia, and when the latter challenged the Judge to mortal combat: "I'll consult my wife, sir," replied the judge, taking off his three cornered hat, and making a bow; "and if she is willing, I'll favor you with a meeting."

THE DEAR PEOPLE. Place no confidence in those men who eternally prate about the interests of the dear people. What care they if you are half fed and half clothed, if they can make of you a tool to boost them on the ladder of fame and help them to a fat office? If men would learn to distrust the boaster or declaimer, and look into facts and reason themselves, we should not be tormented with the thou and office seekers which invest all our large towns and cities.

TELL THE TRUTH. Never have recourse to untruth, be it ever so small, or to help yourself out of ever so great a difficulty; for untruth leads ever into still greater difficulty, and besides this, it drives confidence out of the houses.

For the Quincy Patriot.

ETHER.

No recent discovery in science can compare in utility with that which is now the chief topic of discussion among the medical fraternity. I speak of the application of the Lethæan in cases of surgery. Experience has taught our most eminent surgeons, that mankind has been subjected to a vast deal of pain which might have been entirely avoided had this discovery been made at an earlier period. These remarks have their origin in the fact that the writer has recently been an eye-witness to a number of cases where the application of the Etherial has proved fully successful, and a patient in at least one. Dr. Bugbee, of this town, has for three months past, been making use of this valuable discovery in the most happy and successful manner.

Having often seen, I finally determined to test its worth, and after submitting for a night or two to the pain of a most severe tooth ache, I finally went to the Doctor and gave him instructions to extract the tormentor. I would give a circumstantial account of the whole operation, did I remember the slightest circumstance connected with it, but at an early stage in the proceeding I dropped asleep, had a pleasant dream and finally awoke with a large hole in my jaw and a tremendous "grinder" quietly reposing upon the table.

The Dr. has been equally successful in far more serious operations. A case of dislocation of the shoulder downward, which had remained neglected for a week, (until one arm exceeded the other in length at least four inches, after the attempt had been made in the usual style and defeated in consequence of the rigidity of the muscles) was successfully reduced by the assistance of Ether, and although sufficient was not inhaled to prevent all pain, yet the muscles were so far relaxed that the suffering was but slight.

In conclusion, I can only recommend such as are suffering, at once to free themselves from such ills of flesh as they may be heir to.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JULY 17, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

New York, July 14th, 1847.

"PRESIDING GENIUS" OF THE EDITORIAL CHAIR:

I arrived in this city, "Gotham," so denominated, on Sunday, July 4th, via the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad, and thence by steamboat. On the railroad I found the Conductor very gentlemanly, and who seemed to understand his business. On board of the steamer Massachusetts, little care for the comfort and convenience of the passengers was manifested; for myself and wife I paid two dollars for a narrow contrived state-room, the bedding of which, from appearance, had been used several trips, and the covering to the pillows torn and ragged. On other routes to Boston, one or more years previous, I found different accommodations, and in particular the Norwich and Worcester route. I must, however, mention, that the Baggage Master on board the Massachusetts, a Mr. Cole, son of a worthy gentleman of Weymouth, (Wm. Cole, I believe) is very attentive in his line of business, and from him, although an entire stranger, I received such courtesies as to lead to his acquaintance. Men in humble stations not unfrequently fill trusts with more urbanity and propriety than those who occupy higher posts of honor.

The 5th of July, celebrated as the glorious 4th, was a beautiful day, but exceedingly warm. "Al-dermanic," as you may term me in bodily corporation, I found hard work to endure the heat of the weather. Since my arrival on the 4th, we have had no rain until the evening of the 12th, and the thermometer has averaged about 90°. On Monday and Tuesday evenings last, we had delightful showers, and the air at present is very refreshing and invigorating from its effects. On the 5th, I saw one of the most brilliant military parades, connected with Independence, which ever fell to my lot to witness. The observance of our Country's Jubilee is celebrated in this city, in a worthy manner, corresponding with the forethought of John Adams, a patriot "all in all."

From the residence of my relative in Brooklyn, with whom I am sojourning, I observed the brilliant display of fireworks on the evening of the 5th inst.; almost every other dwelling was made the depot of this manifestation of gratitude and liberty—the whole heavens at times seemed to bespeak rejoicing on the occasion from the multitude of these heralds and emblems of liberty.

New York City may be called "dirty," to use a Yankee phrase, and yet a purifying renovative might pervade its limits. It needs other men in power, not governed by party cliques, but who seek the health and happiness of their fellow citizens.

During my stay, I have found an old acquaintance, Benj. Walker, who formerly resided in Salem; he now is the "mine host" of what is termed "Walker's Hotel" in Park Row. The situation is exceedingly delightful and pleasant. Mr. Walker what a landlord ever should be, and his house one to which the traveller may resort with every assurance of finding comfort and attention. Travellers should seek his "abiding place."

To celebrate Independence, such an uproar from midnight Sunday until Monday at midnight you cannot imagine—every boy able to attend was engaged in manifesting his love of liberty and zeal to commemorate the nation's birth day, by the discharge of "fire-crackers," pistols and rockets, which would seem to visitors from the land of "steady habits" as though all "bedlam was let loose."

Yesterday, I had an interview with Fuller, editor of the New York Mirror, the first paper in New York to espouse the cause of General Taylor, and place his name at its editorial head as the people's candidate for the Presidency. He continues to advocate his claims with great earnestness and ability. This paper, it will be recollected, was started by General Morris and N. P. Willis, and soon obtained a circulation among what is termed the "Upper Ten Thousand," and since it has fallen into the hands of the present able editor, Hiram Fuller, Esq., its circulation has increased not only with that class, but with the people generally. As the first paper advocating the claims of the "Old Hero" it has drawn around its standard a host of his friends and admirers, and should be elected it will undoubtedly become the organ of his administration in New York. Mr. Fuller is one of the most popular editors in New York, and deservedly, as his gentlemanly deportment, kindness of heart and urbane manners secure the friendship of all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance.

The Patriot's devoted servant,

THE EDITOR.

HISTORY OF MEXICO. F. Gleason, corner of Court and Tremont streets, Boston, has issued a history of Mexico from the earliest times to the present, comprising an account of the ancient inhabitants, the conquest by Cortes, the Spanish dominion, war of independence, and subsequent revolutions, Texas, Santa Anna and other leaders, etc., bringing a complete knowledge of Mexican history within the reach of every one. It was written by the accomplished writer and lecturer on Mexico, Samuel Gregory, A. M., and contains one hundred large pages, price 25 cents.

NEW HAMPSHIRE ELECTION. The election for two Members of Congress was held last week. In the first Congressional District, Amos Tick (whig) is elected, according to the Atlas, by nearly two thousand majority. In the 3d District, James Wil-gon (whig) is undoubtedly elected.

THE ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE. A correspondent, in Weymouth, says the paragraph in last week's Patriot, headed "Attempt at Suicide," was "incorrect and false." We gave our authority for the statement, but are inclined to think that our informant had not heard all the facts in the case. Our correspondent's letter is given below, that the public may learn both versions of the affair.

"It is true that Mrs. Laban Porter made an attempt upon her life by cutting her throat, but the medical gentleman referred to, as having rendered such prompt and skilful aid, acted a much less conspicuous part in the operations, than is represented in that communication. Dr. Ball happened to be at the next door to Mr. Porter's, at the time of the transaction, and was first called in. Dr. Field was immediately sent for, and when he arrived nothing had been done. He sewed up the wound and dressed it, being assisted by Drs. Brown and Ball. Now, whether the operation was performed skilfully or not, or whether it proved successful or not, I cannot say; but it seems due to truth and honesty, that facts, communicated through a public journal, should be stated correctly. This community are not willing to be deceived by such notices, nor do they esteem it an 'enviable reputation' acquired by such misrepresentation and falsehood.

AN EYE WITNESS.

THE EDITOR. Many enquiries have been made, the past week, as to the whereabouts of this 'distinguished' individual. By the following paragraph, which we find in the New York Mirror of Tuesday evening, it will be seen that he is in very comfortable quarters. We have frequently, during the hot weather, sighed for a 'lodge in some vast ice house,' and if we only had a 'kinsman in Brooklyn' or some other cool place, wouldn't we patronize him, eh? But here's the Mirror's paragraph: "John A. Green, Esq., the deserving editor of the Quincy Patriot, Mass., has arrived in this city, and is passing a few days with his kinsman and brother editor of the Merchants' Magazine, at his residence in Brooklyn. The Patriot is an independent, spirited journal, and conducted with marked ability. We notice recently that it inclines strongly towards the glorious old hero of Buena Vista for the next Presidency."

"FLORA'S FESTIVAL" AGAIN. The repetition of the Juvenile Oratorio, which took place on Monday evening, fully sustained the high reputation won on the former occasion. The young performers looked smiling and happy, the audience appeared highly delighted, and every thing passed off pleasantly, unless we except the clownish conduct of some overgrown children, who manifested their disapprobation of the well-merited applause bestowed on the performance, by hissing.

We hope the talents of Mr. Felt will be rightly appreciated, and rewarded with something more tangible than thanks and compliments.

THE LAUNCH. A Bark, of about two hundred and eighty four tons burthen, built by Mr. John L. Souther, was launched from his ship yard in this town, last Wednesday. She moved very gracefully into the 'drinks,' amid the shouts of quite a concourse of spectators. The new craft is named the Prescott, and owned, three-fourths in Boston and the remainder by Messrs. Seth Spear and Thomas J. Nightingale of this place. Capt. George Spear is her commander.

MENAGERIE. Read the description of the Golden Chariot on our first page. The grand caravan will enter this town at about ten o'clock next Tuesday, when our citizens will have an opportunity to see this wonderful vehicle. The beasts will be exhibited in the afternoon, on the Hancock Lot, it is presumed.

MYSTERIOUS AND FRENCH. An occurrence of a most singular character occurred at Oysterville, (Barnstable) on Sunday last, during the time in which the greater portion of the village were in church. A Mrs. Hinkley had placed her babe (about 2 months old) in the cradle, and left it asleep, having occasion to go up stairs a few minutes. On returning the child was gone, and a little while afterwards was discovered dead in the dock! It is supposed that some fiend, who was an enemy to Mr. Hinkley, had stolen the child, and ran to the wharf, a few rods from the house, and thrown it overboard. No one is yet suspected, and the deepest feeling is aroused among the people against the perpetrator of this awful murder.

This tragedy is rendered the more alarming from the fact that several attempts have been made of late to set fire to the dwelling of Mr. Hinkley.

DISASTER. The steamer Massachusetts, from New York for Fall River, on the night of the 9th instant, when off the New London Light Boat, in a thick fog, ran into a schooner, striking near the bow. The schooner is supposed to have been lying at anchor. The steamer immediately put about and lowered her boat to endeavor to discover the schooner, and offer assistance if necessary, but did not succeed in finding her. The Massachusetts had her bow stove in by the collision.

MASSACHUSETTS REGIMENT. A letter received in Boston from Captain Felt, dated at Ceralvo, 12th ult., announces that four companies of this regiment were in garrison at that place, under the command of Lieut. Col. Abbott; and that Colonel Wright with the remaining six had marched forward to Monterey. The rumor therefore that the regiment was ordered to Vera Cruz must be false. Company K has not been disbanded as heretofore reported, but the men have been transferred to the other companies temporarily.

ROBBERY. The store of Dr. Darius Brewer, in Dorchester Lower Mills, was broken into last Tuesday night, and about $150 worth of jewelry, &c. stolen. Three boys have been arrested, charged with the offence, one of whom was recently pardoned out of the House of Correction.

MEXICAN NEWS. Dates from the City of Mexico to the 19th June, have been received at New Orleans. The Boston Bee gives the following, received by Telegraph:—

The American prisoners, Gaines, Clay, Borland and others, had been released and ordered to be conducted to Tampico under a heavy escort. It is reported that they were fifty miles from Tampico by General Urea, who again retained them prisoners, and further, that Urea would attack Tampico with a large force.

Santa Anna was raising one million dollars by a forced loan, collected at the point of the bayonet. Accounts represent that active measures had been taken to fortify the approaches to the capital. No tidings had been received from Gen. Scott, except that he had abandoned Jalapa, which was in possession of the guerrillas.

Commodore Perry had returned from Tabasco to Vera Cruz. He had found the river impassable, and had marched from the mouth of the river to the town. The enemy fled after the first round. Four Americans were wounded, among them Lieut. May.

Accounts from Santa Fe, report an engagement between 70 men under Major Edmondson, and 400 Mexicans and Indians, about 150 miles southeast of Santa Fe. The Americans retreated, with the loss of two killed and three wounded. The Americans also lost all their horses.

A government train, under Captain Bell, had been attacked by a party of Indians. The Indians captured 150 cattle.

FIRE. A livery stable in Charles street, Boston, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday morning last. Four valuable horses died in the flames, and three carriages were burnt, one a very elegant coach, which we understand originally cost $1,200, and a dwelling house on Mount Vernon Avenue, known as the "Joel Lawrence house," in which the ill-fated Maria Bickford was murdered, was also destroyed. There is every reason to suppose that it was set designedly.

ANOTHER STORE ROBBERED IN QUINCY. On last Thursday night, the store of Mr. Frederic Hardwick, Jr., in this town, was entered and about one hundred and fifty dollars worth of goods, of various kinds, taken. The robbers also took a loaded gun which was in the store. It is supposed that one of the rogues was secreted in the store previous to its being closed for the night. This is the fourth robbery of this kind happening in town within a year.

A VETERAN DEPARTED. Hon. Seth Sprague of Duxbury, breathed his last, at his residence in that town, on the 9th inst. His age was about eighty,

MAINE. The Legislature of Maine have passed a bill, by the provisions of which, a plurality will hereafter elect members of Congress and County officers. They have also passed, by the requisite constitutional majority, an amendment to the present Constitution, providing for the election by a plurality of Governor and members of the State Legislature, both Senate and House.

The Secretary of War has made another requisition on Louisiana for two companies of mounted gunmen, to operate in the vicinity of Vera Cruz. A man has petitioned the Legislature of Maine for a grant of land because he has thirteen children and ought to have some way to support them. Not so laid a doctrine.

The Legislature of Connecticut, at its recent session, passed a law to exempt from attachment for debt the poor man's Homestead to the value of three hundred dollars.

A bill has passed the New Hampshire Legislature which restores the old militia law, with all its trainings and musters. It also provides for a training of the officers in brigades, for from three to five days every year, for which services they are to receive three dollars, and four cents per mile to and from the place of drill.

A report has been submitted to the City Council of Boston, recommending the purchase of Dorchester Heights, at forty cents a foot, and that $112,000 be appropriated for that purpose.

Henry Smith, the far-famed "Razor Strop Man," was arrested recently in Philadelphia for collecting a crowd of people around him in the thorough-fare, and held to bail in five hundred dollars for trial at Court, on a charge of misdemeanor.

Rev. David Fosdick, Jr., of Hollis street church, Boston, has sent in his resignation, to take effect in six months from 4th instant, the time in which the parties were to notify each other. The difficulty seems to be the want of funds to support public worship.

As some dozen boys were bathing in the Miami Canal, Cincinnati, recently, one of them got his foot into a nest of silver and other kinds of watches. Several of them had been valuable, and one contained a diamond, though most of them had been stripped of their cases. One boy got twenty-one watches, another eighteen, and none less than a watch apiece.

It is stated that on the borders of Lake Michigan, there are now in store, ready for transportation, a million of bushels of breadstuffs.

Letters have been received in Boston from Mexico, announcing the death of 1st Lieutenant Ellis B. Green, of Company I, Massachusetts Regiment.

A Democratic Legislative Convention, recently convened at Augusta, Me., nominated John W. Dana, the present Governor, as the candidate of the party for next year.

The fishermen on Cape Cod have generally returned from their first trips. The catch of cod and mackerel has thus far been about an average one for the vessels employed. The number of vessels engaged in the fisheries is not so large as on some former years.

The Chinese Junk, about which so much has been said, arrived in New York last week, 212 days from Canton. She is 150 feet long, built of teak wood, 700 tons burthen, and filled with curiosities. Her crew consists of 40 Chinamen and 20 Europeans, and her captain is an Englishman. Her appearance excited intense curiosity. She will be exhibited for several weeks, and then proceed to her port of destination in Great Britain.

The South Carolina papers, generally, are out in favor of Gen. Taylor for the next presidency.

The Exchange Bank, Boston, chartered by the last Legislature, went into operation on Thursday last. Fifty per cent of the capital, (which is $500,000) has been paid in.

The young gentlemen of Harvard College, charged with incendiarism, having confessed the offence before the case was presented to the grand jury, have received a college sentence instead of the more rigorous one which the offended laws of the commonwealth would inflict.

Col. Doniphan says that his famous Missouri boys have one more R than Gen. Taylor himself—they are Rough, Ragged and Ready.

Hon. Henry Clay was baptised on the 23d ult., in one of the beautiful ponds on his own estate, near Lexington. He united with the Episcopal Church, but demanded immersion.

Hon. Timothy Farrar, of H. Ellis, N. H., and Dr. Ezra Green, of Dover, N. H., both completed their 100th year on the 11th inst., and are both graduates of Harvard University.

Professor Mitchell has discovered a new cluster of stars, one thousand in number, to which he has given the name of Beechoide. Their appearance is singular. They are of a blue tinge, and emit an unsteady light. They seem to revolve in a spiral orbit.

The Irish Relief Committee of New Orleans have remitted to Ireland, at various times, provisions valued at $50,000.

The Day Line between New York and Boston, via Long Island, is shortly to be resumed, the Cleopatra steamer to supply the connection between Greenport and Albany's Point.

Mr. Parkman, the British Minister, was amongst the passengers for Liverpool who sailed from Boston in the steamship Cambria.

Major Edward Webster, of the Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteers, is now at Marshfield. He is gradually regaining his health. In consequence of his election as major he has declined the appointment of aid to Gen. Cushing.

The President arrived in Washington on the 7th inst., much pleased, the Union says, with his tour. A reporter of the New York Herald, accompanied him on his travels, and is to publish the doings in a book. All the members of the Cabinet are, it is believed, now at their posts.

Charles W. Woodbury, formerly editor of the Salem Advertiser, and Postmaster of Salem, was drowned at New Orleans the last of June. He had taken passage for Boston in ship Emily Taylor. His body was recovered and a coroner's inquest was held on it on the 24th ult. One account says he jumped overboard.

O. H. Tillotson, late of the Second Universalist Society in Lynn, has accepted a call to take the pastoral charge of the Universalist Society in Methuen.

DIED.

In this town, 14th inst., Mr. Ezra Glover, aged 77.

On Pettauck's Island, (Boston Harbor,) 2d inst., Mr. John Cleverly, formerly of this town, aged 75.

Dear father, I had thought thou couldst have died!

I might not weep for thee;

But I forgot, when by thy side,

That time would ever be o'er,

When I on thee should look my last,

And thou shouldst smile no more.

Dear father, still upon that face I look,

And think 'twill smile again;

And still the thought I cannot brook,

That I must look in vain.

But when I speak thou dost not say

What thou'st ne'er left unsaid,

And now I feel, as well I may,

Dear father, thou art dead.

If thou wouldst stay 'e'en as thou art,

All cold and all serene,

I still might press thy silent heart,

And where thy smile has been.

While 'e'en the chill, bleak core I have,

Thou seemest still mine own,

But there, I lay thee in the grave

And we are left to mourn.

ON the Petition of APPLETON HOWE and others, presented at a meeting of said Commissioners at Dedham on the 27th day of October last, by adjournment from the September term then next preceding, praying that a new public highway may be laid out in the town of Braintree, from a point at or near the Westerly end of a town road in Weymouth, near the Rail Road crossing, over lands of John Vining, heirs of Cotton Tuffs and of Samuel Penniman, to a point on Liberty Street, so called, near the house of said Samuel Penniman. And also that certain alterations may be made in said Town Road in Weymouth called West Street. The Commissioners having duly notified, met and heard all parties interested in the matter of said petition, and viewed said roads, do now adjudge that common convenience and necessity require that said new public highway should be laid out as prayed for, without the alteration of said Town Road.

It is therefore Ordered, That the County Commissioners will meet at the house of said Samuel Penniman in Braintree, on FRIDAY, the sixth day of August next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to proceed to lay out and locate said new highway. And that an attested copy of this adjudication and order be served upon the Clerks of the towns of Braintree and Weymouth thirty days, at least, before the said day of meeting, and that like copies be posted up in two or more public places in each of said towns of Braintree and Weymouth, fourteen days, at least, before said day, and also that a like copy be published three weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed in Quincy the last publication thereof to be fourteen days at least before said day, that all persons and parties interested may then and there appear and be heard if they see fit.

To the Honorable the County Commissioners within and for the County of Norfolk:

THE subscribers, inhabitants of the town of Weymouth in said County of Norfolk, respectfully represent, that application was made to the Selectmen of said town by John W. Loud and others, for a Town-way from Washington Street to land of Nancy White within said town of Weymouth, the same being forty one rods and fifteen and a half links in length and running over land of Thomas C. Webb, George S. Holden, George S. Cove, Justin C. Wright and Nancy White, where a way has already been laid out and worked by the said proprietors of the land aforesaid. That said Selectmen gave due notice and heard all parties interested, as well those against as those for said application, and thereupon proceeded to lay out said Town-way agreeably to the prayer contained in the application thereof. That said Selectmen reported the same to the town at a public meeting thereof, which was held on the fifth day of April last, having filed the laying out thereof, and then proceeded to approve and allow of such Town-way so laid out by the Selectmen as aforesaid, and to place the same upon the records of said town agreeably to the law in such case provided, a true copy of which said laying out by the Selectmen, together with the action of the town thereon will be produced. And your petitioners would further represent that they feel much aggrieved at such unreasonable refusal and delay of said town to approve and allow of said Town-way and to cause the same to be entered on the records of the town, agreeably to the law in such case provided. They therefore pray that your Honors, after giving due notice to all persons interested, would approve and allow of said Town-way, and would further direct that said laying out and acceptance thereof be recorded by the Clerk of said town, agreeably to the law in such case made and provided. As in duty bound will ever pray.

JOHN W. LOUD and 78 others.

MENAGERIE

RECENTLY Fitted and Embellished with Entirely New Decorations, Trappings, Equipage, &c. for 1847—containing an extensive and varied collection of the most rare and interesting productions of Nature, which afford to all an ample source for study and reflection on the science of Natural History.

This Menagerie, on entering each Town or Village, forms a most imposing Train or Procession, preceded by a Gorgeous

ROMAN CHARIOT,
LITERALLY COVERED WITH GOLD.

The splendor and magnificence of this Gorgeous and Colossal Carriage baffles description. Whoever has read of the funeral Chariot of Alexander, or the Triumphal Car of Nero, may form some conception of the grandeur of this superlatively beautiful vehicle, which was taken from an antique model recently exhibited in London. It has required the constant labor of twenty men for nine months to complete it, at an expense of more than Five Thousand Dollars!

The length of Chariot, 30 feet.
Height to summit of Canopy, 20 ft.
The weight in full, 8000 lbs.

The Chariot will be followed by THIRTY CARRIAGES, containing the VARIOUS ANIMALS IN THIS IMMENSE EXHIBITION, drawn by ONE HUNDRED HORSES!

The Exhibition of this Menagerie is rendered interesting by the Wonderful and unparalleled Performance of

MR. PIERCE,
The great Napoleon of the age, with

LIONS, TIGERS, & LEOPARDS.
This great Artist will fondle, caress, and render himself, apparently, as one of these Animals in their own Den. After this he assumes command, orders each to their respective departments, and finally dignifies himself by

DRIVING AN AFRICAN LION IN HARNESS!
The animals in this collection are confidently offered for public inspection, as being the choicest and most perfect specimens ever exhibited. The majority of them have been imported during the last two years, without regard to price, and they form not only the BEST but the LARGEST COLLECTION ever presented to the public.

The Menagerie will Exhibit at QUINCY, on Tuesday, July 20th, 1847.

The PROCESSION will enter Town about ten o'clock in the morning.

Admission only 25 cents—children under 10 years, 12 1-2 cents. Doors open from 1 to 4 P. M.

The above will Exhibit at South Bridgewater on SATURDAY, July 17th, and Randolph on MONDAY, July 19th.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.
OUR FATHERS' LEGACY.

FRIEND GREEN—I wrote the following lines some years ago, on some public occasion, I forget what. I believe they have never been published.

Our fathers crossed the Atlantic waves,
And sought the rock where ocean waves,
For freedom or for women's graves,
The Rock of the Old Colony.
The Eagle from her pine top nest,
Whose shadow kissed the ocean's breast,
Exulting, and each venturous guest,
And show'd them to her progeny.

Fair poetry beheld the sign,
My ard, she cried, can sure divine—
These eagle hearted souls are mine,
The daring sons of Liberty.
Behold this pilgrim band forlorn,
The mitred and the sceptred corn,
With sickness, toil and famine worn,
These children of a Deity.

Along the shore the wild winds howled,
Around their camp the savage prowled,
The gloomy heavens above them scowled,
A starless, death-pall canopy.
The pilgrim breathed no murmuring sigh,
In faith he fixed his hopes on high,
And vowed to conquer or to die,
For freedom and posterity.

And soon the pilgrims' souls were tried;
With famine many a stout heart died,
Yet 'e'en in death they dared confide
In God, who giveth victory.
Before that brave surviving band,
The conquer'd savage fled the land,
Returning sun beams warm'd the sand,
And hope became reality.

Before their strokes the forest rood'd,
The secret earth her stores reveal'd,
And Freedom crown'd the barren field,
The altar of America.
Descendants of the pious few,
Who suffered, toiled and bled for you,
Think what you owe that gallant crew,
Those pioneers of Liberty.

The sons have ne'er their sires disgraced,
Through them the pilgrim's blood is traced,
Their fathers' for they boldly faced,
And heaven awarded victory.
They bent the British lion down,
And tore the jewels from his crown;
Hail, Independence, 'tis our own,
Our gallant fathers' legacy.

To Independence strike the lyre,
We'll hail it till the world's on fire,
And bless the son and bless the sire,
Who hushes freedom's jubilee.
God bless their hearts and move their hands,
Who in our own or foreign lands,
Are breaking down oppression's bands,
The accursed bands of Slavery.

KISSING.

Oh quit—get out—now don't you—
I really wish you wouldn't.
Oh, quit it—will you? Oh get out—
You know you ought to shoul'dn't.
There now you've got it—oh, he snail—
You shan't have any more;
You've got—oh! take your face away—
What no man's got before.

—there—that will do." Oh don't,
You're rumples my hair!
If you'll but quit I'll give you—
Now take it, there—there—there—

ANECDOTES.

A celebrated teacher of Grammar, once on a time set his class to parsing the following lines from Pope:
"Heaven from all creatures hides the book of fate—
All but the page prescribed," etc.

The word all, in the second line, had been parsed, when coming to the word but, and directing his eye to the next pupil, the master said, "But! the next. No sooner was the word out, than a pupil went the head of the pupil into the broad basket of his next neighbor. "Boo! hoo! hoo!" roared the latter most lustily. "What are you about, there?" said the master to the former. "An' bawling the next, sir, as you told me to," replied the lad.

"Why do you walk so near the railroad?" said a lady to her daughters, very fine girls, who had passed their teens without being married. "Because, mamma," they replied, "we thought we might catch some sparks from the locomotive."

A flatterer having called the attention of Cromwell, as he was passing near Tyburn, to the multitude of people that thronged about him, and exclaimed: "See what a concourse attends your triumph?" The proctor replied with a smile: "There would be a much greater one if I were going to be hanged."

A silly conceit attempted on a recent occasion, to play off some of Cervantes'—as before a sensible young lady, who chanced to be his partner at a ball. He commenced by looking full in her face, with an expression of wonderful softness in his eyes, then wriggled himself into various tender attitudes, and finally clapping his hands to his side, he lispingly said: "If it is not love I feel, pray what is it?" "Perhaps," replied the young lady, "something bites you." The story got whispered about the ball-room, and the conceit was soon numbered among the missing.

"Bill, what brought you to prison?" "A couple of constables, sir." "And had liquor any thing to do with it?" "Yes sir, Eliza teased me so I had to lick her."

It is stated that Santa Anna foamed with rage when he ran off from Cerro Gordo—whereupon a Western editor thinks it is very likely, as he was uncocked.

A lady, a regular "shopper," who had made a clerk tumble over all the stockings in his shop, objected that none were long enough. "I want the very longest hose that are made," she said. "Then, madam, you had better apply at the next Engine House."

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to the community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality, at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS JOURNAL, BOOKS, or any other articles, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be acceptable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULATING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading of a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c.

To all we say "encourage home manufacture, and patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign."

MISCELLANY.

LOVE IN THE WET.

We were once in love, we were; and we think any body else, having a heart half as susceptible as ours, would have been so too—under similar circumstances.

It was on a Sunday night—the weather was clear and beautiful, and the inviting peals of the church bells fell not idly on the ears of the seekers after truth. Being rather of a religious turn of mind, we joined the concourse who were seeking forgiveness in advance for the intended transgressions of the coming week, and were soon a participant in the exercises of the evening. The preacher was popular; the subject had been 'given out' the Sunday previous, and the church was quite full. Everything went on smoothly, until near the close of the sermon, when the audience were startled by loud and prolonged peals of thunder, followed by the half stifled sound of heavy rain.

Here was a predicament, the anticipated consequences of which were observable upon almost every face. Silks and broadcloths were evidently likely to suffer,—and from the moment that conviction arose, the interest in the closing remarks of the preacher became an absolute idea. Shortly after, the congregation were dismissed—then began a scene infinitely amusing.

In that vast concourse, there were, perhaps not more than half a dozen umbrellas, the owners of which though for the most part strangers in town, suddenly discovered that they were known to almost the entire congregation. It was our good fortune not to be one of the caught ones—though in fact we never are caught in the rain. We edited an almanac once, and can see the weather at least twenty-four hours ahead—consequently we had come paraphed with one of Sleeper's best. This interesting fact had no sooner become known, than we became a lion of no small magnitude.

Why how are you, Brown, my dear fellow
—how do you do? said a drapper little chap, with a very glossy hat, catching us by the hand and shaking it violently, as we were el-bowing our way towards the door.

'My name is not Brown, sir,' said we.

'Not Brown? sir.'

'No, sir, my name is not Brown—my name is Smith.'

'Ah, yes, Smith; so it is Smith; why how do you do, Smith? It is strange I should call you Brown, when I know you are Smith; but the fact is, the two names sound so much alike, that I invariably confound the one with the other. Quite an unexpected storm, Mr. Smith.'

We assented.

'You go some distance up town Mr. Bro—Smith, I believe?'

'No, sir,' we replied; 'on the contrary, I go some distance down town.'

The little man suddenly recollected that he had ladies in charge, and begged we would excuse him. After shaking hands with some fifty others whom we had never seen before, and answering innumerable anxious inquiries relative to the state of our health, we managed to reach the door, but could get no farther, as the entire space beneath the portico was densely crowded; here umbrellas were not so very scarce, but amid the general confusion, the persons they had come for. By and by, the crowd became somewhat thinned, and we commenced edging our way out. We had nearly reached the side walk, when our eyes rested on a fairy-like form, standing resignedly against one of the pillars that upheld the por-tico. A ray of light from the church door fell upon her person, and disclosed a face of surpassing loveliness. She appeared quite young, perhaps not more than seventeen, and seemed entirely unaccompanied; but by the occasional glance towards the street, she evidently expected some one. Here was a field for the philanthropist;—beauty unaccompanied caught in the rain, and without an umbrella, and being somewhat of a philanthropist, we at once resolved to cultivate it. Stepping up to her, we politely and respectfully inquired if she expected company to call for her? She answered in the affirmative, but expressed her fears of disappointment, as it was getting late. We then tendered her our arm and umbrella; (we never lend umbrellas to staid ladies unaccompanied by ourselves;) and they were accepted, and our very heart trembled as we felt the yielding softness of that exquisitely moulded arm resting upon our own. We left the church, and by turning a cross street soon found ourselves alone. The rain in the meantime, had increased in violence; our umbrella was none of the largest, but we contrived, by holding all of it over our fair charge, to keep her, at least, perfectly dry. To be sure, in consequence of this self-denial, our fine plush hat was melting down fast, and our bran new coat was getting more than a necessary 'sponging'; but what of that? Hats are cheap, and tailors are credu-lous; besides, divinites are not to be met with at all times. We had but one fear, and that was that our walk would speedily terminate.

We wanted to speak, we wanted to say something sweet, but was never so much at a loss in our life for a subject. We couldn't look up at the heavens and talk of the stars, for there were none to talk about—so, in the absence of something better, we were obliged to fall back upon our favorite theme, and anathematize the city fathers for not giving us more light and flagstone crossings at the intersections of the streets; though for the first time in our life, we secretly blessed them for the absence of both, for the almost Egyptian darkness, and the profusion of duck ponds, rendered it absolutely necessary that we should partly hand and partly carry our fair charge over the many watery and muddy obstacles that presented themselves. At times, when a more than usually swollen gutter rendered it necessary to clasp her hand with a sort of non-committal fergency, we fancied—may we were almost certain, we felt a slight tremulous response. Oh!

what bliss, what ecstasy; it sent the blood tingling to our very finger ends, and we could not help giving a squeeze less equivocal than its predecessors. We had now walked some dozen squares, and were completely wrapped in an elysium of our own creation, when we were startled by an exclamation from our sweet companion.

'Mercy on me! I fear I have lost the way.'

We at once proposed to retrace our steps and start anew. This she laughingly declined, and after a minute survey of the objects around her, seemed satisfied of her whereabouts. On, on we trudged again, some dozen squares farther, when we began to felicitate ourselves upon the probability of a termination of our pedestrian or rather (at least so far as we, individually, were concerned) aquatic exercises, for some time to come. We had just made our mind up to the delivery of something particularly sentimental, when the musical voice of our companion put a stop to it—

'This is our cottage.'

Our cottage! our cottage! ours!—we tho't
we had never heard anything half so sweet.
The tone, too, in which the words were spoken!
It fell upon our ear like the voice of a Zephyr filtered thro' a honey comb. We raised our eyes for a minute to contemplate the scene of our future devotions, and by the aid of a neighboring lamp—the result of private enterprise—discovered a cottage indeed—a sweet little two story building, with woodbees creeping over the windows and door. It was so quiet, too, so unobtrusive, so out of the way, so apparently inaccessible to all but love; and as we gazed enraptured upon its simplicity, visions of hours to come—hours of blissful commingling of soul with soul, flitted through our mind. Leaving the umbrella for a moment in the hand of our fairy companion, we ascended the steps, and placing our hand upon a delicate little bell-pull, rang. We waited a reasonable time but received no answer. In the meanwhile, we had been gazing upon the cottage as a dream to the whole neighborhood, for it came from the eaves upon our devoted head in a perfect torrent. But what did we care? We even shifted our position a few inches, to that we might receive the heaviest jet, in order to show how indifferent we were to all things save her. Finding our summons not likely to be answered, we rang again. In a moment after we heard footsteps, and the door was opened by quite a good looking young man, who yawningly inquired if it was raining. Before we had time to answer, though an answer was scarcely necessary, our divinity, who by this time had stepped into the doorway, interrupted us with—

'Permit me to make you acquainted with my husband, sir; then turning to that individual, she continued, 'My dear, this gentleman had the kindness to tender me his arm and umbrella.'

'Much obliged to you,' said he, closing the door in our face.

We did not reply—we couldn't. From habit we came near saying, 'you're welcome, sir,' but the words stuck in my throat, and—and—we drew in love now.

BLASTING A HEAD OF HAIR.

Major, what turned your hair white?

My hair, Jim! Why, by the Lord Harry my hair was once as black as a nigger's face in an eclipse. When I was in the last war, it streamed in the wind like a shining horse-tail.
But it has got blasted here in the mines.

But how happened that, Major? You look quite hale and hearty, young enough yet to marry one of the gals.

'Why, Jim, about twelve years ago, when I first came to the mines, I got into a bit of a row with Jake Ropes, who was one of the bullies then—licked up—burnt out now, a mere old hulk—we had a bit of a fight which began in a game of crack lie; and I flaked him like thunder; however it passed off at that, and the next spring, Jake and I were prospering together.— We had sunk a rock shaft fifty feet. The patient safety fuse had just come in fashion, and we thought we would try to blast with it. We had drilled a hole right plum in the bottom of the shaft with a churn drill, thirty inches deep.
Jake staid below to put the charge of powder in,
and cracked away with the tamping iron, putting in a half yard extra of safety fuse and as soon as he had got everything right, pulled the tools into the bucket, roared out "hoist," and I drew him out with the windlass. Says I, Jake where are your matches? Didn't you light the fuse? No, said Jake; blow me if I put on that blast. Enough said, said I. So taking the matches, I struck my foot in the noose of the rope, and Jake let me down, I all the time charging Jake to—now, says I, as soon as I light the fuse and sing out "rope," do you jerk me up out of the shaft quicker than shooting
I got to the bottom, and—I felt a little dubious
—but I draws a match across my left coat sleeve, and touches the blaze to the end of the fuse, and it began to fizz-z-z—"hoist!" says I,

Up I went about ten feet, and their I hung dangling.

Jake, says I, for God's sake—

What's the matter? says Jake, looking down
the hole, laughing like a fiend.

Hoist, I screamed. In another minute I shall be blown to—

Oh! you infernal old scoundrel. Next time jump on Jake when he is drunk, and lick him, will you? All this time the safety fuse was fizzing away like a haltered comet. I felt the chills creeping along my back and curling and mantling over my scalp.

Jake took a pin and stuck into the frame of the windlass, you know, so as to project and fasten the handle of the windlass beam; then looked into the shaft and grinned at me like an incarnate devil. I have you now, said he; just do you hang there, Major, till hell bids you off.
And there I did hang for fifteen minutes, with that infernal fuze hissing under me—it was a little eternity of hell condensed. At last the fuze burnt out, and Jake drew me out of the shaft, scared nearly to death.

Didn't the blast go off, Major?

Go off! No! Don't you think, Jake had charged the rock with just no powder at all, cracking away there with his tamping rod half an hour, to ram the hole full of dry sand! He did, as sure as you are born, Jim—the infernal scoundrel! and when I got home and looked in the glass, my hair was as white as a snow bark —and all the hair-dye in God's creation can't never make it black no more! What is your hair-dye worth a bottle?—Wisconsin Herald.

THE BEAUTY AND HER LOVERS.

Mr. Russell in describing the Schneekoppe, a high mountain in Silesia, introduces the following story: "On a scanty and bold projection of the rock, stands the ruins of the Kienast, which is so separated on every side from the body of the mountain by precipitous dells, except where a narrow ledge on the south connects it with the hill, that the rising of a

NEW SCHOOL BOOKS.

There is nothing in which the great character of our country is more distinctly marked than its school books. A comparison of these with those of England, France or Germany, will at once display and explain the advance which popular education has made, and is making in these United States. The frequent change made in our school manuals is necessary result of constant improvements which are being made in this humble but important branch of literature. This change in fact, is nothing more than keeping up with the times, and that to lag behind would be an inexcusable folly.

The improvement that has been made in our country within the last ten years, and in the humblest class we are making in the race of education. We are led to make these observations by looking over a set of readers, just issued from the press of G. S. Boardman & Co. This is a new edition, of the Comprehensive Series, edited by S. G. Goodrich, and first issued some half dozen years ago. The name of the author, and the excellence of the compilations carried them at once into large circulation. The present edition is a version of the former one, and appears to us to possess extraordinary merit, in point of mechanical execution. They seem in several respects, to surpass all other works of the kind. The engravings are new, and appear to have been drawn with skill, and careful adaptation to their purpose.

The First Reader is a gem in its way, not only on account of its typographical and pictorial beauty, but because of the art with which its lessons are contrived to contract the ABC class.

The Second and Third Readers in this series are chiefly original, and present a great variety of pleasing lessons calculated to beckon the young learner forward as he climbs the steps of knowledge. A vein of kindness, charity and piety runs through them all, and lessons of moral obligation to self and to society, are suggested if not openly inculcated at every step.

The fourth volume must prove a favorite in the schools. It embraces a large number of lessons in every variety of styles, almost every one of which, presents some strong points of interest. It is a volume superior in interest, even to an adult reader, to almost any of the collections which have been made merely for the sake of pleasing.

The fifth rises to the highest kind of literature, and affords a very ample collection of choice pieces from the great masters of all ages and countries; we are glad to see the numerous specimens from the works of our own countrymen, and to remark that they lose no lustre when they stand side by side with the most brilliant extracts from transatlantic authors.

We cannot do a better service to the public than to give this elaborate series a hearty recommendation. The publishers seem to have spent their money freely in their production. In several points of view they seem entitled to particular praise. The superiority and fitness of the engravings, the careful graduation of the lessons from the very simplest to the highest productions of genius; the care bestowed upon the cultivation of piety, truth, charity, humanity and piety; the attractive and interesting character of the lessons themselves; the great diversity of important topics they discuss, and finally, the large quantity of matter they contain, entitle these volumes to public patronage, and will doubtless render them favorites in all our schools. We may add, that due attention appears to have been paid from the beginning to the end of this series to the cultivation of the art of education. And if the simple and effective rules laid down become good readers.—Boston Mail.

LIGHTNING AND TELEGRAPH WIRES. Professor Olmstead, of Yale College, says he has no doubt that the wires of the telegraph have an effect on electricity. "As the storm comes up, and especially when over the wires, say fifty or a hundred miles distant, the lightning is attracted by the wires, which can be proved by any one remaining in the telegraph office for half an hour. About the time the storm is coming up the wires are continually filled with electricity. It is my opinion we shall never have any heavy thunder showers or hear of lightning striking, as long as we have telegraph wires spread over the earth."

THE WORKS AT LAWRENCE. The dam across the Merrimack, at the new town of Lawrence, says the Salem Gazette, is to be, when completed, 900 feet in length, 36 wide at the bottom, 12 feet at the top, and varying in height from 25 to 40 feet, according to the bottom of the river. It is constructed of heavy stones laid in cement. It is intended that the dam shall be completed before winter sets in. The canal, from which water is to be used, is a mile in length, following the bend of the river, at a distance from it of about 400 feet—100 feet wide at its mouth and 60 at the termination, with a depth of 12 feet. The Atlantic Mills, already commenced, stretch down the river 1500 feet, where they strike the Bay State Mills, of 1000 feet in length. The mills of these two corporations, when finished, will form a continuous line of smooth wall, of half a mile. The mills of the Atlantic Company will surpass in magnitude and solidity any other similar structure.

The Washington Union records the marriage of a Mr. John Soule, to Miss Mary Schaub.

The substitution of cold water for oil, on the axles of railroad cars, has been tried for several weeks, and found to answer the purpose admirably. It is stated that this discovery will save to the Reading Railroad alone, $45,000 a year. It is applied to the axle-tree by means of a small wheel armed with buckets, and enclosed within the box that confines the end of the axle and contains the water. Its operation is similar to that of the trough of water under the grindstone.

For the Quincy Patriot.

DOGS.

MR. EDITOR.—I was in hopes that when the By-Laws, reported by the Selectmen, were accepted by the town, it would have the effect to diminish in some degree, the great multitude of dogs in this place. But it is not so. One can hardly step without treading on a dog, and the noise of their fighting is the most frequent sound in our streets. It is time, if the reputation of this place is of any value, that such disgraceful scenes were stopped, in some way or other.

For the Quincy Patriot.

A REFORM NEEDED.

MR. EDITOR.—Can't you recommend some remedy for that outrageous howling of some of your neighbors' dogs? It would be very satisfactory to all about here to have either that dismal noise or the dogs (it matters not which) removed.

Yours, &c.,

E. S. L.

FROM MEXICO. The news from Mexico is somewhat important, if true. Various rumors are afloat, the purport of which is that the Mexican government has accepted the mediation of England.

The British Secretary of Legation has had an interview with General Scott, at Puebla, and a treaty had been drawn up, the basis of which was the surrender of the two Californias to the Americans; the recognition of the independence of Texas; and the establishment of the 36th degree of latitude as the northern boundary.

The election of President had failed, us only fifteen States had voted.

When the Mexican Congress assembled on the 24th ult, only sixty-six members took their seats, whereas seventy-one constitutes a quorum.

It is stated that American prisoners on their way from the capital to Huejula, were suffering greatly for want of food.

Gen. Scott was expected to march on the capital the 24 or 4th inst.

FROM EUROPE. The steamship Britannia, from Liverpool July 4th, arrived at Boston last Saturday. The news brought is fifteen days later but is not of much interest, except the further decline in the price of flour. The prospects of a good harvest is still more favorable. It is thought that Parliament will be dissolved about the 24th inst. and electioneering is therefore the order of the day throughout the kingdom. The Britannia brought out $170,953 in specie.

The Queen has conferred upon the Rev. Theobald Matthew, better known as "Father Matthew," a pension of £300 per annum; also, a pension of £100 a year upon the child of the highly gifted but unfortunate author, Thomas Hood; on the widow of Dr. Chalmers a pension of £200 a year.

The supply of food still continues to pour into Ireland. On the 27th of June fifteen vessels entered Cork, having on board 3,500 tons of bread stuffs. Generally the accounts are much less unfavorable as to the extent of fever and destitution.

Final arrangements are made for the conveyance of the remains of Mr. O'Connell to their native and last home.

THE REVENUE. The Washington Union publishes a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, in which he states that the gross receipts from customs from the 1st of December, 1846, to the 10th of July, 1847, under the tariff of 1846, compared with the same period of the previous year under the tariff of 1842, exhibits an increase of the tariff of 1846, of $4,400,000. This is exclusive of the duties accrued on goods in warehouses under the new warehousing law. It is nearly half a million, and will make the total augmentation of duties accrued during the first seven months and ten days, of the tariff of 1846, compared with the same time under the tariff of 1842, about one million and a half of dollars.

"CHICAGO CONVENTION." A Convention, composed of persons interested in the improvement of Western navigation, from the different States in the Union, recently met at Chicago, to devise means for the furtherance of that object. A "Declaration of Sentiments" was adopted, and provisions made for the publication and distribution of the proceedings among the people. The fifteenth article of the "declaration" is as follows:—

"That we disavow all and every attempt to connect the cause of internal trade and commerce among the States, with the fortunes of any political party; but that we mean to place that cause upon such immutable principles of truth, justice, and constitutional duty, as shall command the respect of all parties, and the deference of all candidates for public favor."

FUNERAL OBSEQUES. The remains of the late Capt. George Lincoln, son of Ex-Governor Lincoln of Worcester, who fell at the battle of Buena Vista, on the 24th of February, recently arrived at Boston, and on Thursday last were carried to his native place for burial. The ceremonies on the occasion were very imposing. The remains left Boston under a large military escort, and a vast concourse of citizens, and on their arrival a Worcester were delivered to the custody of the relatives at the mansion of his father. After the customary burial services had been performed, the remains were deposited in a lot presented to the friends of Capt. Lincoln by the owners of Rural Cemetery, the military discharging a volley over the grave.

The horse of the deceased, which has been purchased and presented to his father, was caparisoned and led in the procession.

FATAL RAILROAD ACCIDENT. An accident occurred on the Norwich and Worcester Railroad on the 20th inst., by which the engineer and one passenger were killed and the fireman dangerously hurt. It seems two cars, loaded with iron, became detached from the freight which was rising on an inclined plane, and descended with great rapidity till they came in collision with the accommodation train from Worcester. The crash was considerable beside the loss of life.

ROBIN PAVING. A portion of one of the streets in Fayetteville, (N. C.) is paved with robin. A writer to the Boston Post says he has driven over this novel pavement several times, and a capital road it makes. It has a beautiful clear look, presenting a smooth, hard surface, and it never rots. The manufacturer means to cast it into blocks of the right shape and size for constructing aqueducts, etc.

INSOLVENCY CASE. We have been requested to say, that the Insolvency case of Otis Shepard and Company, the messenger's notice of which was published in this paper the two past weeks, has been settled by mutual consent, and further proceedings stopped.

NEW INVENTION. A young machinist of Salem, (Mass.) has made an improvement in the loom for weaving cotton, by which the movement of the shuttle is effected without noise and considerable addition made to the speed of the loom. Like most improvements in machinery, it will benefit the capitalist more than the laborer.

BODY FOUND. The body of a young man was recently found on Scituate beach, near White's Ferry in East Marshfield. It had probably been in the water some time, as the hands were gone, and nothing remained of the head but the skull. Wales Tilden, Jr., coroner, took charge of the body.

SONS OF TEMPERANCE. The Quincy Division of the Sons of Temperance has, we learn, been organized in this place. The principles of the order will be set forth at the Town Hall, this evening, as will be seen by the notice in another column.

LEGAL WEIGHT. The following table, giving the number of pounds to the bushel, of the different articles enumerated, may be of service: Wheat, 60; corn 56; clover seed 60; potatoes 60; buckwheat seed 52; salt 50; barley 48; ester oil beans 56; hemp seed 44; timothy seed 56; oats 24; bran 20; blue grass seed 14; penicils, (dried,) 33; apples, (dried,) 22; store coal 70.

DIVIDENDS. The Massachusetts Cotton Mills at Lowell have declared a semi-annual dividend of four per cent, and the York Manufacturing Co., at Seco, Me., have declared a semi-annual dividend of six per cent., payable this month.

FALL ELECTIONS. Elections are to be held in Kentucky, Indiana, Iowa, and Alabama, on the 2d of August next, and in Tennessee and North Carolina on the 5th. Members of Congress and of the local Legislatures are to be chosen in all these States, and Governors in Alabama and Tennessee.

HOW TO FRY FISH. A writer says fish should be cooked in this manner: "Put the fish into the fat while the fat is boiling hot; and there should always be fat enough for the fish to float. If the fish is put into cool fat, or what is not boiling hot it absorbs all the fat and is not fit to eat. If the fish is put into shallow fat it falls to the bottom of the pan and burns, adhering so close that it cannot be taken out without breaking in pieces. Fried fish should be cooked quick, and trouts or smelts, cooked well, will have no bones to trouble the muncher."

WARNING. A man in Ohio recently lost seventy-five dollars in consequence of not taking a newspaper. "He sold six hundred bushels of wheat at twelve and a half cents less than the prices quoted in the papers while his wiser neighbor, who had possessed himself of the information, obtained the full value."

USE OF ETHER. The London correspondent of the Boston Traveller writes that the use of ether in England is now doing much more harm than good. Nurses give it to children and ladies take it for the agreeable sensation it produces! It has been proved, however, that unlike the effects of opium, it leaves the slave to it only an imbecile, drivelling idiot. Dr. Pickford also gives some alarming facts. He says that ether produces a chemical alteration in the vital constituents of the blood; that it deprives it of its oxygen and the power of coagulation—that the blood takes a long time to regain its life-supporting, flesh-forming character, and the patient often sinks into death. The use of ether also tends to produce tubercular consumption of the lungs. In thirty cases of death after the use of ether, they could be traced to recent tubercles, believed to be the product of ether.

The Rev. James C. Richmond, of the class of 1828, has sent an amicable challenge, in the manner of the old universities, to the President, Professors and students of the University at Cambridge, more especially at Divinity Hall, to discuss with him, orally, the three Christian doctrines of Episcopacy, the Holy Trinity, and the Atonement.

The young men arrested for robbing Dr. Brewer's store in Dorchester, have been examined at Dedham, and bound over in $500 each for trial.

A freight train, on the Old Colony Railroad, ran into a wagon near the depot in Kingston, on the 16th inst. In the wagon were two boys, sons of Wm. Myrick, of Duxbury. One of them had several ribs broken, the other was not much hurt.

The philosopher Democritus said of two dunces that "one appeared to be milking a he-goat, while the other was holding a sieve for him."

Hon. Abbott Lawrence has given one thousand dollars to the Library Association of the new town of Lawrence, to be invested "in such scientific and other works as will tend to create good mechanics, good Christians, and good patriots."

The murder of the infant child of Mr. Hineckley, in Barnstable, on the 14th inst., was committed by its mother. She has confessed the fact, as well as that it was she who set fire to the house in which her family lived. She is said to be insane, and has been sent to the insane asylum at Worcester.

"The Ran's Horn," a paper in New York devoted to the interests of the colored population, and edited by Thomas Van Rensselaer, contains a call for a National Convention of the people of color of the United States, to be held in the city of Troy, (N. Y.) on Wednesday, August 25th, of the present year.

A man in Brooklyn lately had to pay $25 for a bouquet of roses that he plucked without permission of the owner of the bush.

James N. Buffum of Lynn, a well known abolitionist, happening to live in a street through which the President and suite were to pass in making their entry into that place, caused a flag, on which was inscribed in large letters, "No Union with Slaveholders," to be attached to his chimney, stretched across the street, and fastened to the opposite house.

Forty-nine ships and barks are now loading at New York, for Great Britain, principally with breadstuffs; there are also five loading for France, four for Antwerp, three for Rotterdam, and two for Rio Janeiro.

The Galveston (Texas) News estimates that the quantity of sugar which will be made in Brazoria county alone this year, will not fall much short of two thousand hogheads. The quantity raised in the whole State last year was but little over 200 hhd.

One of the Georgia volunteer companies which enlisted for one year, started for the field with about one hundred men, and returned with only thirty-one.

Joseph C. Neal, a writer of eminence, and author of "Charcoal Sketches," died at Philadelphia of brain fever on Saturday night.

The magnetic telegraph is becoming so general that the result of the presidential election in 1848 will be known throughout the United States the day after it is held.

Lewis Cobb has been committed to jail in Plymouth, on a charge of burning his house in Middleboro'. It was insured by the mortgagee for $500.

Commander Piercy, of the United States Navy, died last week, at his residence in Portsmouth, Va.

Colonel Taylor, brother of the General, informs the editor of the Memphis Enquirer that the General intends to return to his home in November, if he can get a leave of absence.

The emperor of Russia has appointed his infant grandson, recently born, a colonel in two regiments of his guards.

It is said that about 70,000,000 bushels of barley were used up in the breweries and distilleries of Ireland within the past year.

A meeting of printers is to be held in Boston on Monday afternoon next, to consider the expediency of erecting a Monument to commemorate the introduction of Printing into the United States, and in memory of STEPHEN DAVE, the first Printer.

The Philadelphia U. S. Gazette recently sold for $45,000, one half of the Boston Atlas has been purchased at a cost of $35,000, the Boston Daily Advertiser is valued at $30,000—$40,000 has been refused for one half, one third of the N. Y. Courier was sold a few months since for $30,000, and one quarter of the N. Y. Tribune for $25,000.

Since the establishment of the Hospital on Deer Island, Boston Harbor, (May 23,) 799 patients, principally immigrants, have been admitted. Of this number, 71 have died; 436 have been discharged, and 307 remain in the Hospital.

Over one thousand five hundred miles of magnetic telegraph are already finished, in America, and five thousand miles under contract, to be completed within a year.

The editor of Boston Daily Bee says, "Bathing the entire person once or twice a day, winter and summer, in pure cold water, is the first article in our code of morals and politeness."

Mr. Wm. D. Crockett, of the Dover (N. H.) Telegraph, has disposed of all his right and title to the same, to T. W. Caldwell & Co., by whom it will hereafter be published.

It is understood that for the future, all Mexican officers captured in the war will be sent to the United States.

A report of the Board of Health of New Orleans, dated July 12th, says five deaths from yellow fever have occurred, and two or three other cases are still under treatment.

Capt. Friend Crane, of Dorchester, has been chosen Superintendent of the House of Industry and Reformation, at South Boston.

The crop of hay in all this region, and we believe in all New England, says the Belfast, Me., Signal, is heavier than it has been for many previous years.

NOTICES.

Philip S. White, Esq. of Philadelphia, and gentlemen Potter and Coles of Boston, will lecture on the principles of the Sons of Temperance in the Town Hall, Quincy, THIS EVENING, July 24th, commencing at eight o'clock.

The public are invited to attend.

Teacher's Convention.

The Committee chosen for the purpose of calling a Convention of teachers, to be held at Quincy some time during the month of August, have made the necessary arrangements, and most respectfully invite all teachers to meet at the Lyceum, 14th, on said Quincy, August 12th, at 10 o'clock A. M.

The Convention will continue its session during THURSDAY and FRIDAY.

Distinguished lecturers have been secured, and we are confident the meeting will be interesting and profitable.

The Committee will be in attendance to receive the teachers.

Per order of the Committee, J. W. GREEN, Chairman.

P. S. Editors favorable to the cause of Education will confer a favor by inserting this notice.

P. S. The Convention will be held as above and not on the 5th and 6th as reported.

Anniversary of West India Emancipation at Dorchester.

This most important and auspicious event will be celebrated by a picnic gathering at TENNESSEE GROVE, near Neponset village in DORCHESTER, on Saturday, July 31st.

The friends of freedom and the foes of slavery from far and near, are invited to participate in the efforts and pleasures of the occasion. Those will be present who can ably set forth the results of emancipation in the West Indies, and eloquently present the duty and policy of our country immediately to emancipate every slave in the land.

Persons in carriages will find it most convenient to stop at Neponset Village, where horses will be put up by the owner of the grove.

Let us all unite our efforts to make the occasion worthy of the event celebrated, and of the happiest influences for freedom. Let the gathering be large and enthusiastic.

In behalf of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, SAMUEL MAY, Jr., General Agent.

DIED.

In this town, 12th inst., Mr. Michael Mannagan, aged 29.

On the 14th inst., an infant of Mr. David and Mrs. Maria Rideout, aged 6 months.

On the 22d inst., Zachery T., son of Mr. Phineas G. Adams, being the 14th day, died, aged 7 weeks and 3 days.

Infant! thou hast vanished from us,
Like a star of pleasant light,
That has sweetly shone upon us,
Waking many a vision bright.

Like those stars when clouds are banished,
Radiant 'mid the heavenly host—
We shall see thee, though now vanished,
And shall know thou art not lost.

In South Braintree, 18th inst., Mrs. Lydia, widow of the late Mr. Philip Thayer, aged 55 years and 3 months.

Dear aged veteran, calmly sleep!
Above thy dust we will not weep;
Thy wrong to murmur that thy breast
From all its care is hushed to rest.

We would not keep thee longer here,
Where every pleasure costs a tear;
But where the brightest glories shine
We'll strive to wear a crown like thine.

In Boston, 18th inst., of consumption, Mr. James B. Clinton, printer, aged 31.

A LARGE two story House, situated on the Weymouth Turnpike, formerly occupied by Thomas O. Sylvester, nearly opposite the Episcopal Church, and about four minutes walk from the Old Colony Railroad Depot. The House contains six lower rooms and five chambers, is very convenient for two families; also, two Wood Sheds, and a large and commodious Shoemakers' Shop. The whole has been thoroughly repaired and painted in the best manner. There are two Gardens and several choice and valuable Fruit Trees. The Land is seven rods and a half long on the Turnpike, and the whole is a pleasant situation. It offers a rare opportunity for the man of leisure or the mechanic to make a profitable investment.

If the above Estate is not sold at private sale before the NINTH of August, at three o'clock P. M., it will then be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, without reserve.

For further information, apply near the premises to JOHN NEWCOMB, or to THOMPSON BAXTER, Auctioneer.

House to Let.

A PART of a Dwelling house, situated in the central part of Quincy, near the Stone Meeting-house, and for several years occupied by Mr. S. S. Marsh, partly as a dwelling and partly as a Milliner's Shop, consisting of seven rooms and in good condition.

Also—Two other chambers adjoining, lately occupied by the Quincy Temperance Society, which will be let with the same, or separately.

The house is well situated to accommodate a gentleman doing business in Quincy, or doing business in the city of Boston and wishing to reside with his family in the country, being within about twenty rods of the Depot of the Old Colony Railroad.

Also—A new building now finishing in said Quincy, adjoining the Bookstore of C. Gill & Co., calculated for small stores, or places of business, designed for two tenements, consisting of two rooms on the lower floor and two chambers to each tenement, being one of the best locations for business in the town of Quincy.

Application may be made at the Store of JOSIAH BRIGHAM & Co., near the premises.

POETRY

For the Quincy Patriot.

WERE THEY NOT RIGHT?

When, by the help of Israel's God,
O'erthrewest millions rose,
And brake the Egyptian despot's rod
And triumphed o'er their foes,
When got brave fathers nobly fought,
The native land to free,
And with their blood a shelter bought—
A home for Liberty,

Were they not right, with armed hand
To bulwark every hill,
And battling with th' oppressors band,
Their foremen's blood to spill?
Shall we contend that Israel's Lord
Sustained th' unjustly fight,
Or that, alone our fathers' sword Secured Columbia's right?

No—Freedom, while with glowing hearts
We sententia thy Shrine,
We own the blessing she imparts!
The gift, our God, was thine.

F. M. ARLINGTON, Weymouth.

THE ART OF PRINTING.

Long slumbered the world in the darkness of Error,
And Ignorance brooded o'er earth like a pall;
To the Mitre and crown, men abased them in terror,
Though galling the bondage and bitter the thrall;
When a voice like the earthquake's revealed the dis-sonant—

A flash like the lightning's unveiled every eye,
And o'er hill-top and glen glared liberty's banner,
While around it men gathered to conquer or die.

'Twas the voice of THE PRESS—on the startled ear breaking,
Like giant born prowess, like Pallas of old:

'Twas the flash of Intelligence, gloriously waking
A glow on the cheek of the noble and bold;
And tyranny's minions cowered and adrifted,
Sought lasting retreat with the cloister and cowl;
And the spells which bound nations in ages benighted,
Were cast to the haunts of the bat and the owl.

Then hail to the PRESS! chosen guardian of Freedom!
Strong sword arm of Justice! bright sunbeam of Truth!—

We pledge to her cause, (and she has but to need them)

The strength of our manhood, the fire of our youth;
Should despot e'er dare to impede her free soaring,
Or bigot to fetter her flight with his chain,
We vow that the earth shall close o'er our deploring,
Or view her in gladness and freedom again.

But no!—to the day-dawn of Knowledge and Glory,
A far brighter noon-tide refuge succeeds;
And our art shall emblazon, through all ages in story,
Her champion who triumphs, her martyr who succumbs.

And proudly her sons shall recall their devotion,
While millions shall listen, to honor and bless,
Till there bursts a response from the heart's strong emotion,

And the earth echoes deep with "LONG LIFE TO THE PRESS."

THE FAREWELL.

I leave thee—farewell!—for alas! we must part,
'Tis duty that calls me away;
And yet I would linger, thou friend of my heart,
A moment before I obey—

To breathe my regret, and to offer a prayer,
That happiness still may be thine,
That blessings unnumbered may fall to thy share,
Whatever misfortunes be mine.

I leave thee—but ah! I can never forget
The moments of bliss I have known;
And memory, often, with painful regret,
Will whisper how sweet they have flown.

Though duty compels me from home and from thee,
My friendship can never depart;
And while I submit to the rigid decree,
Thy image is still in my heart.

ANECDOTES.

A young man having preached for Dr. Emmons one day, was anxious to get a word of applause for his labor of love. The grave Dr. however, did not introduce the subject, and his young brother was obliged to bait the hook for him. "A! hope, sir, I did not weary your people by the length of my sermon to-day." "No, sir, not at all; nor by the depth either."

"I am constrained to call upon you this morning," said Tap, "for I owe a hundred dollars at the bank, and have got it to pay to-day." "You have got it to pay!" replied Sip; "the more lucky for you, then;
for I owe you ten dollars, and haven't got the first dollar towards it."

"Mr. Timms, how do you keep your books?"
"Oh, by double entry." "Double entry—how's that?"
"Oh, easy enough. I make one entry and father makes another."

"Pooh, pooh," said a wife to her expiring husband, as he strove to utter a few parting words, "don't stop to talk but go on with your dying."

"Bob, is that dog of yours a pointer?" "No he is half hunter and half setter. He hunts for bones when he is hungry, and sits by the stove when he is satisfied."

"Marm, mayn't I go and play horse to-day?" "No, child, you must stay in the house." "Now, look here, marm, if you don't let me, I'll go and catch the measles—I know a big boy that's got 'em prime."

"Oh, mother, mother!" said a little girl, running into the house in great amazement, "what a funny man I saw; the top of his head was down on his chin, and he hadn't got no mouth."

Two shoemakers being in company, were asked their profession; says one of them, "I practice the heeling art;" says the other, "I labor for the good of men's soles."

MISCELLANY.

THE TEA ROSE.

"There it stood, in its little green vase, on a light ebony stand, in the window of the drawing-room. The rich satin curtains, with their costly fringes, swept down on either side of it, and around it glittered every rare and fanciful trifle which wealth can offer to luxury, and yet that simple rose was the fairest of them all. So pure it looked, its white leaves just touched with that delicious creamy tint peculiar to its kind; its cup so full, so perfect; its head bending as if it were sinking and melting away in its own richness—oh! when did ever man make anything to equal the living perfect flower!"

But the sunlight that streamed through the window revealed something fairer than the rose—a young lady reclining on an ottoman, who was thus addressed by her livelier cousin. "I say, cousin, I have been thinking what you are to do with your pet rose when you go to New York, as to our conservation you are determined to do; you know it would be a sad pity to leave it with such scatter-brain as I am. I love flowers indeed; that is, I like a regular bouquet, cut off and tied up, to carry to a party; but as to all this tending and fussing, which is needless to keep them growing, I have no gifts in that line."

"Make yourself easy as to that, Kate," said Florence, with a smile; "I have no intention of calling upon your talents; I have an asylum in view for my favorite."

"O, then you know just what I was going to say. Mrs. Marshall, I presume, has been speaking to you; she was here yesterday, and I was quite pathetic upon the subject, telling her the loss your favorite would sustain, and so forth; and she said how delighted she would be to have it in her greenhouse, it is in such a fine state now, so full of buds. I told her I knew you would like to give it to her, you are so fond of Mrs. Marshall, you know."

"Now, Kate, I am sorry, but I have otherwise engaged it."

"Who can it be to? you have so few intimates here."

"Oh, it is only one of my odd fancies."

"But do tell me, Florence."

"Well, cousin, you know the little pale girl to whom we gave sewing?"

"What! little Mary Stevens? How absurd, Florence! This is just another of your mothly old-maidish ways, dressing dolls for poor children, making bonnets, and knitting socks for all the little dirty babies in the neighborhood. I do believe you have made more calls in those two vile ill-smelling alleys behind our house, than ever you have in Chestnut street, though you know everybody is half dying to see you; and now, to crown all, you must give this choice little bijou to a sempstress-girl, when one of your most intimate friends, in your own class, would value it so highly. What in the world can people in their circumstances want with flowers?"

"Just the same as I do," replied Florence, calmly. "Have you not noticed that the little girl never comes here without looking wistfully at the opening buds? And don't you remember, the other morning she asked me so prettily if I would let her mother come and see it, she was so fond of flowers?"

"But, Florence, only think of this rare flower standing on a table with ham, eggs, cheese, and flour, and stuffed in that close little room where Mrs. Stevens and her daughter manage to wash, iron and cook!"

"Well, Kate, if I were obliged to live in one coarse room, and wash, and iron, and cook, as you say; if I had to spend every moment of my time in toil, with no prospect from my window but a brick wall and dirty lane, such a flower as this would be untold enjoyment to me."

"Phaw, Florence; all sentiment! Poor people have no time to be sentimental. Besides, I don't believe it will grow with them; it's a greenhouse flower, and used to delicate living."

"Oh, as to that, a flower never inquires whether its owner is rich or poor; and Mrs. Stevens, whatever else she has not, has sunshine of as good quality as this that streams through our window. The beautiful things that God makes are his gifts to all alike. You will see that my fair rose will be as well and cheerful in Mrs. Stevens's room as in ours."

"Well, after all, how odd! When one gives to poor people, one wants to give them something useful—a bushel of potatoes, a ham, and such things."

"Why, certainly, potatoes and ham must be supplied; but having ministered to the first and most craving wants, why not add any other little pleasures or gratifications we may have in our power to bestow? I know there are many of the poor who have fine feeling and a keen sense of the beautiful, which rusts out and dies because they are too hard pressed to procure it any gratification. Poor Mrs. Stevens, for example, I know she would enjoy birds, and flowers, and music as much as I do. I have seen her eye light up as she looked upon these things in our drawing room, and yet not one beautiful thing can she command. From necessity, her room, her clothing, all she has, must be coarse and plain. You should have seen the almost rapture she and Mary felt when I offered them my rose."

"Dear me! all this may be true, but I never thought of it before. I never thought that these hard-working people had any ideas of taste."

"Then why do you see the geranium rose so carefully nursed in the old cracked tea-pot in the poorest room, or the morning-glory planted in a box, and twined about the window? Do not these show that the human heart yearns for the beautiful in all ranks of life? You remember, Kate, how our washer woman sat up a whole night, after a hard day's work, to make her first baby a pretty dress to be baptized in."

"Yes, and I remember how I laughed at you for making a such a tasteful little cap for it."

"Well, Kate, I think the look of perfect delight with which the poor mother regarded her baby in its new dress and cap, was something quite worth creating; I do believe she could not have felt more grateful if I had sent her a barrel of flour, or a pound of coffee, or anything to the poor but what they really needed, and I have always been willing to do that when I could without going far out of my way."

"Well, cousin, if our heavenly father gave to us after this mode, we should have only coarse, shapeless piles of provisions lying about the world, instead of all this beautiful variety of trees, and fruits, and flowers."

"Well, well, cousin, I suppose you are right, but have mercy upon my poor head; it is too small to have so many new ideas all at once—so go on your own way; and the little lady began practising a waltzing step before the glass with great satisfaction."

It was a very small room, lighted by only one window. There was no carpet on the floor; there was a clean, but coarsely covered bed in one corner; a cupboard, with a few dishes and plates in the other; a chest of drawers; and before the window stood a small cherry stand, quite new, and indeed it was the only article in the room that seemed so.

A pale, sickly looking woman of about forty was leaning back in her rocking chair, her eyes closed, and her lips compressed as if in pain. She looked backward and forward a few minutes, pressed her hand hard upon her eyes, and then languidly resumed her fine stitching, on which she had been busy since morning. The door opened, and a slender little girl of about twelve years of age entered, her large blue eyes dilated and radiant with delight, as she bore in the vase with the rose tree in it.

"Oh! see, mother, see! Here is one in full bloom, and two more half out, and ever so many more pretty buds peeping out of the green leaves."

The poor woman's face brightened as she looked, first on the rose, and then on her sickly child, on whose face she had not seen so bright a color for some months.

"God bless her!" she exclaimed unconsciously.

"Miss Florence—yes, I knew you would feel so, mother. Does it not make your head feel better to see such a beautiful flower? Now, you will not look so longingly at the flowers in the market, for we have a rose that is handsomer than any of them. Why, it seems to me it is worth as much to us as our whole little garden used to be. Only see how many buds there are! Just count them; and only smell the rose! Now, where shall we set it up?" And Mary skipped about, placing her flower first in one position and then in another, and walking off to see the effects, till her mother gently reminded her that the rose-tree could not preserve its beauty without sunlight.

"Oh yes, truly," said Mary; "well, then, it must be placed here on our new stand. How glad I am that we have such a handsome new stand for it; it will look so much better." And Mrs. Stevens laid down her work, and folded a piece of newspaper, on which the treasure was duly deposited.

"There," said Mary, watching the arrangement eagerly, "that will do—no, for it does not show both the opening buds; a little farther round—a little more; there, that is right; and Mary walked around to view the rose in various positions, after which she urged her mother to go with her to the outside, and see how it looked there. "How kind it was in Miss Florence to think of giving this to us," said Mary; "though she had done so much for us, and given us so many things, yet this seems the best of all, because it seems as if she thought of us, and knew just how we felt; and so few do that, you know, mother."

What a bright afternoon that gift made in that little room. How much faster Mary's fingers flew the living day, as she sewed by her mother; and Mrs. Stevens, in the happiness of her child, almost forgot that she had a headache, and thought as she slipped her evening cup of tea, that she felt stronger than she had done for some time.

That rose! its sweet influence died not with the first day. Through all the long cold winter, the watching, tending, cherishing that flower, awakened a thousand pleasant trains of thought, that beguiled the sameness and weariness of their life. Every day the fair growing thing put forth some fresh beauty—a leaf, a bud, a new shoot—and constantly awakened fresh joy in its possessors. As it stood in the window, the passer-by would sometimes stop and gaze, attracted by its beauty, and then proud and happy was Mary; nor did even the serious and care-worn widow notice with indifference this tribute to the beauty of their favorite.

But little did Florence think, when she bestowed the gift, that there twined about it an invisible thread that reached far and brightly into the web of her destiny.

One cold afternoon in early spring, a tall and graceful gentleman called at the lowly room to pay for the making of some linen by the inmates. He was a stranger and wayfarer, recommended through the charity of some of Mrs. Stevens's patrons. As he turned to go, his eye rested admiringly on the rose-tree, and he stooped to gaze at it.

"How beautiful!" said he.

"Yes, said little Mary, 'and it was given to us by a lady as sweet and beautiful as that is.'"

"Ah," said the stranger, turning upon her a pair of bright dark eyes, pleased and rather struck by the communication, "and how came she to give it to you, my little girl? Oh, because we are poor, and mother is sick, and we never can have anything pretty. We used to have; and Mrs. Florence would not let it out, and so she gave us this."

"Florence!" echoed the stranger.

"Yes, Miss Florence!—a beautiful lady. They say she was from foreign parts; but she speaks English just like other ladies, only sweeter."

"Is she here now? is she in this city?" said the gentleman, eagerly. "No; she left some months ago; said the widow, noticing the shade of disappointment on his face; 'but,' said she, 'you can find out all about her at her aunt's, Mrs. Carlyle's, No. 10, — street.'"

A short time after Florence received a letter in a hand-writing that made her tremble. During the many early years of her life spent in France, she had well learned to know that writing. This letter told that he was living, that he had traced her, even as a hidden streamlet may be traced, by the freshness, the verdure of heart, which her deeds of kindness had left wherever she had passed. Thus much said the reader needs no help in finishing the story.

A CHINESE VESSEL.

The Chinese Junk, Keying, from Canton, has arrived at New York. She was bought in Canton, and cost, Chinese curiosities and all, as she stands, $75,000. The owners will be likely to realize a handsome speculation out of her. The New York Tribune thus describes the vessel:—

The Keying, named after a high officer of the Celestial Empire, who has tried his skill in diplomacy, not without success, against the ambassadors of the outside Barbarians, arrived here, as most of our readers know, after a passage of 212 days from Canton, having touched at St. Helena on the 23d April last, where she was an object of great curiosity, and was over-run with visitors during her stay of seven days. She is built throughout of teak wood, is nearly new, and was bought by Capt. Kellett for $17,000. She is shaped like a whale boat, is one hundred and fifty feet long, twenty-five feet beam and twelve feet deep in the hold. She was originally a war vessel, and still retains some of the peculiarities of that character. Externally she is painted white, with a black waist as far as the foremast, then red to the stern. On each side of her bow is painted an immense eye, while a spread eagle flourishes on her stern. Her bow is flat, like that of a scow, with no bowsprit, but in the place usually occupied by the bowsprit is an opening about as wide a barn-yard gate, after the fashion of a Brooklyn ferry-boat, to give a chance for working the anchors, which are also made of teak wood and hung by cables of twisted bamboo. At the bow are also fastened two large cables, which run the whole length of the ship, and form the only hanging of the rudder, a delicate affair of teak wood, weighing some dozen tons, when fully immersed being twenty-three feet in the water, and when hoisted up twelve. To manage this contrivance it takes some thirty men and a stout windlass. The main cabin is thirty feet long, ten and a half high and twenty-three wide, and is adorned with a great variety of figures in fresco, among which are dragons, eagles and tigers as large as life and twice as ferocious. In this cabin we saw many pieces of beautiful Chinese furniture, which might well be copied by our cabinet makers, together with other curiosities, among which the most prominent was a great idol or 'Josh,' carved from a single block of wood and gilded. This divinity has eighteen arms and four eyes, and was brought on board the ship with the greatest reverence by its Chinese bearers. Above, in a little recess on the poop, stands the regular 'Josh' of the ship, before which a light is kept constantly burning, and to which the Chinamen have religiously resorted when the junk was threatened by bad weather.

A BAD MAXIM.

Nothing is more common than for a man to excuse his own follies by saying, "my father did so before me." This maxim has impoverished much good land, and has been the ruin of many a farmer. His father and his grandfather planted without manure, and so must the son.

Land in its natural state improves in fertility from year to year. An annual growth of vegetation is produced which decays and enriches the soil. If man plants corn, he is to destroy the grass and weeds, and then sows rye, and no grass seeds, after the crops are removed the surface is left bare, and few vegetables spring up, and the land necessarily becomes poorer and poorer every time the operation is repeated.

We have thought, if husbandmen imitated more closely the operations of nature they would be more successful. No where do trees flourish more luxuriantly than in dense forests. They rarely suffer from excess or lack of moisture. The surface of the ground is thickly covered with a loose mass of dead twigs and leaves, which prevent the growth of grass and weeds, and keep the surface damp and loose at all seasons. If this natural process was imitated in the cultivation of trees and shrubs, much labor would be saved, and their growth and fruitfulness promoted. Ploughing and spading cut off and destroys many of the small roots, and entirely prevents them from running near the surface, so that they can imbibe nutriment from the air as well as the earth. If the experiment is tried it will be found that shrubs grow better where a thick coating of chips and leaves than where the spade and the hoe are used to destroy the weeds. The ground never becomes dry and hard, and it is always in a condition to afford nourishment to the shrub or tree.

Respecting those grasses and plants, the character of which has not been changed by cultivation, we think nature is the best guide as to the proper time of sowing their seeds. Most if not all vegetables cultivated in gardens have been changed by the art of the husbandman. The common grasses have not been much changed, and the time of the year when their seeds naturally ripen, fall to the earth, is the best season to sow them. This period is the last of July and the beginning of August. Sown at this season of the year, the young plants acquire sufficient strength to resist the frosts of winter. If sown later the chances are that they will be winter killed. Spring has been the usual time for sowing, but if a dry summer succeeds the plants will wither and die because their tender roots have not penetrated sufficiently deep into the earth to reach moisture.

GIANTS.

Nathan Lampman, of Coxsackie, New York, who is now sixteen years of age, and seven feet one inch in height, bids fair to become a man of higher standing in the world than any man now living, having grown nine inches during the past year; and on the usual rules of growth will probably reach at least one foot more. He weighs one hundred and ninety two pounds. Judging from analogy in such unnatural cases, by the time he gets his full growth, upward, he will begin to become corpulent, and may obtain the monster bulk of Daniel Lambert, if not surpass it. Lambert was a native of England, and was buried at Stamford, where two suits of his clothes are preserved for the inspection of the curious. Seven common-sized men have stood within the enclosure of his waistcoat without starting a stitch, or straining a button. His coffin measured six feet four inches wide, and two feet four inches deep, and contained one hundred and ninety two superficial feet of elm. It was built on two axle-trees and four clog-wheels, upon which his remains were taken to the place of interment. His grave was dug with a gradual sloping for many yards; upwards of twenty men were employed for half an hour in getting the corpse into its last abode. Mr. Lambert's bulk did not increase above the ordinary size until he had reached the age of twenty one. A pair of stockings made for, and worn by him, measured in circumference, at the ankle, twenty four inches. The weight of this mass of mortality was six hundred and seventy two pounds.

TO DESTROY MILDEW. A weak solution of whale-oil soap, in the proportion of two pounds of soap to about fifteen gallons of water, will check and entirely destroy the mildew on the gooseberry, peach, plum, grape vine, &c.

MEDDLERS.

Whoever you are, read, reflect, profit, and practice accordingly. You little know, in your present degraded, groveling condition, what misery and wretchedness you are the cause of. How many blighted hopes your meddling propensity will have to answer for, when the day of reckoning comes! How many glorious prospects have been crushed in the bud, by your untimely interference in your neighbor's concerns! Your terrible itching to make yourself useful, or to pry into other people's business, has made yourself and others instruments of crime, and consequently you have effected the ruin of many. You have invaded alike the sacred retreat of the newly betrothed, and the domestic hearth; and with a paraphrastic mod, or word, you have set the young, confiding heart in fearful commotion, or furnished a pretext for the green-eyed monster to dart his venomous fangs at the innocent victim of his spleen; thus blasting the brightest hopes of one, and tarnishing the fairest reputation of another, and breaking assunder the holiest ties which are known on earth.

Oh! thou vile compound of all that is debasing to a living creature—thou canting, parasitic specimen of humanity—thou whose littleness is beneath description—desist from thy crawling, sneaking course, and try to be a man, or forever be branded as a scoundrel—a thing, sunk so much below the beginning of humanity, as to be certainly lost sight of; thy gizzard being smaller (so to speak) than the little end of nothing. And here we are obliged to leave thee, until thou risest in the scale of animated existence, as it is not within the ken of human vision to trace thee farther.

THE EXTENT OF THE UNITED STATES. The present confederacy of the United States of North America, contains a larger area of cultivated land and hospitable climate than any country that has previously existed. Ancient and modern Empires sink into insignificance when compared with it. The United States of America contain 2,300,000 square miles, over a half million more than all of Europe, if we except Russia. Their greatest extent length is 3000 miles; their greatest breadth 1700 miles. They have a frontier line of 10,900 miles; a sea coast of 3600 miles, and an inland lake-coast of 1200 miles.

The rivers in the United States are the largest in the world. The Mississippi is 2600 miles long. The Ohio is 1500 miles long. The Rhine, The Hudson, entirely within a single state, is navigable 120 miles above its mouth farther than the Thames.

The state of Virginia has an area of 70,000 square miles, and is about one-third larger than England. The state of Ohio, 40,600 square miles, or 8000 more than the whole of Scotland.

The harbor of the city of New York, is the Atlantic outlet of a river, canal and lake navigation of about 3000 miles, or the distance from Europe to America.

From Augusta, in the state of Maine, to New Orleans, in the state of Louisiana, the distance is 1800 miles; or two hundred more than from London to Constantinople. To go from London to Constantinople, you cross the entire continent of Europe, and through most of its principal kingdoms.

The great proportion of the whole extent of the territory of the United States is uncultivated. The population of the country, as rapidly as it increases, would not occupy all the public domain in the cycle of five hundred years, and yet, in spite of this startling fact, there are among us men who claim to be statesmen, who wish to anticipate the future and occupy by conquest, at the expense of blood and treasure, that territory which is as certain to fall into our possession by the natural course of events, as that the sun rising marks the beginning of day. So vast, indeed, is the territory of the United States already, that it takes no ordinary mind to comprehend its extent, and few indeed can calculate its resources; and the most comprehensive intellect cannot, when warned by a high wrought imagination, give a faint glimmering of the future wealth and power to be accorded to the American people—not by force of arms, but simply by the pursuit of the arts of peace.—Salem Gazette.

THE NETTLE. The nettle is generally considered by farmers and gardeners as a useless and troublesome weed; but it needs little argument to prove that the most common gifts of Providence are often the most useful to mankind. The common stinging nettle is one of the best medicines which is produced in the vegetable kingdom, and its medicinal qualities ought to be more generally known and appreciated. In the form of a simple weak infusion, taken in the quantity of a pint a day, it acts as an alterative and deobstruent in impurities of the blood. A strong decoction taken in the same quantity proves an admirable strengthener in general or partial relaxation. Applied as a fomentation or poultice, it relieves swellings and abates inflammations, and the expressed juice, taken in spoonfuls as the exigency of the case may require, in internal bleedings is the most powerful styptic known. We may add that its leaves, when boiled, are converted into a tender, healthy, and nourishing aliment, grateful to the palate. And yet there are few plants whose appearance is viewed by the farmer with more disgust than the stinging nettle.

EDITORIAL RAMBLINGS.

During our sojourn in New York, we went to Greenwood Cemetery, in Brooklyn—a rural and sequestered place, surpassing in beauty and loveliness Mount Auburn in the vicinity of Boston. It is visited by numbers, daily, who thus resort to inhale the invigorating breeze and meditate in this resting-place of the dead. It is quite extensive, and many picturesque views may be seen of the city and harbor of New York and the distant Atlantic.

The Chinese Junk has been visited, since it was opened to public inspection, by a crowd every day at an admission price of twenty-five cents. Quite a speculation! It is hinted that this vessel may visit Boston. [For a minute description, see first page of to-day's paper.]

The funeral escort to the remains of Capt. Zabriskie on their arrival in New York to the place of departure for New Jersey, his native State, was a solemn and imposing display. It will be recollected that Capt. Zabriskie fell at the battle of Buena Vista, together with the lamented Lincoln of Massachusetts, and the remains of both heroes were deposited in their final resting place on the same day.

Mr. Walker, to whom reference was made in a former communication, has leased his establishment to the adjoining occupant, and it is now connected with Lovejoy's Hotel. The Lorillard House, by Earl, opposite the Park, a few doors south of the above Hotel, is a pleasant and delightful situation, the house airy, neat and convenient, the best of fare the market affords always provided, with very moderate charges, and the landlord courteous and attentive.

During our rambles about 'Gotham,' we encountered a 'cadaverous' looking personage, who, on closer inspection, proved to be the well known Quincy correspondent of the now defunct Danvers Courier. He is now following the type-setting profession, and is much attached to the "Croton," as the "bad water" of this region did not agree with him.

The weather during our stay was very warm, and but few showers. The summer season is the least suited for a visit to New York. The extreme heat and lack of good breezes render it wearisome and fatiguing, certainly to all who may here resort for amusement and to while away a few days of leisure.

MEXICO. There is no later intelligence from the seat of war. Gen. Scott and Taylor are both waiting for reinforcements before they advance. The Mexicans are again retreating, and we are again in possession of the city of Mexico.

SOUTH SHORE RAILROAD. Ten per cent of the stock of this corporation has been promptly paid in to the Treasurer, and at a meeting of the Directors held at Weymouth one day this week, it was voted to put the grading and masonry of the road under contract from Hingham to Quincy, forthwith.

THICK FOG. A gentleman of this town informs us, that, on Monday morning last, there drove up to his residence several carriages from which alighted six gentlemen with their ladies. As they entered the house the ceremony of introduction commenced, when one observed that they were all Foggs—six brothers with their wives—and he was sorry to say they had left four brothers and one sister at home. Our informant says he soon alighted the Foggs and the happy family went on their way rejoicing. They came from Braintree.

THE OLDEST GRADUATE. Dr. Ezra Green of Dover, (N. H.) who completed the one hundred and first year of his age on the 28th of June last, closed his long life during the present week; consequently Hon. Timothy Farrar of the same State, who reached his one hundredth year on the 11th inst., is now the oldest living graduate of Harvard University. Dr. Green belonged to the class of 1765, and Mr. Farrar to that of 1767.

NORFOLK COUNTY RAILROAD. At a meeting of the Directors of the Norfolk County Railroad Company, the following officers were chosen, viz: Welcomes Farnum, Esq., President; E. W. Clapp, Clerk. Arrangements were made for locating the road from Walpole to Blackstone, for finishing the subscriptions, and for pushing the construction of the road as vigorously as possible.

RECIPE FOR MAKING YEAST. To two middling sized potatoes add a pint of boiling water, and two table spoonfuls of brown sugar. One pint of hot water should be applied to every half pint of the compound. Hot water is better in warm weather. The yeast being made without flour, will keep longer in hot weather, and is said to be much better than any in previous use.

FEMALE VIRTUE. To depart in the minutest article from the nicety and strictness of punctilio is as dangerous to national honor as to female virtue. The woman who admits of one familiarity seldom knows where to stop, or what to refuse; and when the councils of a great country give way in a single instance—when they are once inclined to submission—every step accelerates the rapidity of the descent.

AN EDITOR'S "SANCTUM SANCTORUM." A letter from "J. E. S." (Dr. Snodgrass, we presume), in a late number of the "National Era," published at Washington, D. C., opens with an allusion to an editor's sanctum, which will no doubt be read with interest by the numerous friends of the individual named. Dr. Snodgrass was for many years the editor and proprietor of the "Baltimore Saturday Visitor," which has at length been merged in the "National Era," to which he has become a regular contributor. The Dr., it would seem, writes from the hospitable mansion of the gentleman whose "sanctum," etc., appears to impart so much fluency to the lucubrations of his pen.

Never, since I became one of the editorial "ants," have I felt so much like writing as at the present moment. You know from experience, as ever writer knows, that much depends upon association and so potent is its power, that some men can only write in a particular corner of a particular room, being in the room itself, even though their very sanctum, not sufficing to give wings to thought. You will understand how I am effected in this respect, at the present writing, when I tell you that I write from an editorial sanctum, surrounded by the peculiar associations of such a spot. I am in the very sanctum sanctorum of FREEMAN HUNT, editor of that noble storehouse of commercial literature, the "Merchants' Magazine," who has purchased and fitted up a delightful home-spot high up in Court street, where he can retire, after business hours, from the noise and bustle of "the city," (as they call New York, in this now populous city,) here to enjoy the comforts of domestic life, to an extent rare indeed among the corps editorial; for he it understood that Mr. Hunt has been eminently successful in his great enterprise, as he is worthy to be, in view of his ability and tact as an editor and a publisher, and his earnestness as a pioneering reformer in his sphere. I might fill this entire sheet with literary facts revealed, and reflections generated by the contents of Mr. Hunt's private library; for on its compact and carefully arranged shelves may be found nearly every book worth preserving, that has been issued by the American press of late years. I doubt whether any bookstore in New York contains so great a variety of choice publications. Scarcely any book, from the gravest to the gayest, but may be found here. It might well be styled a Bibliotheca Paradisi, for in it there is everything which the varied bibliomaniac could desire—if it be not a paradox to talk of madness in a paradise! But, for fear I myself should come too much under the mania-generating spell of the scene, I must command my thoughts into another channel, and discourse somewhat of other things.

PREMIUM ON CHILDREN. The following resolution has passed the House of Representatives of the Maine Legislature, in favor of David Jordan, of Freeport, who petitioned for a grant of land, because he had borne the State sixteen children: Resolved, That the Land Agent be authorized and directed to convey to Mary B. Jordan, of Freeport, one hundred and sixty acres of land, to be selected by her from the unappropriated lands in any township lot for settlement; and also to convey to Eunice L. Jordan, and to Rebecca O. Jordan, eighty acres each; and also to convey to Helen G. Jordan, Eliza H. Jordan, and Caroline P. Jordan, eighty acres each; and also to convey to Rebecca O. Helen G. Eliza H., and Caroline P. respectively, said selection to be made in each case within two years of the passage of this Resolve.

THE MORMONS. It is reported that the Mormon settlers in California have rebelled against the American government, and contemplate setting up a government of their own. Between the Yankees and Mormons the old Californians stand rather a poor chance.

The workmen of Louisville, (Ky.) have organized an "Industrial League," among other objects looking to the establishment of the ten hour system by law, and to the exemption from execution and sale for debt, of the mechanic's tools, and of $200 worth of household or other goods to every one having a family.

"Bent's Hotel" in Canton, has been much enlarged by an addition on the ground, and also a third story on the entire buildings.

From 1630 to 1826, two hundred minister, including all denominations, were settled in Boston, amounting to one for every year, and a fraction over.

The Governor of Wisconsin, intends to call together the Legislature early in October, for the purpose of preparing another Constitution, and the admission of the Territory into the Union.

In New Bedford the firemen are paid ten dollars a year each.

The wisest man may occasionally do a weak thing; the most honest man a wrong thing; the proudest man a mean thing; and the worst of men will sometimes do a good thing.

Hon. Rufus Choate, of this State, is to deliver an Oration at Coventry, (Ct.) on the 22d of September, on the anniversary of the death of Capt. Nathan Hale, who was hanged by the British as a spy during the Revolution.

A gentleman lately deceased in New York, has left the sum of fifteen thousand dollars to be expended in the erection of the Washington Monument.

Col. Sterling Price of Missouri, has been appointed a Brigadier General, vice Jefferson Davis, deceased.

The cause of the Potato Rot is said to have been discovered by a man in Hamburg, (N. Y.) It is a worm about three-quarters of an inch in length, which makes its way through the vine and is supposed to impregnate the root. He found a bug on every diseased vine, and many of the leaves bore the mark of having been stung.

Massachusetts owns at this time, 10,441 shares in the stock of the Western Railroad company, which entitles it to 1823 shares of the new stock, worth $120 per share advance. This puts the net sum of $1,481,760 into the State Treasury.

A number of the kings and head men of the country surrounding the Maryland and African Colony at Cape Palmas, Africa, have voluntarily placed themselves and their people under the jurisdiction of the colony.

John Lincoln, the Representative of the town of Hingham in the last Legislature, whose curious speeches were the by word of the whole House, has been committed to the McLean Asylum in Boston, furiously insane. He was not in his right mind, probably, during the session.

Every family should have a bathing apparatus which could be procured for a trifling sum, and mayhap would be the means of saving a doctor's fee of five times the amount, and producing health and comfort beyond the power of calculation. Bathing at all seasons is conducive to the health of body and mind, but more especially in the spring and summer.

One fifth of the population of New York are paupers, and in the calculation includes only the in-door and out-door poor of the City, Almshouse, and the beneficiaries of the Society for meliorating the condition of the poor.

In the days of the blue laws of New England, a shoemaker was condemned to be hung; but on the day appointed for his execution, they discovered that he was the only shoemaker in the place; so they hanged a weaver in his stead; for they had more weavers than they knew what to do with.

Anniversary of West India Emancipation at Dorchester.

This most important and auspicious event will be celebrated by a picnic gathering at TREXEN GROVE, near Neponset village in Dorchester, on Saturday, July 31st.

The friends of freedom and the foes of slavery from far and near, are invited to participate in the efforts and pleasures of the occasion. Those who will be present who can ably set forth the results of emancipation in the West Indies, and eloquently present the duty and policy of our country immediately to emancipate every slave in the land.

Persons in carriages will find it most convenient to stop at Neponset Village, where horses will be put up by the owner of the grove.

Let us all unite our efforts to make the occasion worthy of the event celebrated, and of the happiest influences for freedom. Let the gathering be large and enthusiastic.

In behalf of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, SAMUEL MAY, Jr., General Agent.

Wool. The history of the growth of wool is very curious. Fifty years ago not a pound of fine wool was raised in the United States, in Great Britain, or in any other country except Spain. In the latter country, the flocks were owned exclusively by the nobility or the crown.

In 1764, a small flock was sent to the Elector of Saxony, as a present from the king of Spain, whence the entire production of Saxon wool now of such immense value—Before the breaking out of the last war between this country and Great Britain, Colonel Humphrey succeeded in getting a few merino sheep out of Spain; then their exportation was prohibited under penalty of being sent to the gallies for life.

In 1800, during the invasion of Spain by the French, some of the valuable Crown flocks were sold to raise money. Our Consul at Lisbon, Mr. Jarvis, purchased fourteen hundred head, and sent them to this country—Previously, however, Mr. Livingston obtained a few sheep of the Spanish breed, as a present in 1792. Such was the origin of the immense flocks of fine woolled sheep in the United States and Great Britain.

A STORY WITH A MORAL. When Charles II. chartered the Royal Society, it is narrated of him, that he was disposed to give the philosophers a royal, but at the same time a wholesome lecture.

"Why is it, my lords and gentlemen," said he, "that if you fill a vessel with water to the very brim, so that it will not hold a single drop more, yet putting a turbot into the water it will not overflow the vessel?" Many were the sage conjectures: that the fish would drink as much water as compensated for his own bulk—that he condensed the water to that amount, that the air bladder had something to do with the phenomena, and a hundred others, which were pronounced and abandoned in their turn, much to the amusement of the merry monarch. At length Mr. Wren, (afterwards Sir Christopher,) modestly asked, "But is your Majesty sure that such would be the case?" "Ay, there," exclaimed his Majesty, laughing, "you have it; always gentlemen, find out if a thing be true, before you proceed to account for it; then I shall not be ashamed of the charter I have given you."

STREAKING ILL OF A NEIGHBOR. Never place confidence in a person who makes it a practice to run down his neighbor's goods, because he is in the same line of business. There are those who are so desirous of moral principle, so mean and selfish, that they cannot endure the thought of the prosperity of their neighbors and when they are out of certain articles, which they know their neighbors have in abundance, they do not hesitate to tell the purchaser he cannot obtain in the place what he is in pursuit of. Such a course may answer for the time being, but it is a course which will be found out, their customers gradually leave them, believing that, if they lie in one case they will in another—and not only lie but cheat also. The most dangerous men to deal with, are those of this description. You never hear the truly upright man speak ill of another. With double dealing and dissimulation he is a stranger.

BEER. A lady of Weathersfield, (Conn.) gives the following recipe for making this beverage:—Twenty drops of the oil of Spruce, twenty drops of Wintergreen, twenty drops of Sassafras. Pour two quarts of boiling water upon the oils, then add eight quarts of cold water, one pint and a half of molasses, and half a pint of yeast. Let it stand two hours and then bottle it.

TINCTURE OF ROSES. Take leaves of the common rose, (centifolia) place them without pressing them, in a bottle, pour good spirits upon them, close the bottle, and let it stand until it is ready for use. This tincture will keep for years, and yield a perfume little inferior to otto of roses. A few drops of it will suffice to impregnate the atmosphere of a room with a delicious odor. Common vinegar is greatly improved by a very small quantity being added to it.

THE HONEST WAY OF DOING BUSINESS. The sedate Turk is a man of few words, and seldom utters more than is strictly necessary. He sets his goods before you, names their price, and leaves you to do as you please about buying. You need not think of offering him a lower bidding; he will not abate a para, and the only reply he will make will be to take back the article in question and return it to its place.

PRIDE AND POVERTY. It is not poverty so much as pretence, that harasses a ruined man—the struggle between a proud mind and an empty purse—the keeping up a hollow show that must soon come to an end. Have the courage to appear poor, and you disarm poverty of its sharpest sting.

MEDITATION. It is by meditation that we fix in memory whatever we learn, and form our own judgment of the truth or falsehood, the strength or weakness, of what others speak or write. It is meditation, or study, that draws out long chains of argument, and searches and finds deep and difficult truths, which before lay unconceived in darkness.

PRIDE OF BIRTH. That man must be a complete booby, who prides himself on his father's bravery, talents or wealth. His course shows that the race has sadly degenerated, who would not rather be the first of a family than the last? There is no virtue in a man who can show no bright traits in his character, even though he may have descended from the most honorable of earth.

For the Quincy Patriot. TEACHERS' CONVENTION. Mr. Editor—Official notice has been given of a Teachers' Convention, to be held at Quincy on THURSDAY and FRIDAY, the 12th and 13th of August.

As chairman of the Committee from whom that notice proceeded, the enquiry has been addressed to me, "What is the object of the convention at Quincy, and what may we EXPECT if we should attend?"

Let me want of a satisfactory answer to this enquiry should prevent some teachers from attending. I have felt called upon to say something with a view to stimulating such to come this once and see what is done at our Convention.

A TEACHERS' CONVENTION! Why, sir, it seems to me that the name alone ought to be sufficient to induce every zealous, thorough-going teacher within fifty miles, to make some sacrifice in order to be present. "What is the OBJECT of the Teachers' Convention?" Progress! Progress! Progress! "Onward and upward!" Progress in all the departments of the teacher's arduous, delightful and holy work.

But let me be definite in my answer to the foregoing enquiry.

1. Our object is a social interview. We wish to cultivate mutual acquaintance and friendship. Teachers should constitute one great brotherhood. They should meet often for the purpose of learning each other's excellences. They should come together to cheer one another by words of sympathy—to enjoy "the feast of reason and the flow of soul." There is no calculating the amount of happiness which might be produced in this way. Smiles, sunny looks, the genial spirit, gentleness of demeanor—these are contagious things. If teachers would come together occasionally and spend two or three days in cultivating these enjoyments and graces, they would surely return to their school rooms, shedding a brighter and more extended halo of happy influences for having met with their fellows.

2. Our object is moral advancement. It may be that no formal lessons in morals will be read to us, and yet who, that has ever attended a Teachers' Convention or Institute, has not observed himself involuntarily forming the most sanguine resolutions to do so? All the exercises at such meetings tend to strengthen the moral sentiment within us, and we go home fitted to strengthen to an astonishing degree the moral sentiments of our scholars.

3. Our object is to have the best methods of teaching as extensively known as possible. How can this object be so well, so speedily accomplished, as by Teachers' Conventions? I am asked, "What may we expect if we should attend?" But I might very properly ask in reply, what may I expect if I should attend? So might we all ask the same question; and the best answer is—Expect to work with all your might! There is enough for us all to do. Our Convention is to be a UNION, not a COURT, Convention. There is no limit to its area. "Whoever will, may come." And let us hope that all will come disposed to do what good they can. Write out your ideas on some point of school government—or tell how you manage a particular study—or how you classify—any thing which may be of the greatest interest to yourself. If there is any portion of your employment which you regard as peculiarly difficult, this would be a good subject to present in writing.

It seems to me highly desirable that female teachers should attend. It is the advice of one of our most esteemed fathers in teaching, that we should none of us come "expecting to be entertained merely—but to do something for the entertainment of others." Let the ladies remember this. They can write little essays of from five to ten minutes each, and read them—an exercise we should hope, not at all unpleasant, and surely not unbecoming.

Perhaps there would be no topic of more general interest in school government, than a definite, circumstantial detail of some important misdemeanor in school—its occurrence, its relation to other persons or things, and its final settlement. This would not be too difficult a task for any teacher, male or female.

Experienced teachers—those who are confident they are pursuing a right course in relation to any one point of government or teaching—should do more. They should labor to describe briefly but faithfully, so much of their measures as they believe may be followed or imitated with advantage by others. Let us not be indolent—throwing the whole labor upon the shoulders of a few. Let us not be diffident—fearful that every body knows all that we do, and much more. Let us not be secretive or parsimonious of the treasures of knowledge we may possess—as though the good we communicate to others, were so much subtracted from our own store. For in this as in the more literal bestowments of charity, "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

4. Our object is to receive words of encouragement and instruction from those whose minds have been long imbued with the loftiest, richest, most ennobling sentiments; those who have labored hardest to elevate teaching to the rank and emolument of a learned profession. Some of these have been already engaged to lecture at the convention, and will, we doubt not, furnish an intellectual treat more than sufficient to repay any of us for the trouble of attending.

Yours, &c. J. W. GREEN.

P. S. Editors in Suffolk, Norfolk, Plymouth and Bristol Counties—will you please copy?

DEPEND ON YOURSELF. Bad luck, as well as mischance and misfortune, are all the daughters of misconduct, and sometimes the mother of success, prosperity and advancement. To be thrown on one's own resources, is to be cast into the very lap of fortune. Had Franklin entered Philadelphia with a thousand in his pocket, instead of one shilling ninepence as he did, probably he would have got on a spree, instead of hunting up employment, and died at thirty-five, from driving tandem teams and drinking brandy smashers, instead of living to the good old age of eighty, and dying a philosopher, whose amusement was the taming of thunder bolts, and bottling up lightning. Had Napoleon's father been the owner of a princely estate, his son would never have become an Emperor. A good kick out of doors for a boy is better than all the uncles in the world. One never tries to swim so hard as when he has to do it or drown. To be a rich man's son is the greatest misfortune that can befall a young man, mentally speaking. Who fill our offices? Not the children of the rich or the sons of the opulent. A knowledge of starch and debauchery is all a rich man's sons aspire to. The parlor is the scene of their oratory, and hair oil the care of their souls.

MISCELLANY.

FELIX FLINDERS NIGHT LATCH.

Occupying two dwellings, almost similar in appearance—the silver plating on the door of one being a shade brighter than that upon the other, lived two newly married couples. One was the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Todd, and the other (with the brighter plating) that of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Flinder—and they it is of whom we have to write.

Mr. and Mrs. Felix Flinder had been Mr.
and Mrs. F. F. about sixteen calendar months;
and never months before were passed so happily by man and wife. Felix was a commission merchant—a member of the firm of Flinder, Tinder & Co., and in the receipt of a very handsome income. He wore a white hat and black whiskers, and was a comely-looking personage; and bore the name of being a clever fellow, one who would never meet "our house," without asking you to drink, and one who went head and ears into the enjoyment of life.

Dolly Flinder—for such, gentle reader, was her romantic name—possessed one of the most rosy-cheeked, plump, May-morning looking countenances, to be met with in a day's riding in one of the city omnibuses, and that we consider a fair way of seeing all kinds of faces.
See her at what time you would she always looked neat and clean; her morning dresses of course, coarser in material than her afternoon ones, were yet made and put on in so snug and tidy a manner, that one would scarcely know the difference; and she would appear so much dressed at the breakfast table as at any other time—unlike any married lady we wot of, who does not think it worth her while to look dressed until afternoon, and who thinks of her husband as "only him"—just as though he was not more entitled to her good appearance than any man or woman in the world. Unlike this class of wives, Dolly took more pride in looking well before "him," than before any one else; and did he like an article of dress she had purchased, it was sufficient. She never crossed him—and yet she was most every case had her own way at last. Did he object to any measure she proposed—she consented—when Felix discovered she was ready to give in, he would immediately change tactics, and become desirous of her doing that which he had before opposed—an example followed by more married men than our hero.

It is a well known fact that the human body will, from want of exercise, and an excess of comfort, fall into an unhealthy and ill-conditioned state; and it is just the same with some minds, which, if never worried or vexed by anything either at home or abroad, become discontented and peevish—and such was the case with the mind of Felix Flinder. Having such a gentle, non-resistance principled wife, a first rate income, a beautiful furnished house, and nothing under the sun to annoy him, he became disgusted with the even tenor of his existence.
If he could have got Dolly to contradict him once a day, right positively, even that would have been some comfort. If, when he spit to blow him up right well, as most other wives would have done, instead of ringing for the servant to come and wipe it off; or when he came home hungry to his dinner, and finding it not quite ready commenced scolding about it, if then she would only have said something in return, he would have felt satisfied. But instead of standing to parley words, off she would dart to the kitchen, and "hurry up" the dinner in a manner truly surprising; and compelled Felix, in spite of his determined sour looks, gradually to relax into a smile of approval.
And it "just took her too," as the saying is,
to get a dinner, or at least to superintend the getting of one—for she comprised in herself

the best edition of a cookery book yet published, and Boz may say what he pleases about the cookery of Ruth Pinch, and her miracles in breakfasts and pudding, but had he ever eaten one of Dolly's make, we think his opinion would be considerably changed.

Felix had tried almost every means he could think of, just to provoke his little wife for once, but had never succeeded. At last, what he thought was a very exceedingly happy idea, entered his mind, which idea was very much strengthened, by the following conversation that took place the same day.

He was sitting in the little counting-house, back of the ware room, towards the close of the afternoon, meditating pleasantly on a good sale he had just completed, when thro' the glass of the door he beheld the light at one end of a long cigar, and at the other, the features of his next door neighbor, Augustus Todd, Esq.

"Ah! Todd, how are you?" exclaimed Felix,
as the above named person entered the room—
"glad to see you—take a seat. What's the news from the seat of war?"

"Nothing very new," replied Todd, "of course you know Gen. Taylor has entered Monterey."
"Oh! certainly," replied Felix, "heard it days ago."

"By the bye," continued Todd, "talking about entering puts me in mind of a purchase I have just made."

"What is it?" inquired Felix, "a new ledger?"
"No, no, something better than that," replied Todd; "a night latch," and he drew from his pocket a curiously constructed key, and held it up to the gaze of Felix. "You've got one, of course."

"Oh, yes—that is"—replied Felix, almost ashamed to say he had none, "I am going to purchase one. Where did you get it?"
"Oh! over to Runyon's," replied Todd;—"it only cost three shillings."

"Well," exclaimed Felix, "I must get one;
I've been thinking of it for a long time—my wife, though, don't want me to have one. She says she would rather sit up for me, but that,"
said Felix, very considerably, "that, you know, is not to be thought of."

"Oh, certainly not," replied Todd, "for just as I told Mrs. Todd—Mrs. Todd," says I, "I am going to get a night latch. Just as I expected, she burst into a passion—of course I flew into a passion also, and let out an oath or two—swearing, I think," said Todd gravely, "in moderation, and at certain times, has a great effect on Mrs. T., and makes her give up sooner, as it did in this case; and when I left home, she was in the best possible humor."

"No use with my wife," said Felix, thinking it would be some time before he should swear before his wife; "no matter how happy the results produced, no use at all."

"Why not?" inquired Todd.
"Because," replied Felix, "she never contradicts me."

"So much the better, then," said Todd, "you can do as you please"—and giving Felix a jocose slap on the back, he left the office.

The latter part of Todd's advice he followed and accordingly purchased a night latch. That evening at the supper table, Felix was seated opposite to his pretty little wife, sipping his cup of fragrant mocha, when, looking intently upon her cheerful, smiling face, he said:

"My dear Dolly, don't you ever feel vexed at having to wait up for me at nights; when I stay out late don't you feel angry at having to get up and open the door and let me in?"

"Why bless your heart, no," replied Dolly, in whose happy mind, such a thought as being angry with her husband had never entered. "Not in the least. You know you always get me plenty of new books to read, and then sometimes it happens—and I am sure you are not so very late often—that Mrs. Todd comes in and sits down with me. Oh, I am never lonely —to be sure I miss your company, but then I am always glad to get up and let you in, and get you a little lunch."

"This was a complete overthrow to all the plans of Felix. He had expected at least she would say it was a little troublesome, and so give him some pretext, however slight, to break the intelligence of his purchase to her;
but no, not a straw did she throw out for him to catch at, so he changed his mode of operation."

"But my dear," he said, "I cannot agree with you there, at all. I think it would be pleasanter for you to be lying comfortably in your bed, than sitting up with sleepy eyes waiting for me—and so," he continued with desperate determination, "I've got a night latch."

She did not even look astonished: her brow was calm and smooth as ever, and her voice as clear and pleasant as before, when she said:

"Well, my dear Felix, if you have got the key there is no help for it; but I had much rather you had not purchased one, for, as my mother has often told me, a night latch is the worst companion a married man can have—for while he knows his wife is waiting up for him, he will generally endeavor to come home in good time; but when he has a key, he feels at liberty to stay out as late as he chooses every night. Not that I think it will make the difference with you, Felix, but still I would rather you had allowed me to be your night latch, and see," she said laughingly, shaking at him the thinnest of taper fingers, "see, if before the week is out, you do not regret having bought it."

"Well," replied Felix, delighted with her good nature, "we will see. But you need not sit up for me to-night, as I am going to a meeting of the Society, and as we are to have an Anniversary supper after it is over, I will not be home until late."

"Very well, my dear," replied Dolly, "I will go to bed, and allow you a fair opportunity of testing the virtues of your key."

"That is right," said Felix, kissing her; you will find it much pleasanter than sitting up, and putting on his hat he left the house, and soon arrived at the place of meeting. After the usual routine of business had been gone through the Society adjourned, and proceeded in a body to a certain well known hotel, and sat down to an inviting supper. Many were the jests uttered, and many the glasses of wine and other liquors drank by the company, not excepting our friend Flinder, who drank a full mugnum to every toast. These were not without their effect, for by the time this jovial assembly was ready to disperse, according to the mind of Felix, the number of the company present had increased amazingly; and upon issuing forth into the street, in company with two or three other members, the hotel seemed to be engaged in a waltz with the opposite building—while the street lamps resembled so many unsteady watchmen walking up and down with their torches held above their heads.

They thus proceeded together until opposite the Circus, when with vows of the most unflin-ging regard for each other, they parted.

Now Flinder, although not what would be called sober, was by no means drunk; but just in that state when a man's brain resembles a kaleidoscope, reflecting a thousand images in an inconceivably short time, each object vanishing with every motion, but giving rise at the same time to new ones.

"That was a confounded funny song of Tom Jones's," a confounded funny song," said Felix, as he staggered up the steps—not of his own dwelling, but that of Augustus Todd, Esq., and after a great deal of fumbling, at last succeeded in opening the door, left unlocked for a servant who had gone out to a ball. There was a lamp standing upon a table in the entry, and picking it up, Felix, walking as steadily and quietly as he could, sought the dining room.

"Bless her kind heart," said Felix, espying a table set out with a piece of cold ham, &c., upon it. "Bless her kind heart, she has left this for me to eat; now I'll just sit down and take a bite, and then creep up stairs to bed without waking Dolly." So saying his hat upon the table, Felix sat down to the table and commenced eating.

"Ha! ha! ha!" said Felix, as he conveyed a piece of the juicy ham to his lips, "that was a confounded funny song—let me see—how does it go?—Come all ye jolly blades, who good members would be," and having hit upon the words and tune, Felix bawled forth most medioculously.

"My love," said Mrs. Augustus Todd, turning in bed and awaking her sleeping partner,
"my love, there's thieves in the house—I heard them singing just now something about blades —they mean perhaps to cut our throats, my love."

"Cut our throats," said Mr. Todd, "pshaw!
my dear, you have been dreaming—you women are too great cowards!"

The voice of Felix, loud and prolonged, suddenly startled Mr. Todd, as it came in tones that admitted of no dissent up stairs.

"There," said Mrs. Todd, trembling, "do you hear it now?"

"Ha! said Todd, 'it's robbers—they've got into the house, and have the impudence to have a feast off that ham, I expect. Mrs. Todd, my love,' he said, with dreadful calmness, 'I believe there is a pair of pistols in that closet, I must get up and go down.' And he made a convulsive movement with his lower limbs, as though he would have arisen. "Oh! dear, dear Augustus don't think of such a thing! If they should happen to see you coming down stairs and fire a ball into your head, what would become of me?"

"Can I," said Mr. Todd growing more magnanimous as his wife grew more fearful, and clasped more tightly, "can I hear those ruffians and not attack them?—no—no—my dear, I must go down?"

"Then," said Mrs. Todd, "I must call the watch," and springing out of bed, she threw up the window, and cried "Watch!" at the top of her voice.

In a few moments the street resounded with the peculiar sound of rattles, and in a few more a whole bevy of the guardians of the night rushed into the dwelling of Mr. Augustus Todd, through the door that Felix had forgotten to close behind him, and proceeded straight to the dining room, where they discovered our friend, his feet reposing very quietly upon the top of the piece of ham on the table, and his body reposing in a chair,—which, as well as his head, was considerably on the decline.

"Hallo," exclaimed Felix, awakened by their noise—"what the deuce do you want here—eh?"

"Why, Mr. Flinder," said the watchman of the square in which Felix resided.

"Why, Felix Flinder," said Todd, who had descended, armed with a pair of pistols.

"Why, Mr. Flinder," said Mrs. Todd, "I am surprised—what do you mean by such behav-

"Oh! I see," said Felix, beginning to realize his situation. "I've got into the wrong house?"
"Got into the wrong house?" said Mr. Todd.

"Yes," replied Felix, now sobered, "instead of opening my own door, I opened yours—and so comes this occurrence. He had a hearty laugh at it, and Felix unlocked his own door, closed it softly after him, and crept noiselessly up stairs, where he found Dolly, apparently in a deep slumber.

Next day at the dinner table there might have been noticed a sly twinkle in Dolly's eye, and evident but checked desire to burst into laughter.

"Felix, my dear," she said, cutting a slice off a very fine looking ham, "shall I help you to a piece?"

"A piece of ham," replied Felix, "a piece of ham," as the recollection of his last night's adventures rushed upon him. "A piece of ham!"

"Yes, my dear," said Dolly, "a piece of ham.
Why, I always thought you were very fond of ham."

"So I am, my dear," replied Felix, "but—"

"But—" said Dolly, bursting into a loud peal of laughter, "but you like Mr. Todd's best.
Oh! you men think your poor little wives don't know any thing, Mrs. Todd told me all about it this morning," and her round form fairly shook with laughter. "Didn't I tell you something would happen if you got that key?"

"Yes, you did, Dolly," replied Felix, "and I have thrown it away; and after this I will always take your advice. And I think that if all married men would follow my example, they would probably find themselves happier by so doing."

Felix Flinder has persevered ever since in his good resolution; and on coming seriously to reflect on the adventure of that night, he became convinced that drinking was an extremely foolish and useless habit; often leading to sad and ruinous results. Accordingly, by and with the advice and consent of Dolly, he has lately become an active and useful member of that excellent society, the "Sons of Temperance."

COMMON COURTESY.

We know a young man, says the New Haven Journal, slow, sullen, heavy-browed and ungracious, who, whenever you speak to him, answers as if it were an effort to be even decently civil, and who moreover seems to be quite content, and even proud of his civility.
And we learn to the charitable side so far, as to think this is nothing more than a bad habit of his, which has insensibly fastened upon him;
and that he goes along through the world—a world of mutual dependence—little aware of the fact, that so small a thing as his manner is constantly producing impressions, and fast forming a reputation, such as ten years hence he may regret as the great blunder of his life.

Would it not be well for every young man to remember the truthful anecdote, of the rich Quaker Banker, who, when asked the secret of his great success in life, answered, "Civility, friend, civility!" How much does it cost a man, either old or young, to be truly civil in all the intercourse of society? or rather, how much does it cost a young man to form this habit, which, if formed, will sit upon him easily, gracefully and profitably, so long as he lives? Far more depends upon the little, often despised civilities of the world, than any other single adventitious circumstances by which men rise or fall. We may look around us at any time, and see men high in place and power, who have not attained that elevation by force of individual character or great knowledge, but simply from the fact that the trifling graces of life have not been altogether despised. It is not a dancing master's grace that is now referred to, but that little benevolence of manner that recognizes in little things the rights of others, and fully acknowledges such rights.

The thousand ways in which this little courtesy does good, need hardly be mentioned. It may be said, however, that a courteous manner has a reflective influence on the benevolent feelings. It is a source of gratification to the man that practices it. If it sit naturally on a man, it is a passport to any place and any circle. It has smoothed many a rough path for men first starting in business, and been one of the things that has often crowned effort with success. The man of experience, looking on an ungainly manner in a young person just starting into the world with nothing he can depend on but himself, is not angered but rather pained by what he sees, knowing as he does that the want of that little something to please as we go along, will cause many a scratch and many a rough jog in the road, which, otherwise, might be smooth as a summer stream.

Wear a hinge in your neck, young man, and keep it well oiled.

MISTAKEN ZOOLOGY. "And so you're going out the East Indies, my darling Mrs. Marooney?" said an old Irish crooner to the young wife of a soldier about to embark for Madras.
"I've been in them parts myself, and well do I remember the torments I went through night and day with the muskatoos. They have long suckers hanging down from their heads, and they'll draw the life blood out of ye, before you can say 'pens.'"

This terrifying account lived in the memory of the young woman; the vessel made Madras roads, the decks were soon crowded, all hands delighted at sight of land, Mrs. Marooney amongst the rest, but her joy was of short duration, for on the shore she perceived an elephant; horror-struck at the sight, and in breathless agitation, she approached the mate, exclaiming, with uplifted hands, "Holy Mother!
is that a muskato?"

ENTERPRISE. Let a man appear to prosper in a particular kind of business—no matter what—and, in a twelve month, he will have enterprising neighbors all around him, rushing head over heels in the same business, at the rate of one failure a month. No matter what his pursuit was, or theirs. He might be a bookseller, a confectioner, a hatter, a parson, or a distiller,—anything and everything; and they might have been tailors, or shop-keepers, in the dry-goods or grocery line, carpenters, or attorneys—it's all the same to them. If there is money to be made, why shouldn't they make it as well as another? And into it they rush headlong, like bulls into a china-shop;
and when the smash comes, as come it certainly will, the moment they are found out—then, what have they to say for themselves? Why, just nothing at all. The times were so hard and they were so unlucky! How could they help it? Would you discourage enterprise?
The fools! They ought to be set in the stocks.
Every thing by turns and nothing long! And this they call enterprise! This they are blockheads to mistake for that far-seeing, healthy and generous determination to be something and to do something in this world out of which great men proceed like the stars at midnight, in a continual birth. Hence the fact that a son seldom or never follows the occupation of his father. Hence not one man in fifty continues for five years in the same kind of business, in the same partnership, or the same shop. And hence the multiplicity, among other things, of unprincipled and worthless newspapers—the heaviest tax, ever imposed upon a people. Enterprises, forthwith! and literary enterprises! whereby all who have anything to do with them, whether editors, proprietors, printers, or paper-makers are ruined, nineteen times out of twenty, before they are wise enough to give up in despair, an go and hang themselves in a quiet, unostentatious way.

NOBILITY OF LABOR. Though foolish men think it degrading to perform any useful labor, yet in the eyes of wise men, industry is truly honorable, and the most useful is the happiest.
A life of labor is man's natural condition and most favorable to bodily health and mental vigilance. From the ranks of industry have the world's greatest men been taken. Rome was more than once saved by a man sent from the plow. Moses had been keeping sheep forty years before he came forth as the deliverer of Israel. Jesus Christ himself, during the early part of his life, worked as a carpenter. His apostles were chosen from amongst the hardy and laborious fishermen. From this we infer that when God has any great work to perform, he selects as his instruments those who by their previous occupation have acquired habits of industry, skill and perseverance; and that, in every department of society, they are the most honorable who earn their own living by their own labor.

SATURDAY NIGHT. "How sweet, after the cares of the week comes Saturday evening!
The brain, overworked by six days of incessant labor, looks forward joyfully for repose; and a sweet, calm Sabbath steals over us in anticipation, as we enter our house. We feel that, for one day at least, we shall forget the world and all its anxieties. If it is winter, we draw up around the fire; if summer, we sit by the open window; in either case, we give ourselves up to the hour with a relish we never experience at other times. For the moment, something of the zest of childhood, in enjoying a holiday, returns to us; we seem to breathe freer, our spirits rise, little trifles amuse us, and we revel in a perfect overflow of happiness. Have you never, reader, enjoyed such Saturday evenings? How the pleasure of it is heightened if the day's business has been corroding, and if,
at its close, you have walked home through the rain and got thoroughly wetted—then what luxury to put on the slipper, to induce the dressing gown, to roll the easy chair to the fire, and sit down to a pleasant book or an hour's chat with your wife! Saturday evening—how many sweet associations does the name cou-jure up!"

VEGETABLE DIET. The Indians of South America are very strong haired, and capable of enduring great fatigue. The every day pedestrian feats are truly astonishing. Guides perform a long journey at the rate of 20 or 25 leagues a day. Their usual pace is a jog trot.
They take short steps and carry their feet close to the ground. They go up and down mountain sides quicker than a mule, and horsemen whom they accompany as guides have frequently occasion to call after them, to request them slacken their pace. A battalion, eight hundred strong, has been known to march thirteen or fourteen leagues in one day, without leaving ten or dozen stragglers on the road.
The Indian subsists on a very small quantity of the simplest food; a leathern pouch containing cocoa, suspended from his neck, is worn next to his breast. A handful or two of roasted maize is tied up in one corner of his pouch, and, in general, these are the only provisions for a very long day's journey.

SALARIES OF MEXICAN CLERGY. Archbishop-of Mexico, $130,000; the Bishop of Puebla, $110,000; the Bishop Valadolid, $105,000;
the Bishop of Guadalajara, $90,000; the Bishop of Durango, $85,000; the Bishop of Monterey, $80,000; the Bishop of Yucatan, $20, 600; the Bishop of Oaxaca, $19,000.

MEXICO. Of all the cities built by the Spaniards in the New World, Mexico is the handsomest; and Europe might be proud of reckoning it amongst her capitals. In the midst of terraces, of houses, and of flowers, which ornament these terraces, rise up churches, with domes of blue and yellow earthenware; houses, with bright, many colored walls; and balconies overhung with canvass, which gives them the appearance of a constant gala. The cathedral occupies one side of the Plaza Mayor, and towers over the palace of the presidency, a low parallelogram, containing within itself the seven administrations, a prison, a botanical garden, a barracks, and two Chambers. The Ayuntamiento (municipality) forms with the palace a right angle, continued by the porticos of Las Flores and the Parian, vast commercial streets. The streets of Santo Domingo, of San Francisco, of Tacuba, of La Monnaie, and of Monterita, pour into the Plaza Mayor, a crowd incessantly renewed always in motion; a few minutes spent in which, suffice to shew you Mexican society in its strongest contrasts of vice and virtue, of splendor and of misery.

REMEDY FOR TOOTHACHE. To a hundred grains of sulphuric ether, in which as large a quantity as possible of camphor has been dissolved add two or three drops of ammonia; thus is obtained a camphorated ammoniacal ether, which, if applied to the carious teeth, immediately relieves the pain. M. Cottereau, who is the author of the preparation, has used it in great many cases with variable success. The ether evaporates so rapidly that a layer of camphor is left in the dental cavity, which, although too light to incommode as a foreign body, is sufficient to protect the denuded nerve from the air. Besides this the ammonia acts as a cauter. The solution should be kept in a perfectly closed glass bottle.

DEFINITION OF A KISS. A kiss is thus defined in a love-letter written in the year 1679, and translated from the German.—"What is a kiss? A kiss is, as it were, a seal, expressing our sincere attachment—the pledge of future union—a dumb, but at the same time, audible language of a loving heart—a present, which, at the time that it is given, is taking from us the impression on an ivory coral press—a crimson balsam, for a love-wounded heart—a sweet bite of the lip—an affectionate pinching of the mouth—a delicious dish which is eaten with scarlet spoons—a sweetmeat which does not satisfy our hunger—a fruit which is planted and gathered at the same time—the quickest exchange of questions and answers of two lovers—the fourth degree of love."

SUMMER COMPLAINT IN CHILDREN. Mothers and nurses cannot be too careful to keep acids of every kind from children, as they bring on summer complaint, and aggravate and prolong the disease. Children of two years and under, not nursing, should be fed during the warm months, on farinaceous substances, as flour, meal, rice or arrow root. Beware of ignorant physicians prescribing port wine, or any wines or acids in this complaint; and travelling doctors going round the country with their mixtures and preparations.

WOMEN STRONGER THAN OXEN. It is related of a certain New England divine, who flourished not many years ago, and whose matrimonial relations are supposed not to have been of the most agreeable kind, that one Sabbath morning, while reading to his congregation the parable of the supper in Luke xiv., in which occurs this passage—"And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them; I pray thee to wait for me; and another said, I have married a wife and therefore cannot come," he suddenly paused at the end of this verse, drew off his spectacles, and looking around on his hearers said, with emphasis, "the fact is, my brethren, one woman can draw a man farther from the kingdom of heaven than five yoke of oxen!"

A WORD TO BOYS. The "Learned Blacksmith" says, "Boys, did you ever think that this great world with all its wealth and woe, with all its mines, mountains, oceans, seas, and rivers, with all its millions of darkly grouping men, and all the science and progress of ages, will soon be given over to the hands of the boys of the present age? Boys like you assembled in school rooms, or playing without them on both sides of the Atlantic? Believe it, and look abroad on your inheritance, and get ready to enter upon its possession. The Kings, Presidents, Governors, Statesmen, Philosophers, the Ministers, Teachers, Printers, Men of the future, are all boys, whose feet, like yours, cannot reach the floor, when seated on the benches upon which they are learning to master the monosyllables of their respective languages."

ANECDOTE OF LAFAYETTE. During the Revolutionary war Gen. Lafayette being in Baltimore was invited to a ball. He went as requested, but instead of joining in the amusements, as might be expected of a young Frenchman of twenty-two, he addressed the ladies thus: "Ladies, you are very handsome; you dance very prettily; your ball is very fine; but my soldiers have no shirts." This unique appeal was perfectly irresistible. The ball ceased, the ladies ran home and went to work, and by the next day a large number of shirts were prepared by the fairest hands of Baltimore, for the defenders of their country.

INTERESTING SIGHT. To see young ladies promenading the streets dressed in the ton of the fashion, while their mothers are taking in washing and ironing to support them.

The Massachusetts Health Insurance Company, now issue policies insuring persons against the expenses of all sickness they may have during any term, from one to five years.

INSTINCT OF BIRDS. When the lapping wants to procure food, it seeks for a worm's nest, and stamps the ground by the side of it with its feet, after the manner of boys in procuring worms for fishing. After doing this for a short time, the bird waits for the issue of the worm from the hole, which, alarmed at the shaking of the ground, endeavors to make its escape, when it is immediately seized and becomes the prey of this ingenious bird.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, AUG. 7, 1847.

John A. Greer, Editor.

"BOOK OF THE FEET." We have had "hand" books for travellers, "books of beauty," and in short, books of every variety, but this is the first that we have seen pertaining to those useful but less honored portions of the "human frame divine," the feet. No one ever disputed the utility of feet, but many have felt the inconvenience of being deprived of them; and when bereft of the natural ones, have sought to supply the loss by wood, leather and prunella. But we did not set out with the design of writing an essay on these members of the natural man, but simply to inform our readers, that a book with the above title had been published in New York by that enterprising bookseller, J. S. Redfield, which gives a complete history of boots and shoes, with illustrations of the fashions of the Egyptians, Hebrews, Persians, Greeks, and Romans, and the prevailing style throughout Europe, during the middle ages, down to the present period. The volume contains, moreover, hints to last makers, those sculptures in wood who model the feet, as our friend Ball Hughes, forms from the inanimate clay the face, and breathes into its shape an almost human expression. And all this is done by J. Sparkes Hall, patent elastic boot maker to her majesty the Queen, the Queen Dowager, and the Queen of the Belgians, and the American editor, not content with all that pertains to the mysteries of boot and shoe making in the old world, has added a history of boots and shoes in the United States and given us biographical sketches of eminent shoe makers at home and abroad, besides much other information alike interesting to the craft and the public. The disciples of Crispin, who wish to become accomplished in the business, should "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" the contents of this volume, and thus become a beautiful and finisher of soles.

COMMUNICATION WITH NEW YORK. The facilities of communication with New York at this time of writing, seem to have attained their ultimatum. The three most important routes, viz. Norwich and Worcester; Fall River; and Stonington and Providence, vie with each other in their efforts to render the accommodations comfortable, and obtain an unprecedented speed. In our late trip to the "Commercial Emporium," we passed over the Fall River road and took the Massachusetts at that place, in which we were peculiarly unfortunate as our readers have already been informed. Returning, we determined to try the Stonington route, and we do not regret it, as we had the pleasure of a passage in that palace of a boat, the OREGON, with that experienced and careful commander Capt. Seth Thayer. The "Oregon" is unquestionably the fastest boat that floats on our waters, she is moreover elegantly furnished, and as commodious and comfortable in every respect as the most questionable traveller could wish or expect. Capt. Thayer's large experience, having been familiar with the navigation of Long Island Sound for more than thirty years, and for the last twenty, as the commander of the best steamers that have travelled its waters, has secured for him an enviable and well deserved reputation. His great nautical skill, singular coolness and judgment, have tended, justly, to ensure the confidence of the public, and these qualities have rendered his efforts to serve his owners and the public eminently successful. Accidents have as yet no affinity with the name of Thayer and the boats under his command. So deeply impressed are many with the idea that they can suffer no harm under his protection, that they make it a point to travel with him in whatever boat he may command.

BRIDGEWATER BRANCH RAILROAD. This branch of the Old Colony Railroad, extending from South Abington through East Bridgewater to Bridgewater has been opened for public travel, and the trains now run to intersect all the Boston and Plymouth, trains. A direct communication is now opened from Plymouth to Bridgewater and Middleborough, New Bedford, Fall River and Newport, by intersection with the Fall River road at Bridgewater.

FEMALE TEACHERS FOR THE WEST. The Board of National Popular Education propose to collect a second class of Teachers to be sent out this fall, and it is intended they shall go through a course of preparation,—a series of lectures on subjects connected with instruction,—which will occupy four weeks. Applications are invited to be made between the 10th and 25th inst. Address Miss C. E. Beecher, (post paid) at Brattleboro', (Vt.) stating qualifications and transmitting testimonials.

DIARRHEA. People need not be long troubled with that disorder so generally prevalent at this season, commonly known as the Summer or Bowel Complaint when the certain remedy therefore is to be found on every man's dinner-table, in the shape of salt and vinegar. Two teaspoonful of the former, dissolved in half a gill of the latter, and swallowed at a draught, will in most cases effect an instant cure. The second dose, if needed, will assuredly accomplish it.

FOREIGN. The steamship Ilihermia arrived at Boston last Monday morning. The news by this arrival is unimportant. The prospect of good crops continues favorable, and the price of flour has receded 1s. 6d. per barrel. The quantity of specie brought out was not more than twenty or thirty thousand pounds.

Accounts from Ireland are of a favorable character. Fever is abating in violence, and the approaching harvest bids fair to absorb the surplus labor.

The property of the late Mr. O'Connell has been sworn under twenty five thousand pounds.

Mexico. Accounts from Mexico in relation to Peace Commissioners, are very conflicting. Later dates from the city of Mexico, via Tampico, says nothing about them. There was no quorum in the Mexican Congress on the 12th ult; the propositions of Mr. Trist were still pending before that body on the previous day, at which time General Scott had not moved towards the Capital. Gen. Pillow's command had joined Gen. Scott. Santa Anna had again resigned his office, and his resignation had been refused.

FRESH AIR. Horace Mann has well said—"people, who shudder at a flesh wound and a trickle of blood, will confine their children like convicts and compel them month after month to breathe quantities of poison. It would less impair the mental and physical constitutions of our children, gradually to draw an ounce of blood from their veins, during the same length of time, than to send them to breathe, for six hours in the day, the lifeless and poisoned air, of some of our school-rooms. Let any man, who votes for confining children in small rooms and keeping them on stagnant air, try the experiment of breathing his own breath only four times over; and if medical aid be not at hand, the children will never be endangered by his vote afterwards."

NEGRO OPERATIVES. There is a cotton factory at Arcadia, about seventeen miles from Pensacola, which is entirely worked by negroes, mostly girls. It has a thousand spindles, and makes five thousand yards of domestic weekly. This factory has been in operation about a year, and so far has met the most sanguine expectations of its proprietors.

A NEW DISCOVERY. Professor Schoenlein, it is announced has made a discovery which is making a great sensation in Germany. The professor has just discovered a method for immediately cauterizing wounds. This invention in connection with that of insensibility produced by ether, will it is said, effect a complete change in surgery.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT. The receipts into the United States Treasury during the quarter ending the 30th of June, were as nearly as could be ascertained, $20,405,050; the expenditures during the same period, $22,470,505 34.

The amount in deposits on the 26th ult, and subject to draft with the various Assistant Treasurers was $2,334,221.

Treasury Notes outstanding on the 1st of August, 1847, $14,274,339 31.

WINTER AT THE POLE. A company of 15 gentlemen, of sound constitutions and accustomed to cold, undertook to pass the last winter at Spitzbergen, where the intense cold has heretofore made it impossible for man to reside. In spite of all their precautions and hardy constitutions, six of them died before spring. The surviving nine arrived at Archangel, after having suffered intensely from many causes, the absence of daylight being one of the principal.

PIC NIC. The annual family Pic Nic of the descendants of the late Mr. Seth Spear, of this place, will be held at the "old homestead," at Hough's Neck, on Wednesday next.

ACCIDENT. Dr. John C. Champney, of South Abington, (Mass.) was severely injured this week, while attempting to manage a restive horse which was attached to a plough.

A NEW SPECULATION. An individual of Howard county, (Va.) has recently purchased a large island in the Chesapeake Bay, which he has stocked with black cats. A very large number has been purchased and sent to their secluded home. The object is to raise them for their fur, which is quite valuable.

ELECTRICITY—TELEGRAPH WIRE. Professor Olmstead, in a communication in the New Haven Journal, denies being the author of an article recently published concerning Telegraph Wires. He says:—

"The idea that we shall have no heavy thunder showers, or hear of lightning striking, as long as we have telegraph wires spread over the earth, could not, I should suppose, be entertained by any one who reflects how small a proportion such structures of art bear, in extent, to the grand operations of nature. Although a line of telegraphic wires sometimes undoubtedly facilitates the passage of electricity from the clouds to the earth, (not by attracting the fluid, but by diminishing the resistance always experienced by electricity in passing through air,) yet nothing appears to me more improbable than that structures so limited in extent as these are, and always must be, compared with the dimensions of the whole atmosphere, should, to any degree, prevent the accumulation of electricity in thunder storms. One opinion, however, which I publicly expressed through the medium of this paper, a year or two since, may be worth repeating, namely, that on account of the tendency of a thunder cloud, which approaches near to a line of wires, to discharge its electricity through that channel, care ought to be taken, when the poles give warning of the approach of a thunder cloud to some part of the line, to complete the circuit by connecting with the earth, and thus to prevent the charge from exploding through the person of the operator. Without this precaution I have for some time believed that the consequences would sooner or later be fatal."

One of the officers of the Branch Bank of Virginia, at Lynchburg, has absconded, carrying off some $13,600 of the funds of the Bank. Upwards of one hundred thousand souls have, from Liverpool (Eng.) alone, quitted their native land within the last six months. Of these, during the quarter ending on the 30th June, 32,258 came passengers to the United States. The Repellers of Boston, have determined to recognize John O'Connell, Daniel's son, as the leader of the Repeal agitation, and have forwarded to him a sum of money. Abbott Lawrence, as Chairman of the Executive Committee, appointed at the Chicago Convention, has called a meeting of that Committee, to be held in New York on the 15th of September. The Postmaster General has decided that sealing a newspaper in a wrapper, with a seal on which the name of the person sending the paper, is set, is equivalent to writing on the newspaper itself. A letter from St. Petersburg states that a great Russian proprietor, has presented their freedom to eight thousand serfs of both sexes, belonging to him. The Canada papers are loud in their complaint of great numbers of British troops deserting their flag and fleeing to the United States to enlist in our army. An old hard shelled minister observed in a late sermon, that "No one got religion in a great haste?" Think of this ladies! A young lady residing in South Boston was taken by a young man, with whom she was slightly acquainted, into a shop, where a glass of drugged soda was given her. A man while drinking a glass of wine in a coffee house, at New Orleans, recently fell like a lump of lead on the floor. In a few minutes he was a stiffened corpse.

Health! Health!!
DR. WOOD'S SARSAPARILLA AND WILD CHERRY BITTERS.

THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPARILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver—strengthens the Nerves, and at once secures

HEALTH AND VIGOR to the whole system. In all cases of JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, LOSS OF APPETITE, HABITUAL COSTIVENESS, SCROFULA, HEADACHE, LANGOUR, and that

DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS, which is so common a complaint in the SPRING AND SUMMER season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous of its power.

For further particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.
Be particular and ask for Doct. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters" pressed on the glass, and that each label on the bottle is signed by the proprietor, E. Thornton Jr., New Bedford.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.

AGENTS.

Champooing and Hair-Cutting.
WILLIAM E. AMBUSH,
WOULD respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of Quincy, that he has constantly on hand a new and improved

CHAMPOOING MIXTURE, for superior to the far famed Eagle Hair-oil, which when scientifically applied, renders the Hair soft and pliable and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant to and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores the scalp to a healthy condition, which must be accomplished before the hair will make its appearance. It is the great desideratum of the age.

Ladies wishing this application will be waited upon at their residences by W. E. Ambush, by leaving orders at his Emporium, Southern Building, Quincy.

POETRY.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS HENCE.
Who'll through these streets in eager haste,
One hundred years from now,
And mammon's fleeting phantoms chase
With care-worn anxious brow?
To gain a name
For wealth or fame—
Ambition's goal,
Or honor's scroll—
Who, who will be that spell-bound throng,
Passing with hasty steps along,
One hundred years from now?

Where, O where will be the men,
One hundred years from now,
Who now the virtuous poor condemn
With purse-proud, haughty brow?
Who give a sneer
To misery's tear, Withhold relief
To orphan's grief?
Where, O where will be their pride,
When rich and poor lie side by side,
One hundred years from now?

Where, where will be those forms of grace,
One hundred years from now,
Who live in the giddy "chaos,"
And at whose shrine we bow?
The raptur'd kiss,
The dreams of bliss,
The plighted vow
Of loves now—
Where, where will be those hopes and fears,
Those lovers' smiles, and maiden's tears,
One hundred years from now?

Who'll grace our courts as judges grave,
One hundred years from now;
Nor warp the law, nor screen the knave,
When wealth and influence bow,
When bribes of Gold,
And crimes untold,
Make justice sleep
And mercy weep;
Who, who will be those jurists pure,
And bribe and sycophants allow?
One hundred years from now?

Who'll guard our rights o'er land and sea,
One hundred years from now;
Stand to the banner of the free,
And dare confront a foe;
And never yield
O'er flood or field;
Or do no wrong—
Submit to none—
Who, who will be those patriots brave
To guard our flag o'er land and wave,
One hundred years from now?

Where, where will the proud despots be,
One hundred years from now,
Who'd crush the germ of liberty,
And make the nations bow,
They'll be forgot,
Their names will rot,
Nor nation feel
Their iron heel—
And the fair goddess, Liberty,
Will reign o'er every land and sea,
One hundred years from now.

GET UP EARLY.
Get up early! Time is precious,
Waste it not in bed;
Get up early! while the dew drops
O'er the fields are spread;
Get up early! when the red sun
First begins to rise;
Get up early! when the darkness,
Fades from earth and skies.
Get up early! It is sinful
To be wasting time;
Get up early! while the dear birds
Sing their morning chime;
Get up early! while the flowers
Blush upon the sod;
Get up early! while all nature
Blesses Nature's God.
Get up early! and prepare ye
For the long day's toil!
Get up early! if ye labor
To improve your soil;
Get up early! if a rhymelet
Be your task to write;
Get up early! oh, ye lazy,
And feel as I do, sigh!

ANECDOTES.

A trader, of vastly more flippancy than sense, was in the habit of quizzing every body that came in contact with him. One cold, stormy day last spring, an old joker happened in his store, and as he came in began to say:
"Cold wet storm! cold wet storm! you see any way."
"Why, yes," says yardstick. "Did you ever hear of a hot dry storm, old gent? I have, you see, any way."
"Think I have," said yardstick. "I have, you see, any way; when it rained fire and brimstone on Sodom and Gomorrah, that was what I should call a hot, dry storm."

A young and very pretty lady, riding in the cars recently, was observed to have a piece of "court plaster" on her lip. When the cars had emerged from one of the long covered bridges, into the light, it had disappeared, but the eye instantly detected it clinging to the lip of the young man who sat on the seat with her. "They both looked as innocent as if they hadn't been doing nothing."

"I say, Jenny, lend me your newspaper?" "I can't do it; you wouldn't lend me your new coat 't'other day, you know." "Nonsense, that's another thing; I only want it to read to the ladies." "Can't come it, Jerry, I only wanted to wear your coat to see the ladies."

"Yes, ma'am, that is a crack article," said a store-keeper to a lady purchaser.
"Oh mercy," cried she, "if the thing is cracked I don't want it."

MISCELLANY.

"TIT FOR TAT."

Kate Melroy was by far the prettiest girl in all Lawrenceville, and that was saying considerable for Lawrenceville could boast of a goodly number of pretty faces and bright eyes. But Kate's eyes were indisputably the brightest, her cheeks the rosiest, and her smile the sweetest; yet with all these charms, Kate was a wayward and capricious being, and as Kates usually are, a desperate flirt. It would seem, however, that Kate was not quite so dextrous in warding off the arrows of Cupid from her own heart, as she was directing them to others. Lionel Stanwood, a fine, frank, handsome, good natured fellow as ever suffered from her with her arrowed arrows, had fallen in love with her, and what was more, succeeded in making himself vastly agreeable to the capricious little maiden. Kate's unusual tractability was a matter of surprise to all, which was still more increased when Lionel bore off the palm from the field of rivalry.

Lionel felt very proud and happy, when he became the accepted lover and affianced husband of Kate Melroy; but his happiness was of short duration. He loved her too well to impose any restrictions upon her liberty, and Kate very wrongly took advantage of his affection. She seemed to consider it her undoubted privilege to flirt with the beaux as much as ever, and what was infinitely worse, adopted every method to tease and ridicule her lover, which her busy brain could invent. Lionel bore in silence, what few lovers would have done, and at length, gathered sufficient courage to expostulate gently with her. Kate pouted at first, and declared his jealousy was really unbearable; but seeing him seriously displeased, she put on a very sorry look, and begged his pardon. But Kate's compunction was evidently short lived, for she continued as perverse as ever, and manifested the utmost independence imaginable. Lionel's natural urbanity of temper was proof against this for a long time; but at length a circumstance occurred, which aroused his indignation in earnest.

A conceited young fellow of a very foppish appearance came into the village and at once singled out Kate as the special object of his attention. Kate knew her lover detested even the very name of fop, and she purposely encouraged Lawson's attentions, thinking it would be a most effectual mode of teasing poor Lionel. We must exonerate Kate from the imputation of deliberate malice; she really loved Stanwood, and would have desisted at once, had she imagined half the pain she inflicted. Her inherent love of fun and mischief prompted her to do many things which a moment's reflection would have convinced her were not only unjust but unkindly; yet Kate should have known there were better ways for amusing herself than by pining others, and the punishment which her folly subsequently received was, if not well merited, at least well timed.

Lionel lost all patience when he found himself superseded in the most trivial attentions by one whom he regarded as the most conceited puppy living, and moreover witnessed the open encouragement he received from Kate. Lionel at first seriously meditated leaving her forever; but he found he had need of more firmness, than he could easily summon to his aid. He resolved, however, to be duly revenged on the coquetish maiden; and how well he carried out his determination the sequel will show.

We have said that Kate Melroy was the prettiest girl in Lawrenceville, so every one said, and so she thought herself, though she did not say it; but now a circumstance occurred which threatened seriously to endanger her reputation as the rival beauty. A relative of

TEACHERS' CONVENTION.

According to previous notice, a considerable number of zealous Teachers assembled at Lyceum Hall: the Convention was called to order by J. W. Green of Quincy, Chairman of the Committee of arrangements.

The organization was speedily made, by the choice of the following officers:

President—G. F. THAYER, of Boston.
Vice President—JAS. W. GREENE, of Quincy.
Secretary—NATH'L SOUTHWORTH, of Walpole.
Assistant Secretary—DANA P. COLBURN, of Brookline.

Treasurer—C. A. CUMMINGS, of Quincy.
Business Committee—G. A. Walton, of West Newton, Geo. T. Littlefield, of Milton, Geo. Newcomb, of Quincy.

This Committee soon announced that James Henry, Jr., of Little Falls, Herkimer county, (N. Y.) author of a chart, called "The Family and School Monitor," would give an address of twenty-five minutes, on the general subject of education.

Mr. Henry said—There is no word so often used, so much talked of, and written about, as education, but perhaps it does not awaken precisely the same ideas in any two minds. I shall speak of it, in a most extensive sense. It begins when a mortal first enters the world, and continues as long as they can be received. It is properly divided into education of the family, of the school, and of society. It embraces four great departments; viz. physical, moral, intellectual and professional education. In all these departments, education is the development and discipline of the powers and faculties of the one educated.

He proceeded very happily to illustrate all these departments by his chart.

After a few questions had been asked and answered by Mr. Henry, S. J. Ellis, of Boston, and Mr. S. J. Ellis, of Boston, accompanied by Outline Maps, read a lecture on the Analytical mode of teaching Geography, and the use of Outline maps.

Mr. Southard of Walpole, then commenced some remarks on deficiencies in teaching Geography, and all other sciences. When he had spoken about five minutes, it being twelve o'clock, the convention adjourned to meet again at two P. M.

Afternoon Session.

The President being in the chair, it was Voted, to limit the time of extemporaneous speaking to ten minutes, unless a speaker may, by the convention, be requested to speak longer.

After singing, led by Mr. Fitz, Mr. Southard resumed the floor, and by the use of a globe invented by Silas Cornell, of Rochester, (N. Y.) he illustrated his ideas of exactness in teaching, and the importance of fixing in the mind of the pupil, clear and distinct ideas of every subject presented.

When ten minutes expired, he was requested to proceed, and spoke of the use of maps, hanging on the walls, to which frequent reference should be made, to cultivate in scholars the habit of forming correct mental pictures of places and circumstances, about which they may be reading. Pointing to Samaria, on the map of Palestine, he spoke of the heavenly Teacher, who, on a hot day at noon asked for water of a woman who came to draw it.

If the scholars are reading of such a scene let them see the picture of the woman at the well, and that the scholar should ask water of one who was drawing it, and that definiteness could not be well applied to moral subjects, though it might to exact science.

Mr. Fowle and Mr. Spear of Plymouth, and Dr. Cornell of Stoughton, concurred with the first speaker. Mr. Fowle said no teacher should undertake to teach what he or she does not distinctly understand.

Mr. Chadwick of Bangor, (Me.) asked for information as to the best way of interesting scholars in the drawing of outline maps.

Mr. Fowle, in reply, related an anecdote illustrating the want of exact geographical knowledge, even among teachers, which the frequent drawing of outline maps would have a tendency to remedy. Teachers should begin, and make maps on the black board, and the scholars will soon try to do the same, and both teacher and scholar will rapidly improve.

After an inquiry about outline maps by Mr. Greene, to which Mr. Bliss replied, Mr. Wetherell of Rochester, (N. Y.) expressed his regret that there was so much reliance on aids to teachers.

Mr. Walton of the model school at West Newton, thought outline maps of great utility.

Mr. Spear of Plymouth, said the best place for outline maps to be printed, is on the mind of the pupil, and he said he would roll up all maps which are drawn on different scales, for careless scholars are sure to get wrong ideas of the sizes of countries from them.

Mr. Southard showed how easy it is to form a habit of noticing the scale of a map, by calling each degree of latitude seventy miles—five degrees three hundred and fifty miles—ten degrees seven hundred miles, &c.

Mr. Seth Littlefield, who uses Bliss' maps in school, being questioned, said he found his scholars easily understood the scales on which they are drawn.

After a short recess, Mr. Greene read an essay on monitory teaching, in which he described his successful operation in his own school.

Some discussion followed, in the course of which Mr. Fowle read the following letter, as an interesting relic of the past:

Copy of a Letter from Dr. Benjamin Waterhouse of Cambridge, to the Rev. Dr. Bentley of Salem, dated July 23, 1819:

MY DEAR SIR—As my friend, Joseph Lancaster, is going about doing good, I thought I could not do better than to give him a line to you, whenever he goes to give a lecture in Salem. You have heard of his labors, and doubtless know his character. His lecture was replete with matter that you would take delight in hearing; not that I believe it contained facts and matter you never heard before, but it was wisely scattered facts, concentrated. He lectured at Quincy, and I received a letter from your venerable friend, President Adams, this day, in which he says:

"I have heard friend Lancaster with pleasure. He is an excellent scholar and academical disciplinarian. He forms his companies into Battalions, Battalions into Regiments, his Regiments into Brigades, and teaches them with his tactics with as masterly skill as Frederick or Napoleon could have done; and all this without a whip, fustian or box on the ear, and all this by the simple action of that main spring of human nature is this system, than the old one of schooling, snarling, growling, boxing and whipping. I believe his sincere 'holding forth' will do more good than Whitefield's did seventy years ago."

Thus far John Adams. Mr. Lancaster has lectured at the Old South, at Dr. Morse's, and I understand Dr. Worcester has offered him his pulpit in Salem.

Accept the respectful and cordial salutations of your steady friend,

BENJAMIN WATERHOUSE.

After a brief discussion, in which it was agreed that each teacher should carry out his own system, and that the monitory system might be useful in many cases, the convention adjourned to meet at seven in the evening, to hear lectures from Mr. Tillinghast and Mr. Fowle.

Evening Session.

Met at 7 o'clock. It having been proposed to visit Ex-President Adams, a committee consisting of Messrs. Fowle, Wetherell and Greene, were requested to call on that venerable gentleman, and inquire at what hour to-morrow, (if any,) it would be agreeable to him to receive a visit from us.

When they returned, they reported that ten o'clock would best suit his convenience, whereupon the convention voted to proceed to his house at that hour. It was also voted to make an excursion to the granite quarries at five, under the guidance of Mr. Sawyer, and to meet at eight in the morning.

Mr. Tillinghast, of the Normal School at Bridgewater, then gave an address on Elementary Teaching, and after the convention had united in singing, W. B. Fowle gave an address on the claims of Teaching to be ranked among the learned professions.

It was then voted that the thanks of the convention be presented to Messrs. Fowle and Tillinghast, for their excellent addresses, and that they be requested to furnish copies for publication.

It was voted that a committee of five be chosen to attend to this business. As it was late, the announcement of their names was deferred till morning, and the convention adjourned.

FRIDAY, August 12th, 1817. The Convention met at eight o'clock. Extracts from the scriptures were read by the President, a prayer offered by Rev. Mr. Davis of Quincy, and the convention joined in singing under the direction of Mr. Fitz.

The President being under the necessity of leaving for Boston, resigned the chair to the Vice-President.

Voted, to dispense with the reading of the minutes of yesterday's proceedings. The Secretary read a letter from Mr. Thayer, President of the Convention, nominating Messrs. Davis and Sawyer of Quincy, G. T. Littlefield of Milton, G. A. Walton of West Newton, and D. P. Colburn of Brookline, as the committee to correspond with Messrs. Tillinghast and Fowle on the subject of the last evening's lectures. The chairman of the business committee reported several subjects for the consideration of the committee, and on his motion the convention voted to listen to an essay on Emulation in schools from G. P. Littlefield.

After some discussion on the subject of Mr. Littlefield's lecture, which was participated in by several gentlemen, Dr. Cutler took the floor by request, and gave a short lecture on Physiology. It being nearly ten o'clock the convention now proceeded to the house of Ex-President Adams, to pay their respects to the venerable statesman.

(Mr. Fowle, in behalf of the teachers, made a brief address to Mr. Adams, to which he replied, in a voice audible to those only who were very near. A copy of the address and reply was not obtained in season for this paper.)

The convention re-assembled in the hall at about eleven o'clock and listened to a lecture by Mr. S. T. Littlefield on Moral Education.

Dr. Cutler then read a paper on the character and merits of Messrs. Ritchie of Duxbury, and Wetherell of Rochester. The Convention now adjourned till Afternoon Session.

Convention called to order by the Vice-President. Mr. Batchelder of Lynn, delivered an interesting lecture on the subject of book keeping.

Considerable discussion followed on various subjects.

The exercises proper in school for children under seven years of age, was adopted as a subject for discussion.

Mr. Henry made some remarks on the subject of physiology recommending that practical lessons be given by the teacher to illustrate the laws of health.

Mr. Batchelder of Lynn, spoke on the importance of inculcating good principles and the method of teaching letters and words.

Mr. Colburn of Brookline, followed, describing a method of teaching counting and elementary arithmetic. Mr. Walton of West Newton spoke on the same subject recommending that scholars be early taught to write numbers.

Mr. Chadwick of Bangor, thought that exercises on the properties of objects should be given in Primary schools.

Mr. Sawyer of West Roxbury, thought young children should be taught drawing, beginning with simple lines, and proceeding with familiar objects.

The following question was then taken up: "Do the teachers composing this Convention succeed in preventing whispering in their schools?"

Mr. S. T. Littlefield said he tried to keep his little scholars employed, and furnished them with books in which they might amuse themselves by drawing. To the large scholars he explained the importance of order, and took their vote not to whisper. He allowed them two minutes at a time for free communication with each other.

W. C. Bradley, of Peabody, (Vt.) gave an interesting account of his management in school.

After many instructive remarks on several gentlemen, the convention adjourned to half past 7.

Evening Session.

After singing, the committee appointed to request copies of lectures for publication, reported that they had received a letter from Mr. Fowle, declining the honor intended him.

The chairman of the business committee reported that there were bills against the convention to the amount of $480, and that it was desirable to raise two or three dollars more than that amount.

On a motion sustained by Dr. Clark of Quincy, a collection was taken sufficient for all the claims. Hon. Horace Mann then delivered a lecture on Teachers' Motives.

A committee of five was chosen to call another convention, viz. Messrs. John Wilson of Dedham, D. P. Colburn of Brookline, Seth T. Littlefield of Milton, G. A. Walton of West Newton, and G. A. Sawyer of West Roxbury, who have power to call it anywhere in New England, at their discretion.

A vote of thanks to the officers having passed, the convention then adjourned at about half past ten o'clock, all seeming highly delighted.

N. SOUTHWORTH, Secretary.
D. P. COLBURN, Assistant Sec'y.

A Roll containing the names of more than one hundred practical teachers who were present, has been prepared for insertion, but is omitted for want of room.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION.

MR. EDITOR—The following resolve offered by a Teacher, having no books or charts for sale, was peremptorily laid on the table, and a vote passed not to publish the same with the proceedings of the Convention:

Resolved—That the Instruction Tool, otherwise the rod—is sometimes as absolutely necessary in the moral and intellectual education as the staff of life,—bread,—is in the physical.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, AUG. 14, 1817.

John A. Green, Editor.

CAUSES OF ACCIDENTS ON RAILROADS. An "Engine-Driver" and a "Civil Engineer" have written letters to the London Times, upon the causes of railroad accidents. The Engineer lays down the plain principle that it is in the power of companies to avoid accidents on their lines, and as a consequence infers that they should be compelled to do so.

The Engineer-Driver gives a list of various causes of railroad accidents, which are not so applicable in this country, and "says the real and true cause of much of the loss of life upon railways, comes of their being so few breakmen allowed to a train. A very great check can be given to railway accidents by having a breakman allowed to every railway carriage; for there would then be little probability of running foul, because the whole train could be soon brought under hand, from off a speed of even thirty miles an hour."

COAL. It has been stated that the price of coal the present season, particularly the latter part, would be extremely high, and consequently purchasers should buy without delay. This is all moonshine, and we are glad that our friend of the Hingham Patriot has correctly informed his readers of this base design of speculators. He truly says, "The receipts, thus far, the present year, of all kinds of coal, have far exceeded those of last year up to the present time;" and what evidence therefore is there that the quantity of this necessary article will be very scarce and the price be enormously high.

THE NEXT PRESIDENT. The signs of the times clearly indicate who will be the successful candidate for the Presidential chair at the expiration of the present incumbent's term. A sumptuous dinner was given to Maj. Gen. Taylor on the fourth of July, at Monterey, (Mexico) by the merchants and principal citizens of the town. The General made a speech which was called forth by a toast associating his name with the Presidency. It was the same in spirit with his letters upon the subject. He is the peoples' candidate, (see, party, and local considerations,) will be put off the question of his election.

ROBBERY. An extensive robbery was committed at Newton Corner, on Tuesday night. The store of Messrs Locke & Cole was broken open, and about one thousand dollars of dry goods were taken. The thieves entered the store by boring a hole through a back window and the shutter unfastened. A young man slept in the chamber above but was not awakened. They took the precaution, however, to fasten him into the chamber. The audacity of these numerous robberies committed upon country stores in the vicinity of the city, says the Boston Times, shows beyond a doubt that there is an organized band of experienced robbers, who are carrying out a plan previously matured. Their success so far has been astonishing. Within two or three months something like twenty stores have been robbed in this way, and in no case has the plunder been under one or two hundred dollars.

POST OFFICE REGULATIONS. On and after the 31st ult, Postmasters are prohibited from forwarding subscriptions for public journals, as they have been in the habit of doing for a long time past, the regulations which conferred this privilege having been rescinded. Hereafter persons desiring to subscribe, or to renew their subscriptions to newspapers, must enclose the money in a letter. The postage under the new law is very trifling to each individual subscriber.

MASSACHUSETTS REGIMENT. At an election for Officers of company C. held at Monterey, Horace S. Howe, sergeant major of the regiment, was elected Captain, in place of Capt. Ashley, resigned. Lieuts. Thwing and Andrews, superseded by the election of Howe, resigned.

MEXICO. The late news from the seat of war, that Gen. Scott had entered Mexico with the loss of two hundred men at Rio Frio, has not been confirmed. There is no late authentic news from the army of much importance.

HEAVY FINES. Two persons have been fined, the past week, in Boston, for violating the license law, one two hundred dollars, and if not paid, six months in the House of Correction; the other, one hundred and ten dollars.

INCENDIARIES. Two boys were arrested in Roxbury last Tuesday, charged with setting fire to a ropewalk in that city. They were examined before John J. Clark, Esq., and bound over for trial at Dedham. One was eight and the other eleven years of age.

Champooing and Hair-Cutting.

WILLIAM E. AMBUSH, WOULD respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of Quincy, that he has constantly on hand a new and unequalled

CHAMPOOING MIXTURE, for superior to the famous Eagle Balm, which when scientifically applied, renders the Hair soft and pliable and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores the scalp to a healthy condition, which must be accomplished before the hair will make its appearance. It is the great desideratum of the age.

Ladies wishing this application will be waited upon at their residences by W. E. Ambush, by leaving orders at his Emporium, Souther's Building, Quincy.

POETRY.

THE NEEDLE.

What hast thou seen, with thy shining eye,
Thou needle, so subtle and keen?
"I have been in Paradise, stainless and fair,
And sited the throne of fig leaves there,
To the form of its fallen queen."

The mantles and wimples, the hoods and veils,
That the belles of Judah wore,
When their haughty men, and their glance of fire,
Enkindled the elegant prophet's ire
I help'd to fashion of yore.

The beaded belt of Indian maid
I have deck'd with as true a zeal
As the gorgeous ruff of the knights of old,
Or the monarch's mantle of purple and gold
Or the satrap's broder'd heel.

I have lent to Beauty new power to reign,
At bridal, and courtly hall,
Or wedded to Fashion, have help'd to bind
Those gossamer links, that the strongest mind
Have something held in thrall.

I have drawn a drop, so round and red,
From the finger small and white,
Of the startled child, as she strove with care
Her doll to deck with some gewgaw rare,
But wept at my puncture bright.

I have gazed on the mother's patient brow,
As my utmost speed she plied,
To shield from winter, her children dear,
And the knell of midnight smote her ear,
While they slumbered at her side.

I have heard in the hut of the pining poor,
The shivering inmate's sigh,
When faded the warmth of her last, faint brand,
As slow from her cold, and clammy hand,
She let me drop,—"to die!"

THE THREE VOICES.

What saith the Past to thee? Weep!
Truth is departed;
Beauty hath died like the dream of a sleep,
Love is faint-hearted;
Trifles of sense, the profoundly unreal,
Scare from our spirit God's holy ideal—
So as a funeral bell, slowly and deep,
So tolls the Past to thee? Weep!

How speaks the Present hour? Aet!
Walk, upward glancing;
So shall thy footsteps in glory be tracked,
Slow, but advancing.
Scorn not the smallness of daily endeavor;
Let the great meaning enoble it ever;
Drop not our efforts expended in vain;
Weigh no trifles that take no gain.

What doth the future say? Hope!
Lure thy soul onward;
Look where the light fringes the far rising slope—
Day cometh onward;
Watch! Though so long be twilight delaying
Let the first sunbeam arise on thee praying;
Fear not, for greater is God by thy side,
Than armies of Satan against thee allied.

RELIGION.

Like snow that falls where waters glide,
Earth's pleasures fade away;
They melt in Time's destroying tide,
And cold as while they stay;
But joys that from Religion flow,
Like stars that gild the night,
Amid the darkest gloom of woe,
Shine forth with sweetest light.

Religion's ray no clouds obscure;
But o'er the Christian's soul
It sheds a radiant calm and pure,
Though tempests round him roll;
His heart may break 'neath sorrow's stroke,
But to its latest thrill,
Like diamonds shining when they're broke,
Religion lights it still.

ANECDOTES.

Two college graduates, neither of them remarkable for doing much, parted on the morning of their graduation, and met again for the first time after nearly twenty years, one of them poor as a church mouse, and the other a semi-millionaire, when the following dialogue took place: "Well, how do you flourish?" said the rich one. "Poor as death," replied the other. "Ah! that's a pity. I am afraid you have not been industrious. Industry always acquires wealth in this country." "Indeed, by what industry did you acquire yours?" "Why, I—I married a rich wife."

A very small man who is blessed with a very large wife, who instead of looking up to him with admiration, is in the habit of looking down upon him with something akin to contempt, called her, by way of compliment, "my better half." "Your better half," she said, with a disdainful sneer, "you had better say your better three-quarter; you are not more than one-fourth of the joint concern, no how!"

A tolerably dressed female entering a grocery in which there were several customers, said, "have you any fresh corned Pork?" "Yes, ma'am." "How much is this sugar a pound?" "One shilling, ma'am." "Let me have," she continued, lowering her voice, "half a pint of gin, and charge it as sugar on the book!"

"Betty," said a house mistress to her newly-acquired maid, "why do you not rise early in the morning—have the fires made, and the breakfast prepared in better season?"—"It must be done," said Betty, "if I am to tell the truth, I'm dreadful bashful 'bout peering afore folks; that's why makes me so late."

When Sir William Hamilton announced to the Royal Irish Academy his discovery of the central sun—the star round which our orb of day and its planetary attendants revolve—a waggish member exclaimed "What! our sun's sun, that must be a grand sun!"

A military officer who hated flogging, used to expose unruly soldiers with large bomb-shells tied to their legs. A sailor seeing this called out, "My eyes, whippersnapper! only look here—I'm blest if here isn't a sojer at anchor."

MISCELLANY.

THE HAWTHORN BOUGH.

A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile—a—Shakespeare.

In a small upper room in one of those off-streets in Paddington, where a decent poverty seems to struggle with the dingy squalor of a really 'poor neighborhood,' sat a young girl of about fifteen or sixteen years of age, busily plying her needle to some 'plain work,' from which she ever and anon cast a cheerful loving look, towards an elderly woman, who was seated near her, and in whose face there was a care worn expression, made more glaringly conspicuous by the heavy eyes, sunken cheeks, drawn lips, and extreme whiteness of ill-health. After a few vain attempts to return a smile in reply to the bright glances of her child, the mother said:

'I wish I could be more gay, and make you a better companion than I do, May, to cheer you through your task; but I can't help feeling sad to see you sitting there hour after hour, stitching away, this fine afternoon, instead of being out and enjoying the air; or if work must be done, as you surely it must—else how are we to get bread?—still it's hard I must sit here with my hands before me, doing nothing to help you all these long hours, since six o'- clock this morning, when you were up, like a dear bird as you are, to get my breakfast and then to sit down to earn our dinner.'

'Mind and get well and strong soon, dear mother, then you can work as much as you like, but till then be good and sit still, and help me as you do now, for when you chat to me and amuse me, you help me on ever so much;
and then, when you read to me this morning some of that lovely 'Story of a Feather' in the old number of Punch which neighbor Johnson lent us, you cannot think how you helped me—the needle seemed to fly!'

The mother smiled and sighed. 'To listen to you, May,' said she, 'one would think it was rather a good thing that I should have had a bad fever, and be unable to hold a needle, or do anything but talk or read—but you're young and hopeful, and see every thing in a cheerful light, and—'

'Well, mother, and that's a happy thing, isn't it? That's an excellent piece of comfort to think of—to be young and strong, and able to work for you, dear; for you, mother,' said she, getting up to kiss the pale face, which brightened as it touched the glowing round cheek of youth, 'I must steal one little moment to give you a hug now and then, mustn't I? if it's only to tell you how happy I am to have you to work for; not like poor bereaved Patty,
the feather-dresser,' added she, with a shade crossing her face, 'but I have you, who have so many a tedious hour, all day and all night too, for many a long year worked and slaved for me when I was a bit of a child, and could do nothing to help you all that while—eh, mother?—all that while—you forgot that, mother; for a little useless child, mother?'

Her mother smiled—a real smile this time —and murmured, 'Thank God, I had you, darling, to work for!'

'That's just what I say—thank God we have each other to work for; no one need be very miserable who has some body to love them, somebody to love and somebody to work for,'
said stout-hearted May, as she tripped back to her needle again, after having drawn her mother's chair a little nearer to the window that she might amuse herself with looking out into the street. 'Tell me what you see, as I work, mother,' said May, 'and then it will be as good as if I were looking out myself, and better.'

'There is Charlotte Dickson going out again, as she did yesterday afternoon, and the day before, and the day before that, dressed so smartly; it seems rather hard that she should be enjoying so much of this fine weather, while my poor May is obliged to sit at home every day, for I hear that Charlotte gives her mother a great deal of trouble, and—'

'Well then, I'm sure I would not change places with her,' said May, laughing, 'for all her holidays! nor would you have me do so, mother, would you?'

Her mother had been looking at Charlotte, and following her with her eyes down the street, and what she saw of the girl's flaunting, careless, free manners, made her answer in a fervent voice, God forbid! 'Two young men lounced by, and as they passed Charlotte she uttered a heartless laugh which struck a chill to the mother's heart, and made her repeat shudderingly yet thankfully, 'God forbid,
May!'

'Now what do you see, mother?' asked May;
and then, without waiting for an answer, she added, 'I'm like the poor lady in the story of Bluebeard, ain't I, mother? asking her sister to look out for her and saying, 'Sister Anne, sister Anne, what do you see now?' By the by, that's one of the beauties of needlework;
poor needlework that you are always abusing for my sake, mother; it always lets you amuse yourself with thinking over all the pretty stories you have ever read.'

'Well, and I am something like sister Anne,' said her mother, 'for I see a flock of sheep coming along; and the dog goes yelping round and round them; and the poor man who is driving them looks hot and tired, but not at all like the knight on horseback, sister Anne's brother.'

'And I should think the poor sheep don't enjoy their walk with the dog barking and worrying at them, and the man with his red dusty face of course is not very comfortable,' said May; 'so you see, mother, walking out is not always the pleasantest thing in the world, though the weather be fine and bright.'

'The mother and daughter smiled at each other, as the former shook her head, saying,
'Ah, May!'

'Well, now, mother, at last you really will have your wish that I should go out and get a little fresh air,' said May, 'for I've just finished my work, and I promised to take it home
this evening, see here, this set of linen for Mrs.
Mornington, and these trilled wrappers for Mrs. Benuchamp—both at Bayswater, so it will be a delightful walk for me, and I shall enjoy it all the more this fine evening for having been in the house all day. If I were like you naughty mother, I should regret that you can't go with me; but I won't for you are staying at home to get well soon, ready to go out with your own May happily together, in the nice long summer evenings when we can't see to work. Besides,' added she, 'in honor of this evening (when I knew—at least I hoped—I should finish my two pieces of work), I have got some rice and some milk, that I may have a nice little supper together when I come home; and Betty Simpson has promised me she will come up and set on the saucepan for you; and then if you were to have gone out walking with me, who would have watched the rice-milk to see that it did not boil over. I should like to know? And thus cheerily ran on the little sempstress, as she tied on her bonnet, and packed up her work, and kissed her mother fondly, and tripped off on her errand, leaving an atmosphere of hope and blithful courage behind to keep the mother's heart warm with comfortable thoughts of her till her return.

May walked quickly that she might be the sooner home; so quickly, that when she arrived at Mrs. Mornington's she was very glad to sit down in the hall, where she was bid to wait till the lady of the house could see her.
It was a pleasant place, this hall, at least so it seemed to the little sempstress, who had been shut up in a close room in a narrow street all day. It was spacious and airy, and the white stone floor contrasted well with the rich dark red tints of some parti-colored Indian matting; there were stands of green-house plants ranged around, and there was a glass door that stood open at the farther end of the hall, giving a view of the brilliant flower-beds in the garden, and admitting their pleasant fragrance, which was wafted in on the soft spring evening air, and brought sweet and balmy freshments, to the young workwoman.
She, with her keen sense of enjoyment, gave herself up to the voluptuous influence, and leaning back in a stiff wooden hall chair, luxu-riated in the innocent gratification with as entire a relish as the most pampered fine lady could have found when lolling on the silken cushions of her boudoir sofa. 'It must be pleasant too,' thought May, 'to live always in such a place; it must certainly be much pleasanter than living in a small street like ours—though of course we try to make the best of it—yet, no garden; now flowers; no—or scarcely any —air; no—'

She was interrupted in her course of thought by voices which seemed to proceed from a door opposite, which partly opened, and then was held ajar, as if the person opening it was arrested in his progress. 'Well, what do you say?' said a gentleman's voice.

'Why, I say,' answered that of a lady, and yet it was sharp and querulous. 'I say, I hope you're not going to stay out so late, Frederick, as you did last night; it's shameful to keep the servants up so late every night, and—'

'Not every night,' answered the other voice;
'besides, I don't want them to set up; send them to bed; I'll take the key.'

'But you know, Frederick, that terrifies me out of my life. I'll sit up myself—and yet, I'm fit for nothing without my night's rest,'

said the sharp voice in a wailing key; then,
as the door was pulled open with an impatient hand, it exclaimed—'Frederick, Frederick! promise me that!'

But Frederick seemed determined to listen
no longer to shrewish remonstrance; for, bursting forth angrily, muttering, and passing straight across the hall to the street door, he went out, slamming it after him with a violence that made all the flower-pots dance on the green stands, as if they rejoiced and jumped for joy at his departure.

The lady, who had approached the parlor door in her eagerness to detain her husband, now perceiving May, beckoned her to come into the room.

'So, you've brought the work home at last, child,' said she, with snappish emphasis; 'I thought you promised to let me have it home yesterday evening. You said Tuesday, didn't you?'

'Tuesday or Wednesday, ma'am,' answered
May; 'I said I would try and let you have it on Tuesday, but I feared it would be Wednesday.'

'Try and let me have it; try!' echoed the lady, with cross trial voice, and ill temper dragging every line of her face into a sour expression that had the sole merit of being in strict keeping with her voice; 'try! I wonder what that means, girl?'

'That I could try and get it finished for you, ma'am,' said May simply.

'Don't be pert, my girl,' said the peevish lady, ready to fire up at the least supposition of an insult; but glancing at the steady countenance of May, and seeing nothing in its extreme ex-posure which could warrant the idea of intended impertinence, she paid her the stipulated sum for the linen, and rung the bell to have the sempstress dismissed.

'Such an unhappy temper would make life miserable in even a prettier place than this,' thought May, as she followed the servant through the bright and scented hall she had so lately admired. 'It seems almost a relief to get away from it,' continued she to herself, as she stepped across the threshold, and took her way to the other house at which she had to call.

It was a small cottage, prettily situated in the midst of a large garden, and here, on a sloping lawn, sat the master and mistress of the house, surrounded by their children; some gamboling and frolicking about, tumbling each other over and over on the grass; some, more soberly seated near their mother's feet, making nosegays of buttercups and daisies; while one little blue-eyed girl was climbing on her father's knee, and coaxingly begging him to tell her a story.

As May approached the merry group at a sign from the lady, who took the bundle of work, and began to examine it, the little ones all crowded round to have a peep at the contents, she thought she had never seen so perfect a picture of happiness as this family presented. The lady having approved of the manner in which the needlework was done, paid May the money, and then asking her to sit down on one of the garden seats, to rest her self after her walk, she cut a slice from a home made cake that was on the table in an arbor near, and told one of the children to offer it to May.

'Do take it—you can't think how nice it is,'
said the fine little fellow, holding the plate towards her; 'there are plums in it, and orange and lemon peel!'

May kissed the fresh rosy cheeks, as she took the cake, and thanked him, while she thought, 'surely, if there is perfect happiness on earth, it must be here, with such kind, good hearts!'

But when May had eaten her cake, and was preparing to make her farewell thanks and courtesy, a nursery maid came running from the house, saying to her mistress—'Oh! pray come in ma'am, pray come directly to poor baby. He's much worse, I'm sure he's much worse, than you fancied when you left him;
and I can't help thinking it's the whooping cough he's got, instead of a slight cold, as we have thought.'

The mother anxiously hurried away, the father took his little girl up in his arms and followed her, the children dispersed, and amid the general confusion, May took her leave, and went out of the garden gate with a heart full of sympathy for the distress of the amiable family.

On one side of the lane in which the cottage stood, there grew a hawthorn hedge, and May lingered for a moment to gather a branch of the scented May blossoms to take home to her mother, then, quickening her step, she walked on fast, and with fluttering breath and beating heart, she thought over the agitating questions of life, its struggles, its endurance, its hopes,
its mingled suffering and happiness. 'As well might I uselessly stop to regret leaving this beautiful light,' said May, as she turned for an instant towards the western horizon, which glowed with a last flood of pale glory over the green masses of the Kensington-garden trees,
'as well might I shrink from turning to enter the dark city,' said she, proceeding again on her way home, 'as I find from entering life with hope and a stout heart, because some drawbacks exist in my lot, as well as in that of all other beings, more or less, it seems. If I can but earn enough to support my dear mother, and cheerfully help her to see things in as happy a light as possible, who knows but we may be able to strew our way with spots as bright as those glorious stars yonder.' She raised her young hopeful face to the blue eastern heavens, now deepening with the shades of evening, and just beginning to disclose a twinkling star or two; and as May gazed on their benign radiance, and inhaled the pure scent of the hawthorn buds on the bough still in her hand, she felt strengthened and elevated by the gentle presence of Nature.

'My dear May,' said her mother, as they sat enjoying their feast of rice and milk, after May had told her all she had heard and seen during her absence at Bayswater, 'it is too true. In the most enviable lot in life there is always something to destroy its perfection, and make us feel that our own is not so very hard in proportion as we had perhaps imagined it.
Courage and constancy will do much towards making even a sempstress's life a contented one.'

'And cheerfulness and hope, dear mother, do not forget cheerfulness and hope!' May had placed the branch of hawthorn in a glass of fair water on the supper table; she drew it towards her as she spoke, and hanging fondly over its delicious cluster, she repeated—'cheerfulness and hope! These two make us look at life as at this hawthorn bough; it has its thorns, sharp and deep wounding, but it has its glossy green leaves, and its bright pure blossoms of lustrous white, yielding their delicious perfume; and more, mother, those two bid us remember that the thorns, piercing though they be, are yet far, far outnumbered by the leaves and blossoms.'

THE WIDOW'S DAUGHTER.

One, two, three, rings on your finger—four,
five—yes, as true as we live, there are five gold rings on your fingers—and Monday tomorrow regular washing day. We'll be bound to say, you have not been to the wash tub with your mother to-day. A poor girl as you are, whose mother can hardly earn enough to make both ends meet, and with gold! Shame on you! What could you do, if she should be taken away? You are not fit for a wife, and as for being a lady, it is out of the question.
You have not beauty to recommend you to some wealthy, top, nor industry, to secure an honest mechanic. What in the world are you prudent of? Why do you dress so extravagantly?
Every body knows your mother is not able to support you in this way, and your neighbors will talk so long as you behave so like a fool.

Our advice is, take every ring from your fingers, and commence your education in the trade of house-wifery. Learn to sew, to knit, to bake, to wash, to cook. You have nothing to expect from rich relations, and the only chance before you is, that you may become the wife of some honest mechanic. This chance will slip if you are not careful, and you may be thrown for support on the town.

Believe it or not, many a foolish and haughty girl like yourself, has come to such an end or a worse one. If our advice is worth any thing, take heed to it, and the next time we call upon you, we shall find you more happy in spirits—cheerful and contented.

SMALL BEGINNINGS. The possibility of a great change being introduced by a very trifling and slight beginning may be illustrated by the tale which Lockman tells of a vizier, who, having offended his master, was condemned to perpetual captivity in a lofty tower. At night his wife came to weep before his window.
'Cease your grief,' said he, 'go home for the present, and return hither when you have procured a live black beetle, together with a little ghee, or buffalo's butter, three clews, one of the finest silk another of whip cord, finally a stout coil of rope. When she again came to the foot of the tower, provided according to her husband's commands, he directed her to touch the head of the insect with a little ghee, to tie one end of the silk thread around him, and to place the reptile on the wall of the tower. Seduced by the smell of butter, which he conceived to be in store somewhere above him, the beetle continued to ascend till he reached the top, and thus put the vizier in possession of the silk thread, by which he drew up the pack-thread, and by means of the cord a stout rope, capable of sustaining his own weight, and so
at last escaped from the place of duress.

THE BOAST OF ANCESTRY. A gentleman of England, recently attempted to trace the descendant of the heirs of that proud Earl, Richard of Warwick, Neville, the 'King-maker,' who throned and dethroned the families of York and Lancaster, so well described in Bulwer's
'Last of the Barons.' He found the only descendant to be a journeyman boot-crimper, in one of the interior towns of England!

As the Earl had been attainted, of course,
both title and property had no succession.
What a lesson this reads of the boast of ancestry! The descendants of the Roman Cæsars are Italian barbers, and organ-grinders; the offspring of the Christian Emperors at Constantinople are fishermen; and some of the descendants of King David are, likely, selling second-hand clothes! The actual heirs of many extinct English peerages are now in the United States, (could their descent be legally traced,) glad to work for a dollar a day! What nonsense, then is the 'boast of ancestry!'

WOMEN AND MANNERS. Women, in general, will sooner pardon a want of sense in those who address them, than a want of manners.

HUMBLED. What an immensity of flummery and humbug, and hypocrisy, this world abounds in. Humbug is the only thing immortal and indestructible. It is just as smooth, and gammonish, and brazen, and snakish, and specious to-day, as it was eighteen hundred years ago, when Satan most disinterestedly offered kingdoms and principalities and all that, when the villain hadn't a rod of ground in the world, nor a shilling to bless himself with, any more than the thousands of monstrously honest gentlemen who rush into bankruptcy—nor half as much, unless they are basely slandered and libelled. There are your political, your clerical, your philanthropic, and your literary humbuggers—your moral pocket handkerchief worthies, and your solemn, or slipshod book making asses—ah, how we should like to make the fur fly if we had the independence to do it!
But we haven't. We are tied hand and foot by public opinion, that loves humbug better than mother's milk, blots and grows fat upon it.
Nobody dares to think for himself an individual thought—they are afraid to. And woe to him if he does; he is in great peril—
and if poor, alas for him, he is a starved man.

GOOD AND TRUE. A man, says Dr. Franklin, as often gets two dollars for the one he spends in informing his mind, as he does for a dollar he lays out in any other way. A man eats up a pound of sugar, and it is gone, and the pleasure he has enjoyed has ended; but the information he gets from a newspaper is treasured up in the mind to be enjoyed anew, and to be used whenever occasion or inclination call for it. A newspaper is not the wisdom of one man, or of two men; it is the wisdom of the age, and of past ages too. A family without a newspaper is always half an age behind the times in general information;
besides they can never think much nor find much to talk about. And then there are the little ones growing up in ignorance without any taste for reading. Besides all these evils, there's the wife, who, when the work is done,
has to sit down with her hands in her lap,
and nothing to amuse her, or divert her mind
from the toils and cares of the domestic circle.
Who, then, would be without a newspaper?
[Do you take the Patriot.]

ERROR DIFFERS FROM IGNORANCE. It is almost as difficult to make a man unlearn his errors as his knowledge. Mal-information is more hopeless than non-information; for error is more busy than ignorance. Ignorance is a blank sheet on which we may write; but error is a scribbled one on which we must first erase. Ignorance is contented to stand still with her back to the truth; but error is more presumptuous, and proceeds in the same direction. Ignorance has no light, but error follows a false one. The consequence is, that error, when she retraces her footsteps, has farther to go before she arrives at the truth than ignorance.

A QUICK MODE OF COOKING TOMATOES. Boil
the tomatoes a quarter of an hour, with milk sufficient to cover them; add, while boiling,
a little butter made of water and wheat flour,
and season the dish according to your taste.
The advantage of this mode over those usually practised are, that the tomatoes are rich, though less acid, and are much sooner cooked.

THE RICH MONARCH. Louis Philippe, the 'target king' of the French, is reported to be worth one hundred and fifty million dollars.
Sir Robert Peel is said to possess an estate valued at ninety million dollars, and the valuation of John Jacob Astor's possessions—who is probably the richest commoner in the world
—to be thirty million dollars.

Now! standing all their wealth, there is not a young man in the country, of sound sense, that would change places with either of them. The French monarch has lived three-quarters of a century, but old as he is, he dares not take the air in his own capital, without calling up fifty thousand soldiers to guard the streets through which he may ride. The labor which he performs would render any man a slave, although the labor he has performed, and the keen foresight he has exercised, would give any man wealth and distinction.

Astor is now in second childhood. In the house he is played with like a child, and amused with children's toys, and painted dolls.
With his money, had he the mind, he could have made himself one of the greatest benefactors of his race, but he never acted on the generous policy, and now his mind is gone, and it is too late to retrieve the past.

Sir Robert Peel is the son of a cotton-spinner, and is one of the strongest mental giants in the world. The load of care that he bears about would crush an army of common men.
He is but sixty years of age, and is likely to do England much good service yet, although his life cannot be half so happy as that of thousands of men in our state.

COMFORT FOR HONELY WOMEN. Beauty, says Lord Coleridge, is a dangerous property, tending to corrupt the mind of a wife, though it soon loses its influence over the husband.
A figure agreeable and engaging, which inspires affection without the ebriety of love, is a much safer choice. The graces lose not their influence like beauty. At the end of thirty years, a woman, who makes an agreeable companion, charms her husband more than at first.
The companion of love to fire holds good in one respect, that the fiercer it burns the sooner it is extinguished.

SATURDAY, AUG. 21, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

FROM EUROPE. The royal mail steamer Cambria, arrived at Boston on the 18th inst., bringing fifteen days later intelligence from Europe. Parliament was prorogued by the Queen on the 23d ult., and the writs for the new parliament were issued on the same day.

The prospects of an abundant harvest still continued good, and in consequence, the price of grain had further declined. American flour had fallen six shillings per barrel.

The cotton market has been steady, and the state of trade in manufacturing districts satisfactory.

O'Connell's remains had been conveyed to Dublin, and the funeral was to take place on the 5th.

The affairs of Portugal are tranquil—but in Switzerland, the contest for religious and political domination, which has raged so long, seems ready to burst in hostility. The women in some of the Cantons have armed themselves, and formed a military body upwards of six thousand in number.

The preliminary arrangements for the marriage of the Duke of Wellington with Miss Burdett Coutts are nearly completed.

The Cambria brought out about three hundred thousand dollars in specie.

FROM MEXICO. There has been arrival at New Orleans from Vera Cruz. Despatches from Gen. Scott had been received there. Gen. Wool had had orders to move towards Encarnacion on the 20th, and it was expected Gen. Taylor would advance on San Luis. His camp was in a state of active preparation.

Gen. Scott was at Puebla at the last account, and would certainly advance on the city of Mexico the first week in August. It is probable that the hardest fight yet will be at the city, as the Mexicans are prepared and have twenty five thousand men.

Later dates from Santa Fe and the Plains have been received at St. Louis. Lieut. Brown and several men had been murdered. Maj. Edmondson had pursued a party of Mexicans, killing six and taking fifty prisoners. Col. Price had ordered all detachments to concentrate in Santa Fe. Eight of Col. Eaton's party had been killed by the Camanches.

ALMANAC FOR 1848. We have received a copy of "the Democrat's Almanac and Political Register for 1848," containing a list of the chief executive and judicial officers, United States Senators and Members of Congress, Governors of the States and Territories; and the time of holding Elections, and the place and time of meeting of the State Legislatures, together with the votes polled in the several States in 1844, '45, '46 and '47, with a variety of useful political information. It is issued from the office of the New York Evening Post, and its prospectus sets forth that it "contains more matter, and is sold at a cheaper rate, than any other political Almanac, be it whig or democrat."

THE MILITIA. The Governor, with the advice of the Council, has appointed the following gentlemen as Commissioners to report to the next Legislature a system for the organization and discipline of the Militia of the Commonwealth:

Hon. Levi Lincoln, of Worcester;
Hon. Henry C. Oliver, of Salem;
Lester Filley, Esq., of Otis;
Elihu F. Hathaway, Esq., of Freetown;
Gen. James Dana, of Charlestown.

A NOVEL IDEA. A proposition has been started in Philadelphia to have a large iron tube, three feet in diameter, to extend from Port Carbon to Philadelphia, a distance of ninety miles, to convey coal from the mines. The expense is estimated at about fourteen million dollars. It is said there is sufficient descent to make it practicable.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS. Mr. L. D. Hervey of North Bridgewater, had his arm fractured last Saturday morning, on the Old Colony Road at South Boston, by a stake of a freight car, which struck his arm as he was leaning out of the window.

An engine and three passenger cars were thrown off the track of the Old Colony Railroad at South Boston, on Thursday afternoon of last week. No damage was done.

FLOUR. The news by the Cambria has had the effect to reduce the price of flour a little. It will undoubtedly decline still further, as the new crop will soon come in and the harvest is every where abundant. Purchasers should not heed the stories of speculators, for flour must come down in price.

PROSPERITY OF THE CATHOLICS. The Catholic Almanac for 1847, says that the number of priests in the United States is eight hundred and thirty four, being an accession of ninety eight in one year; and also that there are eight hundred and twelve churches, seventy of which were erected during the past year. In addition to this number there are five hundred and seventy seven stations visited by clergymen, but as yet without any commodious place of worship.

SEAMEN'S CAUSE. The "Seamen's Friend Society" of Cohasset, will hold a Fair at the Academy Hall, in that town, on Thursday next, August 20th, for the benefit of the Seamen's cause. All interested in the welfare of the sailor should make efforts to aid so worthy an object.

CLAM CHOWDER. The proprietor of the "Palo Alto" Restaurant serves up Clam Chowder at his establishment every Wednesday and Saturday evenings. Lovers of the "preparation" will govern themselves accordingly.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT. Last Monday afternoon, a party composed of twelve young men from West Randolph left the shore at Squantum, in this town, in a skiff for the purpose of boarding a pleasure boat anchored in the stream, intending to have a sail in her; but as there was a heavy swell running the skiff capsized, and before succor reached, three of the party, viz. Asa F. Thayer, Simeon and Lewis Smith (brothers) were drowned. The accident was witnessed on the beach by several persons, the distance being only a few rods. Every effort was made to save them. They were young men, and two of them had been married short of two years.

FROST. Apprehensions have been expressed that the recent abundant rains would be followed by an early frost. This idea is a mere speculation of some otherwise sensible.

SMUGGLING. A large number of pipes and half pipes of foreign liquors, bearing the New York and Norfolk custom house brands, were detected recently on board one of the New York packets at Charleston. The business had been carried on for a long time.

BARK PRESCOTT. We see by the papers that the arrival of this new Bark, Capt. George Spear, is reported at Baltimore, for which place she sailed about three weeks since. Of course, the rumors in circulation in regard to her are without foundation.

EARTHQUAKE. A shock of an earthquake was experienced, on the 8th inst., in several portions of the State. It was felt distinctly in Boston and New Bedford, and at Nantucket the shock was quite severe. It was also felt in this town very perceptibly.

DETERMINED TO DIE. In Nashua, (N. H.) a man lately run a darning needle into his side and cut his throat, with the determination to destroy himself. A physician extracted the needle and dressed his wounds, but his recovery is doubtful. The unfortunate man has been a Millerite.

ONIONS. When onions are wanted for early marketing, the seed should be sown in September. With proper preparation of the soil, and sowing the seed by the fifteenth or twentieth of this month, the plants will usually have time to attain the height of four or five inches before the ground closes, and be ready for an early and vigorous start in the spring. In many parts of Massachusetts, and particularly in the vicinity of Boston, where there is always a ready market for early garden vegetables, the practice of autumnal sowing extensively prevails. We have seen large beds of this esculent, and sometimes whole fields, sown in this way, and have cultivated them successfully in the same manner ourselves, says a cotemporary.

"HARDY JOHN TYLER." A good story is told of Mr. Tyler, the point of which is, that some of his neighbors in Virginia undertook to "head" the ex-President by solemnly electing him to the rather ungracious office of road overseer; but that the ex-President turned the tables on them by going into the business of the road making with such a will—levying contributions of workmen from the fields and plantations of the unlucky neighbors aforesaid—that before many days were gone they were fain to wait upon him in all humility, and beg him to resign his office, or the crops on their farms would be found wanting when the harvest time came round. He turned a deaf ear to their entreaty, and kept on until he had made one of the best roads in the whole country.

AN OFFER. THE CHINESE on board the Junk, at New York, are great admirers of American ladies. One poor fellow got desperately in love with a young lady, and having nothing else at hand to give her as a memento, he presented one of their small brass coins, ten of which pass for a cent. But he would take nothing in return. He would accept the young lady, herself, and take her with him, but as he had eleven wives already, living at Canton, his proposal was respectfully declined.

CONGREGATIONALISM. The Minutes of the General Association of Massachusetts for 1847, give the following totals: Churches 437, pastors 355 stated supplies 43, vacant churches 50, ministers without charge 84, church members 62,186, admissions by profession 761, deaths 872, excommunications 167.

BREAD IN A BARREL OF FLOUR. "One hundred and ninety-six pounds of flour, eleven gallons or ninety pounds of water, two gallons or sixteen pints of yeast, and three pounds of salt, make three hundred and five pounds of dough, which evaporates in kneading, baking, &c., about forty pounds, leaving about two hundred and sixty-five pounds net of bread.

LOWELL. There are thirteen manufacturing corporations in the city of Lowell, embracing a capital stock of $11,490,000, and numbering forty-five mills. The mills employ 7915 females, and 3340 male operatives. There are other unincorporated manufacturing establishments in the city, employing 1000.

GOLD MINING. A handsome business is doing in the Vancluse mine, Orange county, Virginia, the most extensive gold mine now in operation in the United States, the capital of which is to be raised $500,000, divided into 10,000 shares of $50 each. Large subscriptions have been made in Washington, and among them extensive ones for English houses.

ARREST AND RECOVERY. Three persons have been committed to jail to await trial for being concerned in the robbery of Elsha Packard's store in this town, a few weeks since. They doubtless belong to a gang of thieves who have several rendezvous in the vicinity of Boston. Mr. Packard has thus far found nearly two hundred and fifty dollars worth.

LAWS AND RESOLVES. A pamphlet containing the General Laws and Resolves passed by the last Legislature of this Commonwealth, has been issued agreeably to a resolve authorizing the same. Copies can be obtained by calling at the Town Clerk's office, where they have been left for gratuitous distribution.

The Legislature of Louisiana have declared it optional with the jury to have persons who are convicted of murder, either capitally punished in the old way, or imprisoned for life.

A steamer called the United States is now building in New York, that is to be three thousand and eighty one tons burthen; that is eighty one tons larger than the seventy four gun ship Pennsylvania. She is to run between New Orleans and Havre in France.

The large chair, or pew, heretofore occupied by Daniel O'Connell, at the right of the altar in the chapel he attended, is now covered with black cloth, the door fastened, and no one is ever to enter it again.

An Indian in New York recently ran five miles in twenty eight minutes and thirty one seconds.

A druggist and his apprentice in New York city have been indicted for manslaughter on account of the death of a young lady having been occasioned by taking laudanum, which the latter gave her instead of tincture of rhubarb.

George Rapp, the founder of Economy, (Pa.) and the greatest communist of the age, is dead, aged ninety two years. He was a native of Germany, and emigrated to this country half a century ago with a band of followers, with his own peculiar religious, political and social views.

The Merchants' Exchange Hotel, in Boston, lately kept by F. Gori, having undergone extensive improvements, has been re-opened under the direction of Mr. Henry Dooley, for several years connected with that establishment.

The "Flag of Our Union," published by Gleason, contains a prize tale entitled "The Volunteer, or the Maid of Monterey—a Tale of the Mexican War"—by Ned Buntline; with a variety of spicy reading.

The Ram's Horn, a weekly paper published in New York city, is forbidden to circulate in Maryland, and one of its subscribers in that State has been held to bail as a criminal for receiving it through the Post Office. In that State it is classed among incendiary publications having a tendency to excite insurrection among the slaves.

Fourteen clergymen in New Bedford have petitioned the Common Council of that driving city to refuse licenses to theatrical exhibitions.

Rumor announces that a new daily paper is to be started in Boston for the purpose of advocating the claims of Maj. Gen. Taylor to the Presidency.

Since the commencement of the present year, eighty one persons have been committed to the State Prison at Charlestown, (Mass.)

One of the Salem papers reports, that several fishing vessels which lately arrived in that city brought unusually good fishes. They report fish more plenty than they have ever before known, and so anxious to be caught that many have been taken without bait.

Hon. Robert J. Walker, Secretary of the Treasury, has been on a visit to Boston, and visited the public works in the harbor. He was entertained on board the cutter Hamilton, by the gallant Capt. Sturgis, in fine style.

A fair friend has sent us the Cold Water Fountain, a well conducted temperance journal, printed at Gardiner, (Me.) It has been enlarged and otherwise improved.

The City Guards, who were disappointed in their late visit to this town by the inclemency of the weather, will parade on the 31st inst., under command of Col. Newell A. Thompson, and will visit this place, accompanied by Flagg's Brass Band, and dine at the Hancock House.

On the Reading (Penn.) Railroad there are in constant use seventy five locomotives and four thousand five hundred coal cars, besides passenger cars.

Elihu Burritt, the learned blacksmith, declines running for the Vice Presidency on the abolition ticket.

It is reported, says the Plymouth Rock, that Artemus Litchfield of Scituate, was drowned in Marshfield on Sunday last. It is supposed that he fell into the water in a fit, while watering a horse.

The death of Peter G. Stuyvesant, Esq., with the exception of John Jacob Astor the wealthiest citizen of New York, is mentioned in the papers of that city. He was a descendant of the renowned Dutch Governor of the same name.

Hon. H. L. Ellsworth of Indiana, formerly Commissioner at the Patent Office, has one thousand acres planted with corn, from which he expects to get fifty five bushels to the acre.

It was stated at a recent Missionary meeting in Boston, that the wars on the coast of Africa, which supply the slave trade, are kept up by New England rum shipped from the port of Boston.

In London and Paris the fashionable ladies have returned to the old style of full sleeves.

Neal & Pray is a business firm in Portland, (Me.) It is superfluous to add that they belong to orthodox churches.

The Rothchilds pay taxes on one hundred and seventy five millions of dollars.

Rev. Orange Scott, an eminent clergyman of the Methodist persuasion, died recently at Newark, (N. J.) of consumption.

Stray Dog.

FOLLOWED the subscriber, a large Newfoundland Dog, of light brown color, had on his neck a collar upon which the name of Axel Washburn is engraved. The owner can recover said Dog on paying charges by applying to

JOSEPH T. FRENCH.

Quincy, Aug. 21.

HOW TO TELL A YANKEE. You may always know a Yankee by his blocking up a door if he can possibly get near enough to one to do it. It makes no matter what door it is, or how many people want to pass in or out; there he'll stand and talk, and most like, halloo to some one across the street to come over. If two of 'em get together in a door, they'll contrive to stand skew fashioned, with their elbows sticking out like a "shiver-de-freeze," so that one can't get through 'em without starting off his buttons, or losing his coat tail. I have seen 'em do it a thousand times, at court doors, church doors, theatre doors, and all other doors, and jail doors besides. If I should ever be cast away at sea, and afterwards drift upon an unknown coast, with a house or two in sight, I should be able to tell in an instant whether I was in New England or not, from the mere fact that the men did or did not block up the doors.

"WRETCHED WORLD." Thousands of individuals, surrounded by all the comforts of life, are continually elevating their eyebrows, and drawing down the corners of their mouths till they resemble horse shoes, while they cry in sorrowful tones—"Miserable world!—Miserable world, this!" What makes it a "miserable world?" Your own conduct. The world is a very respectable world—filled with manifold blessings, containing vast quantities of beauty, animate and inanimate, and replete with lots of fun, if you only know where to find it. The world is only "miserable" to those who choose to consider it so. There is more truth than poetry in the saying—"a light heart and a thin pair of breeches"; men have been heard to sing on their way to the state prison, and a lady seen to weep whose coffers were overflowing with cash, and who hadn't a real trouble in reach of her. The world is "miserable," if you like or not.

A DISINFECTING AGENT. The active principle of common tar is a liquid called kresote, well known to chemists, and which is possessed of a highly disinfecting and anti-purescent nature. It is this liquid that confers upon tar its peculiar smell. The anti-purescent power of this substance is such, says a chemical writer, "that a joint of meat, soaked in water containing a little of it, might be exposed to the summer's sun for many days together, without any taint." It will thus be seen upon what principle it is a remedy for the disease in the hoofs of cattle, it is disinfecting, and prevents putrescence; and we would suggest tar water, or kresote, as a remedy for grease, mange, glanders, etc, were it only to prevent infection.

WITCHERY OF THE VOICE. There is no index of character so sure as the voice. There are tones, brilliant and gushing, which impart a quick and pathetic sensibility; there are others that, deep and yet calm, seem the just interpreters of a serene and exalted intellect. But the rarest and most precious of all voices is that which combines passion and repose; and those rich and restrained tones exercise, perhaps, on the human frame, a stronger spell than even the fascination of the eye, or that bewitching influence of the hand, which is the privilege of the higher races of Asia.

HUMILITY. If thou art a vessel of gold, and thy brother but of wood, be not high minded; it is God that maketh us to differ; and the more bounty God shows, the more humility he requires. Those mines that are richest are deepest; those stars that are highest seem smallest; the godliest buildings have lowest foundations; the more God honoreth men, the more they should humble themselves; the more fruit, the lower the branch on which it grows; pride is ever the companion of emptiness. Oh, how full was the apostle, yet how low was his language of himself,—least of all saints, last of apostles, chief of sinners, no sufficiency to think, no abilities to do; all that he is, he is by divine grace.

GETTING A HUSBAND. A lady was told the other day, by a travelling gentleman, that in a certain country every lady who had a small mouth was provided with a husband by the government.

"It is pothuble," said the lady, making her mouth as small as she could.

The gentleman added, "If a lady had a large mouth, she was provided with two husbands."

"My gracious," exclaimed the lady, at the same time throwing her mouth open to its full extent.

The gentleman became alarmed, made his escape immediately, and has not been heard of since.

BATHING. "Bathe every day!" exclaimed the widow Smashpipes, as she dropped the flation upon the horse-shoe, and looked her neighbor Snubbs right in the eye—"why, you don't tell! I never used to think of stripping my Jeemes, and giving him a right down good wash, but four times a year; once in the spring, once in the summer, once in the fall, and once in the winter. Howsonever, some children get dirty sooner than others!"

CURE FOR THE GOIT. First, pick a handkerchief from the pocket of an old maid of fifty years, who never had a wish to change her condition; 2d, wash it three times in an honest miller's pond; 3d, dry it on a person's hedge that was never killed a patient; 4th, send it to a doctor's shop that never killed a patient; 5th, mark it with a lawyer's ink who never cheated a client; 6th, apply it to the part affected.

Kindness to all, wins many a blessing; visiting the sick, and administering to their wants, knits soul to soul with gushing feelings.

POETRY.

HYMN

Sung at the Annual Convention of the Bridgewater Normal Association, Aug. 15th, 1847.

By Rev. T. P. ROPMA.

Tune—"Knox."

The fields are white, the laborers few;
To thee who seest them, we pray;
Father in heaven, our strength renew,
And in Thy dwelling place this day,
Hear us—Thou knowest every heart,
And give to each his needful part.

'Tis good to come together here,
To cheer our more fraternal lands;
To speak the words of friendly cheer,
While each true heart with love expands,
And feel we live each other greet,
That we as fellow laborers meet.

Lord, bless the work we're pledged to share!
And may the word we hear this hour
Us for the coming years prepare,
As fertile fields the vernal shower;
Then to that work we'll forth again,
And quit us in thy strength like men.

SONG.

By JOHN A. GOODWIN.

Tune—"O swiftly glides the bonny boat."
O swiftly glides the time along,
To each industrious mind,
As flows the measure of a song,
Or fleets the roving wind.
How short the space since last we met,
To keep our festival day!
It seems a few brief weeks,—but yet
A year has passed away!

O we'll not mourn "the course of time,"
Nor seek his flight to stay;
But as we hear each matin chime,
Resolve "we'll work to-day."
With cheerful face, and in the mind
A bright perennial May,
We'll sow our seed, nor look behind,
Though years must pass away!

O, as around this board we've come,
In friendship and in love,
We trust to meet in you fair home,
Whence pilgrims never move,
And though amid our toil and care,
While "mid life's scenes we stray,
The sheaves are all safely garnered there,
Of years long passed away!

THE TOOTHACHE.

I smoked twelve boxes of cigars,
'Tis nothing but the truth;
I chewed tobacco, filling a pound,
To soothe my aching tooth,
I filled it up with opium,
I ate not any food,
I swallowed quarts of opium drops,
But ache my grinder would.

At last I swore I'd have it out,
And to the dentist went,
But when I sat me in his chair,
My yow I did repeat;
And when his bloody instruments
Were ranged before my sight,
I jumped full five feet on the floor,
And yelled with all my might.

"My friend" said he "I'll draw your tooth
With less degree of pain
Than any dentist in the town,"
I sat me down again.
He took hold with his savage things,
I uttered a loud cry,
"Dear Sir" said he "I'll hurt you not!"
"Dear Sir" said I "you lie."

He gave a most infernal wrench,
I wished that I was dead,
For all the tortures in the world
Seemed centered in my head;
He pulled, he tugged—then out it came,
That horrid tooth of mine;
The monster nearly broke my jaw,
And charged me six and nine!

ANECDOTES.

An American captain and an Englishman met at dinner, recently. "You are an American, sir?" said the Englishman. "I reckon I am," returned the captain. "You have the name of being good warriors?" "Yes," said the Yankee, "we shoot to make peace with Mexico?—this does not appear much like spunk." "You are an Englishman?" interrogated the Yankee. "Yes," replied the Englishman. "Well," said the Yankee, "I don't know what our folks have offered to do with Mexico; but stranger, I'll tell you one thing—I'll be damned if I ever offered to make peace with you!" This home thrust set the table in an uproar of laughter.

"Cesar! go catch my big horse there."
"Yes, sir! What you call him, sir?"
"Olympus; don't you know what the poet says about 'high Olympus'?"
"I don't know about Hio—but he limpus nuff—dafs for sarin."

At a colored party, Sambo asked Dinah if he should help her to some of the bread. "Now, ain't you 'shamed, Sambo, to say bread afore the ladies?" I'll take piece ob turkey bosom."

"Do you love buttered toast?" asked Lord Pomfret to a lady whom he proposed addressing. "Yes, I do," was the lady's reply. "Buttered on both sides?" "Oh, dear, yes!" "Well, then we will be married!" "How very nice, yes!"

Two young princes, of Austria, had a warm debate in presence of the emperor himself. Greatly excited, said one to the other: "You are the greatest ass in Venice!" Highly offended at this quarrel in his presence, the emperor interrupted them, saying with indignation: "Come, come, young gentlemen, you forget that I am present?"

"You are writing my bill on very rough paper," said a client to his lawyer.
"Never mind," replied the lawyer, "it has to be filed before it comes to court."

A person looking at some skeletons the other day, asked a young doctor where he got them. He replied—"We raised them!"

WILLIAM E. AMBUSH,

WOULD respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentleman of Quincy, that he has constantly on hand a new and unequalled

CHAMPOOING MIXTURE,

far superior to the far famed Eagle Hair-oil, which when scientifically applied, renders the Hair soft and pliable and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutane-

ous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant to and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores

the scalp to a healthy condition which must be accomplished before the hair will make its appearance.

MISCELLANY.

KATE DARLINGTON.

Kate, my child, I want you to order your bridal dress without further delay. Sir Harry will leave for London in less than a fortnight, and he desires to take his bride with him.

I had hoped, dear father, that ere this you would have been convinced of the inexpediency of this marriage. Knowing as you do, that I can never love Sir Harry, I am surprised to find you persisting in making me his wife.

You are a foolish, undutiful girl Kate. Sir Harry is wealthy I believe, and a most capital fellow to ride after the hounds. Were I in your place, I would be proud of his notice.

But his wealth and sportsman-like abilities could never make me happy.

I see how it is Kate. Your head has been turned by that popinjay captain you met last summer at Leamington. But you need not flatter yourself that I will give you to him.

If you would allow yourself to see him, my dear father, perhaps you would think more favorably of him.

If the puppy should ever have the effrontery to show his face here, I would not hesitate to order one of my servants to kick him out of the house. The impudent jackanapes! to make love with my daughter without my permission!

Remember, father, you refused him an audience when he wanted to ask your approbation of his suit.

Well, well, you must think of him no more. My wish is to see you well provided for; and the present opportunity to give you a noble fellow for a husband must be embraced. You will, therefore, do as I directed, and prepare yourself in a becoming manner for the nuptials.

Squire Darlington was blunt in his manners; obdurate in his purposes. His friendships ardent, and his animosities almost inveterate. For some reasons, perhaps unknown even to himself, he had conceived a violent attachment for Sir Harry Wentworth, a baronet, whose years were little less than two score, and whose accomplishments did not reach beyond the sound of the hunting horn, or the reach of the wine bottle. Sir Harry was a frequent guest at the hall. He professed a strong attachment to Kate, hoping by a union with her to repair his fortune, which a long career of recklessness had shattered. The Squire was delighted with the prospect that gleamed ahead. He smiled on the suit of the baronet, and when his hand was formally refused by Kate, the Squire vowed he would bring her to her senses, and make her accept him after all. And the Squire tried to be as good as his word as he was already seen.

When it was rumored through the neighborhood, that Kate was about to be sacrificed by her relentless parent, every body was indignant; the women gave vent to expressions of pity and sympathy, and the men clenched their fists and showered fearful imprecations upon the heads of the Squire and the Baronet. The servants at the hall looked upon Sir Harry as a monster in human form, who had come to drag their young mistress into captivity which they could not contemplate without horror. Some of them thought their master must have been insane, for he could not understand why a man in his senses could give his only daughter to a person whom she detested. Master does not see Sir Harry in his true ugliness, said another. Ever since his last sickness he has been near-sighted. That's the reason he can't see like Miss Kate.

Kate Darlington never suffered herself to be made miserable by brooding over the idea of wedding Sir Harry. In obedience to her father's commands, she rode to town, and ordered her dresses; the Squire, delighted with the unlooked for docility of his daughter, recovered his habitual good humor, and congratulated himself on the promising aspect of his cherished plans.

The day appointed for the solemnization of the nuptials at length arrived. The Squire, as was his custom, rose early, and was about to take his morning ride, when he was startled with the intelligence that Kate was missing. A grand council of the household was ordered, but no one could tell what had become of the young lady.

I venture to say, observed Sir Harry, that Miss Darlington has gone to some Gretna over the border.

To Gretna! with whom? thundered the Squire.

Very probably with Captain Rodney, her favorite.

What, with that popinjay, who turned her head at Leamington? I'll disinherit her, as sure as my name is Ralph Darlington!

He has the bride now—fortune or no fortune.

Sir Harry, we will make instant pursuit. Jarvis, order four of the primest horses to be saddled, and direct two of the grooms to prepare to go with us.

It would be prudent for us to go well armed, suggested Sir Harry. I know Rodney, he is an active fellow, and brave as a lion.

Were he brave as twenty lions I will make him lick the dust and beg for mercy! Come, Sir Harry, we have no time to lose. Let us be on the wing!

In five minutes the Squire and the Baronet attended by two stout men, leaped into their saddles and hastily rode off on the great northern road. The servants who witnessed their departure, somehow forgot to wish their enterprise success.

The sun had descended low in the horizon, when a carriage with two out-riders arrived at a cottage in a highway, in the northern part of Cumberland. The wayfarers entered the house and ordered a repast, during the preparation of which they occupied a neat little drawing room, fronting upon the road. This travelling party consisted of Capt. Charles Rodney, Miss Kate Darlington, two Misses Rodney, and Captain Grant—the latter a warm friend of Rodney's. The ladies occupied the coach in travelling, and the two gentlemen accompanied it on horse back.

The Misses Rodney—two lovely sisters of the Captain—were equipped in elegant travelling dresses, of fashionable make; but Kate, as well as the two gentlemen, was in disguise.

Miss Darlington was dressed in male apparel. She wore a suit of fine black cloth, made strictly in the mode. As if aware that her tall, majestic figure was well adapted to such a costume, she ventured upon a close-fitted, or dress coat; and the neatness of its fit might have excited the envy of the beaux. Her hair was ingeniously dressed, and a glossy black beaver surmounted her head. The clerical solemnity of her dress was judiciously relieved by a waistcoat of delicate buff cassimere, made single breasted with a standing collar, and decorated with an ample row of flat, mirror-like gilt buttons. A neat diamond pin glittered among the crimped cambric on the breast, and a rich gold safety-chain hung suspended across her waistcoat. Her disguise was so complete that a stranger would not have dreamed she was a woman. Her dress in its minutest detail, was in excellent taste; though it must be confessed it would have suited a groom better than a bride.

Captain Rodney was dressed like an old man. His silvery wig denoted an age not less than sixty years; and his broad hat and snuff-colored coat of immense proportions, dimity small-clothes, and white waistcoat with tarnished buttons, seemed to belong to a generation past and gone. His friend, Captain Grant, wore a common dress.

Such was the eloping party. The disguises were assumed to facilitate their escape, and so far each had acted his part well. They had overcome, already, a distance of sixty miles, and entertained a strong hope of reaching the border in two hours' travel. They were all in high spirits, and Kate paced up and down the room, her thumbs in the armholes of her vest, with an air of stateliness that would have reflected honor upon the first Brummel in the kingdom.

Having hastily refreshed themselves, the ladies were escorted to the carriage. The innkeeper was officious in his attentions; and his blue-eyed daughters ran to the door, to take a last look at the "bonnie young man," and to feast their eyes once more upon the charming gilt buttons of Miss Darlington's waistcoat. Kate, beak-like, kissed her hand to the blushing damsels as the carriage rattled from the door. Capt. Rodney and his friend remained behind a few moments to adjust some defect in a saddle girth, and before they were ready to mount, a horseman rode up at a terrible speed. Rodney recognized the face of Squire Darlington.

My good friends, said the Squire, I am in pursuit of my daughter, who has run away with Capt. Somebody, of the army. They cannot be far ahead.

Have they passed by this road? inquired the Captain.

Likely enough; this is the straight road to the Border. I have ridden like John Gilpin since six o'clock this morning—ran away from three good-for-nothing fellows who set out with me—and I am resolved to keep on until I find the runaways.

Possibly, my dear sir, we may be able to render you some assistance, observed the Captain, as he and his friend vaulted into their saddles.

Here is my hand, sir, said the Squire; I have not the pleasure of knowing your name, but I dare be sworn you are a gentleman.

It happens quite singularly, rejoined the Captain, that I myself am bound to Scotland on a matrimonial adventure.

Indeed!

And as our road is the same as yours, we may as well travel in company.

The three equestrians now gave the spur to their horses, and dashed up the road. Rodney was not quite prepared for the sudden visitation of Squire Darlington; but he was glad to hear that the rest of the pursuing party had been left behind. What turn the adventure would now take, he was unable to conjecture; but he depended upon his military genius to conduct it to a happy issue.

My good friend, said the Squire, suddenly, what is that on the hill ahead of us? It looks like a carriage; but my eyesight is so short that I cannot make it out.

You are right, sir, replied Rodney, it is a carriage.

Then let us push along with might and main for on my soul, I believe it contains the runaways!

The carriage I think is mine, sir; but to ease your mind, we will ride up and see what it contains.

Spur up then, all of us! Let us see whose ang has the lightest heels.

The chase lasted nearly an hour. When the horsemen came up with the vehicle, Rodney made a significant motion to the ladies, which they instantly comprehended, and were relieved from alarm.

The Squire looked into the carriage, glanced at each of its inmates in turn, but did not for a moment suspect that the fiftieth flashing of a row of gilt vest buttons, which at once caught his eye, was caused by the palpitating bosom of his trembling daughter.

It's a wrong scent! muttered the Squire, who was prone to quote fox-hunting phrases; so, if you please, we will gallop on in hopes of better luck.

The Captain having passed a few words with the ladies as he rode by the side of the carriage, immediately obeyed the Squire's request, leaving Captain Grant to ride along with the vehicle.

In another hour the two horsemen entered the territory of Dumfries, and soon after alighted at the inn of a small village, which was regarded only as being the site of one of the free temples of Hymen.

The fox had escaped, said the Squire, as he stode into the inn. I never had so long a chase with such an unprofitable result.

You have certainly performed a great journey, said Rodney.

The runaways, continued the Squire, are married by this time, I dare be sworn. I grant they have managed the affair cleverly. Poor Kate was always an excellent girl. She never disobeyed her father but in this instance. Her lover is a stranger to me, sir; I never saw him in my life; but I judge, from his retreat to-day, that he is not the worst man in three kingdoms. Perhaps I shall forgive Kate after all—especially since I have discovered that Sir Harry is a poor meal-mouthed son of a tinker, who knocks under after a ride of forty miles or so, over the finest road in the north country.

If your daughter unites herself to a worthy man, she ought to receive your forgiveness.

Well, well; I shall not bind myself to forgive the saucy minx; but I will think about it. You mentioned something sir, about a matrimonial adventure of your own.

As soon as the carriage comes up sir, the ceremony will take place. My bride is quite a young lady, with a disposition exceedingly eccentric; she is full of vagaries, and one of the oddest of them is, her determination to be married in male attire.

Very odd, really.

A person with grey hairs, like myself ought not perhaps to think of matrimony. The affair on hand, however, is one of family policy; and for reasons not necessary to be recounted, we are compelled to be married on the wrong side of the Border.

Well, well; I wish you joy with all my heart.

The carriage now made its appearance and the ladies were ushered into the little apartment styled "the parlor." The hymeneal priest being at his post, the ceremony suffered no delay. Rodney and Kate stood up before the bewildered functionary, who at first hesitated to consider Kate an eligible subject for a wife. Squire Darlington was called to give away the bride. The complete disguise of Kate, the shortness of the Squire's vision, and the imperfect light of the room, combined to preserve her incognito during this trying ordeal. The worthy Squire performed the important part allotted to him in an admirable manner; and it was only at the conclusion of the rites, when the functionary made formal mention of the names of Charles Rodney and Catherine Darlington, that the old gentleman comprehended the true position of affairs.

Will you forgive me my dear father? said Kate, sinking on her knees before him.

Kate, you have joined a conspiracy to make your old father look ridiculous! I have had a mind to renounce you forever; but—

Oh, say that you forgive us! persisted Kate.

Well, well; I forgive you on condition that you never run away again, and that you throw away that dandy suit by the time the honey moon expires. And you sir, Captain Charles, I forgive you on condition that I like you after seeing your disguise removed. Meanwhile we will make ourselves happy.

Next morning the whole party returned to Darlington Hall. The Squire was delighted with his son-in-law. Kate is one of the happiest wives in the world, and she carefully preserves her masculine dress as a memento of the most blissful day of her life.

THE PLEDGE.

Join us in the pledge, Colonel, surely you will not refuse me, said a beautiful bride, emerging from a bevy of bridesmaids and extending a glass of brimming champagne as she spoke.

The gentleman whom she addressed had studiously refrained, during the evening, from drinking any of the costly wine, prepared for the guests. But finding himself thus the object of general attention—for when the bride spoke every eye was upon him—he colored, stammered a few indistinct words, took the glass and, bowing gracefully, drank long life and happiness to the bride.

I told you I should succeed, said the young and happy creature, her eyes sparkling with triumph, as she retired into her circle of bridesmaids. I knew Col. Warren would not refuse me. What a pity he has got such puritanical notions in his head. He used to be the foremost with a happy allusion or eloquent sentiment when the wine circulated.

No one was there to contradict this joyous but thoughtless creature, or to tell her that Col. Warren's indulgence in wine had nearly proved his ruin. He had been absent from his native city for some years, during which period he had formed a resolution not to drink, in consequence of a conviction of his own weakness.

On his return, his old associates in vain persuaded him to alter his determination. On various festive occasions they had endeavored to induce him to join them in pledging each other, but his answer had always been the same. This was the first time, since his return, that wine had been introduced in the presence of ladies. It was resolved to try whether the influence of the sex would not break a resolution which more than one felt to be a reproach on himself. How the scheme succeeded we have seen.

No pen can adequately describe the emotions of Col. Warren during the instant he hesitated before taking the proffered glass from the bride. He was chivalrous to a fault in his demeanor to the sex, and had never been known to refuse a favor asked by a woman. The wine was the daughter of his early friend, a cherished treasure, whom he had many a time dandled on his knee, and whom he had never done anything to slight or pain. He stood, as we have seen, irresolute for a moment, hesitating between fears for the result and a dislike to disoblige his favorite on this her wedding night. But at length he had fatally yielded.

Little did the young bride think of the dreadful issue of her tempting words and smile. Little did she dream that the bantering love for wine, which had once reduced her victim to the verge of confirmed inebriety, would awake again at the taste of that glass, and rage with more violence than ever. Young, happy and thoughtless she looked only at the present triumph, without considering the result. How then was she surprised to hear, a few months after her marriage, that Col. Warren was becoming an inebriate—that he rarely retired to bed unless in a state of intoxication—and that, in consequence, his fine person was becoming disfigured and his large fortune wasting away. She shuddered, but still did not think of her own agency in the matter, and when next she met him, with the privilege of youth and beauty, ventured to plead with him on the subject.

'Madam,' said he, in reply, and the melancholy and somewhat stern tone in which he spoke never left her memory, 'it is too late!—I was once as I am now—I rallied and took a resolution never to drink again—I broke that resolution, you know how, and when, and now I am a hopeless inebriate.'

He turned and left her presence. Her eyes were opened. Oh! how bitterly did she reproach herself for having spoken those fatal words. For nights she could not sleep. She sought again and again to see her victim, but he avoided her presence. They never met again but once. Reader! would you know how?

Some years after, on a cold, bleak morning in January, a travelling sleigh, drawn by two splendid horses, was dashing along the turnpike between Norristown and Philadelphia. There had been a snow storm during the night, and the flakes lay piled against the fences and banks, where they had been driven by the icy wind which swept down from the hills beyond the Schuylkill. The sky was still overcast; the wind yet raged violently and it was intensely cold. Few scenes could be more desolate. Houses, barns, trees and hayricks were covered with snow, and the cattle, cowering in the sheds, seemed every where to beseech the sky in vain. As the sleigh with its merry bells whirled down the long hill that leads to the Manyunk turnpike, the horses suddenly shied, nearly precipitating the vehicle into an opposite snow bank. A lady slightly screamed and looked out in alarm from the furs which enveloped her; but seeing no cause for danger, she was about to order the driver to proceed, when her little boy, pointing to the object which had startled the horses, said—

'Mother, what can that be in the road? Surely it is a man's hat!'

The lady turned. In the centre of the highway was a pile of drifted snow a little longer than a human body. One end of the pile had been blown away, disclosing, as the boy said, a man's hat.

'Gracious heaven!' she exclaimed, 'can it be that some poor wretch has frozen to death here. James,' and she turned to a footman, 'go and see.'

With intense interest the lady watched while the servant brushed away the snow. In a few seconds it was apparent that a corpse was indeed there, and it was not long before the cause of the man's death was evident in an empty jug beside him. The spectators breathlessly awaited while the icy flakes were being removed from the face, for the lady was within a short distance of her home and thought that, perhaps, she might recognize the being. She stepped out of the sleigh and approached the corpse.

'Colonel Warren!' she said, becoming ghastly pale and staggering: 'Colonel Warren dying thus, a common drunkard! Oh! just heaven, this is too much.'

And thus the victim and his destroyer met for the last time. It was the once thoughtless bride who now stood above the corpse.

BE SAVING. Be saving, not stingy. There is a strong disposition to waste which should be strongly condemned. A mean, miserable wretch, we despise; but a wasting, prodigal, lazy spendthrift, we more than despise. He who will kick aside a nail because he is too indolent to pick it up, may see the day when he will be thankful for a nail's worth of bread to eat. We never saw a prudent, economical, saving man come to want; but we have known scores of individuals, born to wealth, who by not looking out for mills and dimes, have died in want and misery.—Portland Bulletin.

MATRIMONY AND MEAL. A buxom country girl in Ayrshire, (Scotland,) left her place last Whitsun term, with the merciful determination of putting a matrimonial period to the doubts and sighs of her stalwart swain; but, having the bump of caution large, she read of high markets, and sagely pondered thereon; and, ultimately, she arrived at the dwelling of a civic functionary, in whom she placed implicit reliance, and requested as a particular favor that he would give her his advice. The question she put was, whether markets were likely to rise or fall? 'for,' added she, in a whisper, 'I am not averse to going married at this time, but I cannot nark up my mind to it wif' the meal at 2s. 3d. a peck. Alack, I see, was risk it at two shillings; but faith I'll no try't aboon aughteen pence.'

PADDY AND THE FRENCHMAN. Whatever may be said about Paddy's blunders all must allow that he is witty and ever ready with his wit, which is often of the most caustic kind.

A Frenchman, who might be called a man in the extremities, found himself after a long spree, the possessor of one solitary shirt. Now be a shirt ever so white, be it cambric, Irish linen, or what not, white as snow, it will if not guarded against, become tolerably black. Poor Frenchy's shirt for want of washing became in such a plight. But he had a supply of false wristbands, with which he made a very respectable show.

Meeting Paddy one day, our Frenchman with coat buttoned up to his throat, and wristbands of snowy whiteness, accosted Patrick with,

'Foin morning, monsieur Patrick. What you tink of dese?' said he, glancing with a kindly smile at the wristbands.

'On my troth, Sur,' said Patrick, 'they're amazing white! But as my old mother, God rest her bones, used to say, never judge a bird by its tail-feathers. Now, sir, what do you think of that?' said Paddy, putting off his coat.

'Sure, sur, there's no need of buttoning one's coat up to the throat, with such a shirt as this on one's back. It's whole, and clane, thanks to Paudeen, isn't it, sir?'

The dandy hung his head, and sloped.—New York Sun.

GOOT, RICHES AND ENNUI. It is a great pity that people can't indulge in the second of these luxuries without having the other two suspended to it also. From some cause or other, the very rich and very poor are always very miserable—one is miserable for the want of employment, and the other from the want of food. Of the two, however, the rich man is the most miserable. Over eight hundred men of fashion committed suicide in Paris last year—the number of beggars who severed their jugulars during the same period, was only sixteen. The only class of people who can lay claim to any real happiness in this world, are those who occupy the middle walks of life—men who have plenty of comforts, but have to sweat like the duc to obtain them. The proportion of these to the rest of the community, is about one to three, or in other words, there is about three quarts of sighs to every gallon of fun in the world.

TO DRIVE AWAY ANTS. When they trouble your sugar box, etc., just roll up a small piece of camphor gum in paper and put inside the box, and it will soon kill or disperse all the intruders. Sage tea leaves, thrown in their way is also very troublesome to them.

RATIFICATION BY MASSACHUSETTS. The Convention for the Ratification of the Constitution of the United States by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, assembled in Boston on the 9th of January, 1788, and continued in session until the 7th of February. Its officers were as follows:—President, John Hancock; Vice President, William Cushing; Secretary, G. R. Minot. The question of ratification was taken by yeas and nays, and carried; yeas, one hundred and eighty seven; nays, one hundred and sixty eight. A majority of but nineteen in a body of three hundred and fifty five voters. The vote of the towns now included within the county of Norfolk was as follows: Yeas—William Heath, Increase Sumner, Roxbury; James Bowdoin, Jr., Ebenezer Wales, Dorchester; Rev. Nathaniel Robbins, Milton; Richard Cranch, Anthony Wibird, Braintree; Cotton Tufts, Weymouth; Joseph Jackson, Brookline; Thomas Thatcher, Fisher Ames, Dedham; William McIntosh, Needham; John Baxter, Jr., Medfield; Elijah Dunbar, Stoughton; Thomas Mann, Wrentham; George Payson, Walpole; J. Fisher, Franklin; Ebenezer Warren, Foxboro', 18. Nays—Jedediah Southworth, Stoughton; Nathan Comstock, Wrentham; Benjamin Randall, Sharon; M. Richardson, Jr., Medway; Noah Alden, Bellingham, 5.

There was a majority of thirteen in the vote of the delegates from this County, in favor of the Constitution, which is about equal to two-thirds of the majority in the whole Convention. Canton, at that time, was included in Dorchester, Randolph and Quincy in Braintree. The towns of Cohasset and Dover were either not represented, or their delegates were not present when the vote was taken.—Roxbury American.

LIFE INSURANCE. Says the Boston Daily Star, we have often remarked on the doubtful policy of paying a large sum from year to year, when in full possession of health, and with small means, for insurance against death. At least, that is our opinion—though every man must, of course, judge for himself. There is a feature in at least one of these companies, which gives entirely another face to the question; and that is the "mutual" principle. In that case, the insured becomes a holder of a stock right to a share of the profits, and in this way may make a judicious and profitable investment, besides holding security for a liberal provision for his family, in case of his decease. This feature, where the company is solid and safe, recommends any enterprise; and to such we can urge no objection. The Connecticut Company, of which Mr. Pratt is the gentlemanly and zealous agent, is formed upon this principle; and we cannot see why the terms are not such as to put a good fat man within the reach of any man's family, upon a very easy system, in case he dies.

REMOVING THE DEPOSITS. It is usual with many business men when they close their stores at eventide to take from their drawers or tills any sums of money which may remain after the day's sale is over, and deposit them in some secret place for safe keeping. Difficulties arising from this course are rarely heard of, but a singular case of loss through this common practice recently occurred in Cincinnati, which proves the most obscure place is not always safest. It happened that the clerk upon closing the store at night, found some hundred and fifty dollars in the till, and not having the key of the fire proof, deposited the funds in an empty tea-kettle. The proprietor happening to be in the store early in the morning in the absence of the clerk, sold the identical kettle in which the treasure was stowed, to a countryman, for seventy five cents; and all efforts have been ineffectual in discovering who the fortunate purchaser is.

DELICIOUS APPLE PUDDING. Very convenient, as it may be made several hours before it is baked, or when a nice addition is wanted unexpectedly. Pare and chop fine, half a dozen or more, according to their size, of the best cooking apples—grease a pudding dish, cover the bottom and sides half an inch thick with grated bread, and very small lumps of butter, then put a layer of apples with sugar and nutmeg, and repeat the layer, which must be of bread and butter—pour over the whole a teacup of cold water. Put into the oven as soon as the dinner is served, and bake it for twenty five or thirty minutes. It may be baked the day before it is wanted—when it must be heated thoroughly, turned into a shallow dish and sprinkled with powdered sugar. It requires no sauce.

ADVERTISING. As for advertising, in the abstract, any merchant who has tried it will as soon think of taking down his sign, or closing one of his windows, as stopping his advertisements. It is beyond comparison, the surest, cheapest and readiest way of introducing yourself to the public. The merchant who advertises freely, hangs his sign up in every man's parlor; his name is constantly before the community, and they unconsciously get familiar with it, and resort to him as a matter of course. On the other hand, the man who does not advertise, is out of the way; he lives on a back street with no front entrance to his store; he has a quiet life of it, but in the hurry and bustle of the world he is forgotten and neglected, and he deserves to be.

TO BOIL BACON. Soak the bacon several hours; take off the skin before you boil it, for it has been proved by experience that a pound of bacon boiled without the skin will weigh an ounce heavier than a pound boiled with the skin. Fat bacon should be put into hot water, and lean bacon into cold water.

POTATO JELLY. The readiness with which a good sized basin full of thick Jelly may be procured from a moderate sized potato, is a fact worth knowing. It does not require more than eight minutes to change a raw potato into a basin full of most excellent jelly, which has only to be seasoned with a little sugar, nutmeg, and white wine, to please the most fastidious palate. To obtain this jelly in perfection, let a potato be washed, peeled, and grated; throw the pulp thus procured into a jug of water, and stir it well. Let it stand for a few minutes, and a sufficient quantity of starch will have fallen for the purpose required. Pour off the water, and then keep stirring up the starch at the bottom of the basin while boiling water is being poured upon it, and it will soon and suddenly pass to a state of a jelly. The only nicety required is to be careful that the water is absolutely boiling, otherwise the change will not take place. Upon comparing this jelly with that from the starch called arrowroot, obtained direct from Bermuda, there is a difficulty in discriminating between them. The difference, however, becomes more sensible when both jellies are made palatable with sugar, etc., and the preference will be given to the potato, the other having rather a markish flavor, as though it had been prepared with smoky water.

"ALL BAGGAGE AT THE RISK OF THE OWNERS." This phrase is a bit of humor often enjoyed by the travelling public; in fact, it may be said to be a standing joke in all railroad cars and steamboats. The managers of these conveyances first insist upon taking your baggage out of your own care, and then gravely inform you, that notwithstanding they have forced you to leave it to their charge, it is still at your own risk. Of course every body of common sense is aware that this is all hum—like the sign "Beware of the Dog," sometimes put up on estates where the largest canine specimen is a poodle pup—a good joke put upon verdant passengers by a facetious President and Board of Directors. It is evidently considered very clever by its perpetrators, who with a view perhaps to the axiom that "All the fools are not dead yet," persist in the use of the absurdity, notwithstanding that every once in a while somebody or other recovers damages in a court of law from railroad and steamboat owners for baggage lost while in their charge.

MOURNING. My friends, I am bound to the conclusion that nothing upon God's green-cushioned foot-stool was ever intended to mourn. If the world were intended for a house of mourning every flower would be pained black—every bird would be a crow or a black-bird—every body would be a negro—the ocean would be a vast ink-pot—a black veil be drawn over the face of heaven—and an everlasting string of crape hung around the borders of creation. But I do assert, from the nether extremity of my soul, that the world was created to sing at a Millerite meeting.—Dow, Jr.

GREAT INVENTION. It is reported that a gentleman has lately invented an article he calls the Skirt Expander, for which he is about to procure a patent. The inventor says it will entirely do away with the common cotton bustle. It is said to be principally made of India rubber, air-tight, and is capable of being inflated or contracted at any time. If a lady should be walking and wish to appear larger, or smaller, the Skirt is so constructed that she may enlarge or diminish her apparent size at pleasure; and yet a person may be walking with her and not discover how, or by what means her apparent size is diminished or increased. The inventor, also, says that the appearance of a lady, with one of these Skirts, is much improved, the dress setting much better and easier; and that it will save the labor of carrying about the streets quite a small bale of cotton and from eight to twelve skirts.

STONE ROPE. A rope, nearly three miles long, now lies at Gateshead, (Eng.) which was the other day a stone in the bowels of the earth. Smelted, the stone yielded iron. The iron was converted into wire. The wire was brought to a wire-rope manufactory and there twisted into a line four thousand six hundred and sixty yards long. It is the stoutest rope of the kind ever made. It weighs twenty tons five hundred weight and will cost the purchaser $5,508. It is intended for the incline on the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway near the latter city. A rope of hemp, of equal strength would weigh thirty two and a half tons and cost fourteen hundred dollars more.

RAISED FOOT PATHS. Paths through the yard, near dwellings in the country, may be rendered much more convenient, and be much more easily kept in order, by raising an embankment from one to two feet in height. Two years ago, says a contemporary, we dug a well, and had a quantity of the broken slate arranged for this purpose. It proved to be a labor saving operation. Even when the deep snows fall, very little settles on this ridge; and it is but a small job to keep the path open, while all the rest of the year, it may be safely traversed with slippers or thin shoes without wetting the feet, as the rain soaks away from the surface almost as soon as it falls. It is never slippery like plank or boards.

A PET HEN. A gentleman in England has a hen of the golden pheasant breed, which has been brought up a pet ever since it was a chicken. It comes regularly into the house, and lays its egg on the lap of a child four years old. If the child is absent it deposits it on the chair, whereon the child is accustomed to sit. After it has laid its egg, it is indulged with a few pieces of oat cake or wheat bread.

SLAVERY PRESS IN WASHINGTON. In anticipation of the agitation of the Wilmot Proviso question, it is proposed by a number of gentlemen of South Carolina and other States to establish a press in Washington, which shall represent Southern views on the subject of slavery. The press is to be "free from party influence," and none are to be engaged in the undertaking but "men in every way independent," and "whose means and position are such as to free them from all temptations of profit and place?"

LADIES' PAGES. Ornaments by this pretty name are now in fashion in Paris, consisting of a gold thumb and finger suspended by a chain to the waist, and constructed with a spring by which they hold up a lady's dress in crossing wet sidewalks from shop to carriage.

CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA. Close all the outer doors in a four story house, open the inner doors, then take a long switch and chase a cat up and down stairs till she sweats.

GENERAL COLD WATER ARMY. The annual meeting of the Army was held last Saturday afternoon, in Lyceum Hall,—the President in the chair.

Rev. Mr. Allen opened the meeting with prayer, and a song was sung by a class of Misses under the direction of Mrs. L. A. Newcomb.

The Treasurer's report was read, from which it appears that the balance in the Treasury is about five dollars.

On motion of Mr. William Pratt, Voted to choose a committee of three to nominate a list of Officers for the Army for the ensuing year. Messrs. William Pratt, George Newcomb and Theodore Kellogg were chosen.

During the absence of the Committee, Rev. Messrs. Allen and Davis made some remarks on the Pledge, inviting all the children present who have not signed the pledge to do so this afternoon. After another song by Mrs. Newcomb's class, we were favored with addresses by Rev. Messrs. Allen and Wheeler.

The nominating Committee reported as follows: President—George Newcomb, Esq.

Vice Presidents—Abram Prescott and Charles A. Cummings.

Corresponding Secretary—William Pratt.

Recording Secretary—Samuel Baxter.

Treasurer—John S. Baxter.

Directors—Benjamin Bass, Theodore Kellogg, Thomas Brooks, Urbane Cudworth, George Baxter, Josiah Adams, Elias W. Nash, Jonathan Baxter, Reuben Ricker, George L. Miller, Joel Steele, William B. Duggan, John A. Billings, George Baxter, Jr., Charles L. Veazie, and Charles Adams.

On motion of Rev. Mr. Davis, Voted, that the report be accepted.

The President elect then took the chair, and after another song, the subject of having a Pic Nic was introduced by Mr. Pratt. In order to bring the subject before the meeting, a motion was made by Rev. Mr. Davis, seconded by Mr. Kellogg, that we have a Pic Nic. After remarks by Rev. Messrs. Davis, Wheeler and Allen, and Messrs. William Pratt, George Newcomb, and Theodore Kellogg, the motion was withdrawn.

Mr. Prescott moved that the subject be left with a committee, to consist of the Officers of the Army, who should report at the adjournment of this meeting. The motion was discussed by Messrs. Davis, George Baxter, Kellogg, Prescott and Samuel Baxter, and was lost by a large majority.

On motion of Samuel Baxter, seconded by George Baxter, Voted, that we have a Pic Nic.

On motion of George Baxter, Voted, that a committee of five be chosen to nominate a Committee of Arrangements for the Pic Nic. Messrs. George Baxter, George L. Miller, Samuel Baxter, Charles Adams and James S. Baxter, were chosen.

Voted, that the thanks of the meeting be presented to Mrs. Newcomb and her class, as also to the young ladies from the Point, who imparted a lively interest to the meeting by singing.

Voted, to adjourn to next Saturday afternoon, at five o'clock, in this place.

SAMUEL BAXTER, Sec.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, AUG. 28, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

WITHOUT AN EQUAL. Maj. Gen. Taylor, in a recent letter, says: "Near forty years of my life have been passed in the public service, in the army, most of which in the field, the camp, on our western frontier, or in the Indian country; and for nearly the two last, in Mexico or Texas, during which time I have not passed one night under the roof of a house."

No you don't! Once in several months, the publishers of some of the magazines send a number to newspapers at a distance, for which they get a good notice, and then they do not send again for several months. We have been caught in that trap, says the editor of the Lynn News, and the same game has been played upon us; we have learned a thing or two.

Boston Museum. This establishment has been opened for the season. W. H. Smith is to retain the control of the stage which he has so ably managed in past years, and the management will doubtless produce many splendid novelties in the course of the season, aided as it is by the strong corps of artists who have formerly distinguished themselves at this establishment.

DEATH OF WILLIAM FREEMAN. This wretched man, whose murder of the Van Ness family, in Cayuga county, (N. Y.), about a year ago, excited an unusual feeling of horror, recently died in the county jail. He was convicted of the murder and a new trial obtained. For some time past he had been in a state of idiocy.

SUMMER COMPLAINTS. The number of deaths in Boston during the last week from these diseases has been unusually large. No less than forty eight have died of dysentery and other bowel complaints.

FORCE IN MEXICO. The Matamoras Flag says that the following may be relied upon as nearly correct number, and disposition of the troops under our two Generals in Mexico:

Under Taylor—Buena Vista,	2,900
Monterey,	750
Cerralvo,	260
Upper Rio Grande,	3,500
Lower Rio Grande,	1,600
	9,010
Under Scott at Puebla,	8,500
With Cadwallader,	1,500
With Pillow,	2,500
With Pierce,	4,000
Total,	16,500
Grand Total,	25,510

DEATH OF AN OLD SOLDIER. In Boston, on Sunday morning, Mr. Israel Wing, in his one hundredth year. He was born on the eighth of August, 1748. At the commencement of the Revolution he entered the army, at that time stationed in Cambridge, and was on Dorchester Heights when the British evacuated Boston. He was afterwards stationed at West Point, where he served three months in Washington's Life Guard.

LAND SALE. The Solicitor of the United States Treasury has advertised all the lands at South Boston for sale, which the government received from the exploded Commonwealth Bank of Boston.

FIRE. On Monday night, at about ten o'clock, a large building at Commercial Point, Dorchester, used as a Pottery, was entirely destroyed by fire. There had been no fire in the building for a long time, and it was undoubtedly set on fire.

ENGINE EXCURSION. We learn that the Amazon Engine Company of Weymouth, contemplate making a visit to the ancient town of Plymouth on Thursday next. They will go by the Old Colony Railroad, taking their engine with them.

COMMENCEMENT. The usual Commencement exercises at Harvard University, Cambridge, were given on Wednesday last, before an immense concourse of spectators. The Governor, Lt. Governor and the Council were in attendance. The degrees of "A. M." were bestowed on sixty one young gentlemen of the graduating class.

MEXICO. We have no later intelligence from the seat of war, which would be of any interest to our readers.

YELLOW FEVER. Accounts from New Orleans represent the epidemic as on the increase. Forty were interred on the 18th inst. The pestilence equals that of 1837. Every one is leaving the city. The weather is intensely warm.

A WRECK. The schooner Two Marys from Boston for New York, was lost on Block Island in the late Northeast blow. Vessel and cargo under deck, valued at about twenty thousand dollars, a total loss. Part of deck load saved. There was an insurance of above four thousand dollars. She was owned partly in this town.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN DORCHESTER. An Episcopal Church by the name of the St. Mary's has been recently organized in Dorchester. Rev. G. W. Porter has been invited to the rectorship.

There are not more than three men in the United States acknowledged by type founders and printers to be good type cutters, and there are not ten men in the Union who even pretend to cut type. Type cutting is a very difficult art to acquire.

The Roxbury Gazette has placed the name of Thomas Corwin at its head, as whig candidate for President.

Champooing and Hair-Cutting.
WILLIAM E. AMBUSH, WOULD respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of Quincy, that he has constantly on hand a new and unequalled CHAMPOOING MIXTURE, far superior to the far famed Bogle Hyperion, which when scientifically applied, renders the Hair soft and pliable and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination. He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant to and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores the scalp to a healthy condition which its appearance is accomplished before the hair will make its appearance. It is the great desideratum of the age. Ladies wishing this application will be waited upon at their residences by W. E. Ambush, by leaving orders at his Emporium, Southern Building, Quincy. N. B. CHILDREN'S hair cut at their residences at half price. Quincy, May 15

New Spring Goods!!
JOHN DINEGAN, MERCHANT TAILOR, School Street, Quincy. WOULD respectfully intimate to the people of Quincy, and the surrounding villages, that he has just received an assortment of SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS, which he flatters himself will be found to correspond with the liberal patronage he has received, and for which he returns his sincere thanks. His present stock consists in part as follows:— GERMAN CLOTHS, of the very best make and finish; FRENCH CLOTHS, of extra and superfine jet black, blue and fancy colors; ENGLISH CLOTHS, Yorkshire and west of England manufacture, including the most approved fabrics and fashionable shades—brown, citron, golden and green olives, and AMERICAN CLOTHS, from the very best Mills. Fashionable Doe Skins, of English, German, French and American make; VESTINGS, in very desirable styles of fancy figured, plain, white and satin striped; Do. ELEGANT NEW VALENCIAS, in various qualities—light and dark. London heavy figured SILK VESTINGS and SATIN do. To the inhabitants of Quincy it is unnecessary for me to say a word of my abilities, or style of getting up a testy Garment. They have tested my work, and I have no hesitation in saying that I have the honor of working for a majority of the most fashionable and respectable inhabitants of the place. People run no risk in coming to my establishment for their Clothing, if they do not suit in every respect they need not have them. Besides, they can buy them twenty per cent. cheaper from me than in any store in Boston. All my Costs are made by the best Journeymen Tailors, I ask but one price and my terms are CASH. Quincy, March 6, 1847. 1f

Health! Health!! DR. WOOD'S SARSAPARILLA AND WILD CHERRY BITTERS. THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPARILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver—strengthens the Nerves, and at once secures to the whole system. In all cases of JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, LOSS OF APPETITE, HABITUAL COSTIVENESS, SCROFULA, HEADACHE, LANGUOR, and that DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS, which is so common a complaint in the SPRING AND SUMMER season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous of its peculiar virtues. For further particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it. CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC. Be particular and ask for Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla in Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters," pressed on the glass, and that each label on the bottle is signed by the proprietor, E. Thornton, Jr., New Bedford. Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. AGENTS. Quincy, Messrs. CLAPP & RICHARDS; Dorchester, Messrs. CLAPP & RICHARDS; Milton, M. D. Plumer; and by all respectable dealers in the United States. Also—The above are agents for Dr. Wood's Compound Balsam of Bone-set and Vegetable Family Pills. May 1. 1f

"Palo Alto" Restorator. THIS was the first of the series of glorious victories achieved by the Americans under "Rough and Ready" in the war with Mexico, so the subscriber, who has taken that long established stand in Cross Buildings, (so called) intends to be first on hand for the wants of customers and to keep a first rate Restorator. The best of OYSTERS constantly on hand, will be served to order, and sold by the pint or gallon. The usual variety of NUTS, together with CONFECTIONARY, FRUITS, etc. are also for sale. Superb Bottled CIDER, ALE, PORTER, MINERAL WATER, and that excellent drink ROOT BEER. Pickled Clams, Pigs' Feet, Lambs' Tongues, etc. Order, neatness, and a desire to meet the wants of patrons, will ever characterize the generalship of the "Palo Alto" Restorator, and the "rough" perhaps in his ways, though "ready" proprietor, hopes to obtain splendid victories by the liberal patronage of the community. Quincy, May 29. 1f

MISCELLANY.

JOHN SMITH.

Some tales are lies from end to end, And some good stories ne'er were penned.

At the age of fourteen, John Smith was a gentleman at large, and was frequently seen in Washington Street, Boston, dressed neat, but not gaudy. He ran away from Mr. Shark, and was seeking employment in the city of notions, when chancing to get into a bit of a scrape of a Sunday evening, with others, he appeared at the Police Court, merely as a witness, you know. The following talk took place between Smith and the Judge.

Mr. Smith, what is your business, sir? What do you follow for a livelihood?

Nothing particular.

You do not appear to be a man of property—how do you get your bread?

I sometimes get it of Mr. Humbert, the baker, sir, and sometimes—

Stop sir. Understand my question. How do you support yourself?

On a chair, sir, in the day time, on a bed at night.

I do not sit here to trifle. Are you a mechanic?

No sir?

What are you then?

A Universalist, sir.

If you do not answer me, I will have you taken care of.

I would thank your honor to do it; for the times are so hard that I cannot take care of myself.

You work around the wharves, I suppose?

No sir—you can't get around them without a boat, and I don't own one.

I believe you are an idle vagabond!

Your honor is very slow in belief or you would have found that out before.

What do you know of the case now before the court?

Nothing, sir.

Then why do you stand here?

Because I have no chair to sit in.

Go about your business.

And Smith went—but as he was leaving the door was heard to say, pretty well out of that scrape any how and when they summoned me as a witness again they'd better pay me before-hand or they don't get much information out of this child any way.

It seems, however, that John Smith was only out of one trouble to meet with another. He had walked but to the first turn of the street from the Police Office, when he was met by a fierce looking gentleman coming up, and who in great wrath, without even passing the time of day, ejaculated, 'You're an infernal scoundrel, sir!'

That's news to me, said Smith, quietly.

News! you scoundrel, do you call it news! Entirely so.

You needn't think to escape off so quietly; I say you're an infernal scoundrel! and I'll prove it.

I beg you will not. I shouldn't like to be proved a scoundrel now, for I have just left the Police Office, and they have the most exalted opinion of me there.

Exalted opinion! hanging between heaven and earth you mean! and wouldn't like to be proved a scoundrel! No! I don't swear you wouldn't. But answer me directly—did you or did you not say, in the presence of certain ladies of my acquaintance, that I was a mere—

Call! O no, sir; the truth is not to be spoken at all times.

The truth! Do you presume to call me a calf, sir?

O no, I call you nothing.

It is well you do; for if you had presumed to call me—

A man—I should have been grossly mistaken.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

LOVE'S VICTIM.

DEDICATED TO MISS

Oh, list to me, Lizzy,

You sweet lump of candy!

Love makes me feel dizzy,

Like sugar and brandy;

My vision is reeling—

My brains are all burning—

And the sweet cream of feeling

Is curdled in churning;

Formy heart 'neath my jacket,

Is up and down jumping,

And keeps up a racket

With its thumping and bumping;

Oh, show me one smile—'tis my last supplication!

I crave nothing further—'twill be my salvation!

Oh, Lizzy, I'm worsted—

I feel it all over;

I am done up and bursted—

A broken down lover!

The joys of my bosom

Have cut stick and vanished;

I know'd I should lose 'em

When my true love you banished;

The world has grown dreary,

In its sackcloth of sorrow;

Of life I am weary,

And I wish that to-morrow

Would dawn on my grave, in that peace giving valley,

Where I'd care not for you, nor Helen, nor Sally!

I know 'tis a sin to—

But I'm bent on the notion—

I'll throw myself into

The deep, briny Ocean,

Where mud eels and catfish

On my body shall riot,

And flounders and flatfish

Select me for diet;

There soundly I'll slumber

Beneath the rough billow,

And crabs without number

Shall crawl o'er my pillow;

But my spirit shall wander through the gay coral bowers,

And frisk with the mermaids—It shall, by the powers!

I'LL THINK OF THEE.

I've thought, and still will think of thee

Wherever I may roam;

Mid joyous scenes tho' I may be,

My own fond one—mine own.

I'll think of thee, when night's dark shade

Doth spread abroad its pall;

When, even's gentle twilight fade,

As, on the clouds they fell.

I'll think of thee, at midnight's hour,

When twinkling stars do weep;

As, round us then, the angels fair

Their watchful vigils keep.

I'll think of thee, when rosy morn

Doth gild the eastern sky;

When at th' approaching dawn

The nightly shades pass by.

I'll think of thee, when howling loud

The stormy winds arise;

And, swiftly drive the fleecy cloud,

Vain wanderer of the skies.

I'll think of thee, when all serene

Doth nature sink to rest;

And calmness with the moon's pale beam

Rests on the ocean's breast.

I'll think of thee when none can see,

And none but God is near,

As, at his throne I bend my knee

My offering, there to bear.

I'll think of thee, 'mid hope's bright scene,

In darkness' bitter hour,

When bright the sunlight rays do gleam,

When dark the tempests lower.

ANECDOTES.

A weary traveller was made very angry recently by a wag on a canal packet. He reached a station a moment after the packet started; whereupon with valise in hand, he chased the boat half a mile, the thermometer at ninety six. As he neared the boat, he was engaged of him if he wished to get a board?

"To be sure I do." "Well, then, just stop where you are and take one off the fence."

"I'll take two children, if I can have 'em cheap," said a tall Yankee, on entering an oyster cellar the other day.

"Two children?—what two children?"

"Why, I hain't got any myself, and your sign reads, 'families supplied,' don't it? I want you to supply me with two!"

A gentleman at a musical party, where the lady was very particular not to have the concord of sweet sounds interrupted, was freezing under the performance of a long concerted piece of music, and seeing that the fire was going out, asked a friend— "How shall I stir the fire without interrupting the music?"

"Between the bars," replied the friend.

"Pete Barnocks, come up and say your lesson."

"Yes, sir."

"What made Eve eat the forbidden fruit?"

"Beccuz she was telled that she didn't ought to."

"How do you know that made her eat it?"

"Beccuz when our Judy was forbid to speak to the feller, she went and sot right down in John Simpkins's lap."

"Tell your mistress that I have torn the curtain," said a gentleman to a punning domestic of his lodging house.

"Very well, sir; mistress will put it down as rent."

One of the ladies of the Humane Society writes an account for a paper, of a cab-driver, whose mode of causing his poor broken down horse to increase his speed, was by probing him on a raw spot which he had made near his tail. She heads it a touching tale.

MANHOOD.

CAUSES of its Premature Decline, with directions for its Perfect Restoration. Addressed to those suffering from the destructive effects of Excessive Indulgence, Solitary Habits, etc. by L. Deslandes, M. D. Translated from the French, with many additions; by an American Physician. Twenty-seventh edition. 352 pp. 15 mo.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

"Physicians of extensive observations, and superintendents of establishments for the moral management of Lunatics, concur in assuring us that the cancer, worm of death is gnawing at the vitals of many youths of all ages, in all countries too, as portrayed by the author. If it were once freely circulated, the tendency would be beneficial, because, like an alarm gun, it would give warning in season to avert threatened danger. It might thus drive away a fiend that would ruin soul and body at the same time and blight the dawn of life before the individual is conscious of his duty to himself, to society, or to his Maker."—Boston Medical and Surgical Journal.

"I consider Deslandes' book, as decidedly the best treatise extant in the French or English Language. The subject is extremely important, and one too much overlooked by our profession generally, and the evils of the vice, on which your publication treats are not appreciated by the community, although the cases presented in your book are frightful. Yet judging from many patients who have been under treatment they have not been overdrawn."—A. Sidney Doane, M. D. New York.

"The work of Deslandes, by pointing out the diseases resulting from excesses, the evils of which are manifest in every insane asylum, no less than in the shattered constitution of those indulging, will do much to prevent the vice, which by its prevalence among the young, has become a national plague."

"The vice is doubtless very much more common in this country than is generally supposed, or than most medical men are ready to believe; and it is a frightful source of ill health and fatal disease with the young. I have no doubt; I hope therefore it will go into extensive circulation. The views of the writer are excellent on this subject."—Dr. S. B. Woodward, Superintendent of the Insane Hospital at Worcester.

"The present work abounds in well authenticated cases going fully to substantiate the position taken by the author, and cannot be read without producing a deep conviction that something ought to be done to check this deplorable evil."—Zion's Herald.

"The volume as now published will prove eminently useful, and deserving the consideration of all to whom is committed the responsible trust of moral and physical education."—John W. Francis, M. D., New York.

"We recommend the work, entitled Manhood, etc. to the careful perusal of persons of all classes. The moral as well as the physical advantages sure to result from such perusal will be most readily recognized and felt by those who stand most in need of them."—Phœnix Journal.

"We do not think we go too far in saying that society is deeply indebted to the author for producing so useful, so much wanted, so valuable, and so truly moral a book."—Conservative Journal.

"The work entitled Manhood, is one of the few books now coming before the public on such a subject which can lay claim to the character of being strictly professional, at the same time that it is fully intelligible to all who read it. The moral and medical precepts given in it render it invaluable."—Maguet.

MISCELLANY.

JOHN SMITH.

Some tales are lies from end to end,
And some good stories never were penned.

At the age of fourteen, John Smith was a gentleman at large, and was frequently seen in Washington Street, Boston, dressed neat, but not gaudy. He ran away from Mr. Shark, and was seeking employment in the city of notions, when chancing to get into a bit of a scrape of a Sunday evening, with others, he appeared at the Police Court, merely as a witness, you know. The following talk took place between Smith and the Judge.

Mr. Smith, what is your business, sir? What do you follow for a livelihood?

Nothing particular.
You do not appear to be a man of property—how do you get your bread?

I sometimes get it of Mr. Humbert, the baker, sir, and sometimes—
Stop sir, understand my question. How do you support yourself?

On a chair, sir, in the day time, on a bed at night.

I do not sit here to trifle. Are you a mechanic?

No sir?
What are you then?
A Universalist, sir.

If you do not answer me, I will have you taken care of.

I would thank your honor to do it; for the times are so hard that I cannot take care of myself.

You work around the wharves, I suppose?
No sir—you can't get around them without a boat, and I don't own one.

I believe you an idle vagabond!
Your honor is very slow in belief or you would have found that out before.

What do you know of the case now before the court?

Nothing, sir.
Then why do you stand here?
Because I have no chair to sit in.

Go about your business.
And Smith went—but as he was leaving the door was heard to say, pretty well out of that scrape any how and when they summon me as a witness again they'd better pay me before-hand or they don't get much information out of this child any way.

It seems, however, that John Smith was only out of one trouble to meet with another. He had walked but to the first turn of the street from the Police Office, when he was met by a fierce looking gentleman coming up, and who in great wrath, without even passing the time of day, ejaculated, 'You're an infernal scoundrel, sir!'

That's news to me, said Smith, quietly.
News! you scoundrel, do you call it news! Entirely so.

You needn't think to ease off so quietly; I say you're an infernal scoundrel! and I'll prove it.

I beg you will not. I shouldn't like to be proved a scoundrel now, for I have just left the Police Office, and they have the most exalted opinion of me there.

Exalted opinion! hanging between heaven and earth you mean! and wouldn't like to be proved a scoundrel! No! I dear swear you wouldn't. But answer me directly—did you or did you not say, in the presence of certain ladies of my acquaintance, that I was a mere—

Call? O no, sir; the truth is not to be spoken at all times.

The truth! Do you presume to call me a calf, sir?

O no, I call you nothing.

It is well you do; for if you had presumed to call me—

A man—I should have been grossly mistaken.

Do you mean to say I am not a man. That depends on circumstances. What circumstances?

If I should be called as evidence, in a court of justice, I should be bound to speak the truth. And you would say I was not a man, hey?

Do you see this cowskin?

Yes, and I have seen it with surprise, ever since you came up.

With surprise! Why, did you suppose that I was a coward, that I dares not use the article, when I thought it was demanded?

Shall I tell you what I thought?

Do, if you dare.

I thought to myself, what use has a CALF with a cow-skin?

You distinctly call me a calf, then!

If you will it you may.

You hear, gentlemen, (speaking to the bystanders, and there was already quite a gathering,) you hear the insult. What shall I do with the scoundrel?

Dress him! dress him! exclaimed twenty voices with shouts and laughter.

That I'll do at once. Then turning again to Smith, he cried out fiercely—come one step this way you rascal, and I'll flog you within an inch of your life.

I've no occasion.

You're a coward!

Not on your word.

I'll prove it by flogging you out of your skin. I doubt it.

I am a liar then, am I?

Just as you please.

Do you hear that gentleman?

Ay! was the unanimous response—you can't avoid dressing him now.

O heavens grant me patience; I shall fly out of my skin.

It'll be so much the better for your pocket. Calfskins are in good demand.

I shall burst.

Not here in the street, I beg of you. It would be quite disgusting.

Gentlemen can I longer avoid flogging you? Not if you are able, was the quick reply of Smith.

At him, at him, said the crowd.

Thus provoked, thus sturred up and encouraged, the fierce gentleman went like lightning at Smith. But before he could strike a blow, he found himself disarmed of the cowskin and laying on his back under the spout of a neighboring pump, whither John Smith had carried him to cool his rage! and before he could recover from his astonishment at such unexpected handling, he was as wet as a thrice drowned rat, from the cataracts of water.

grave antagonist had liberally pumped upon him. His courage by this time, had like that of the valiant Bob Acres, "oozed out at the palms of his hands"; and he declared as he arose and went dripping away from the pump that he would never meddle with John Smith again, and that the devil might undertake to cowskin such a man for all him.

The bystanders of course raised a shout, and John Smith escaped to go about his business, lest the Police should take him for creating a row in broad day.

WOMAN.

The progress of society manifests itself more clearly in the development and beauty of the female character, than in any other way.

In a rude and uncivilized community, woman is a degraded creature; as it advances, she is the mark of its exaltation. It is not too much to say, that to the woman of America we must look for the security of our institutions, and for our future greatness as a nation. Old things are rapidly passing away; old prejudices, old superstitions, and old notions, involving the false relations of society. A new era has dawned on us, and woman is the morning star in the return of the golden rising; she is the herald of a spiritual sun, whose beams are to search the darkened depths of humanity and reveal the great problem of our nature. There is not one in a million who knows what man is, or the relation he bears in the interminable universe of being. The thoughts of the million are bowed down to earth, and are centered in themselves; they have no conception of the nature of love, and their emotions, which bear that name, give the lie to its philosophy. They do not understand—they cannot comprehend—their intelligence has not expanded to that degree of reciprocity, which drinks in the vast revelation of humanity, its end, its mighty destination, and the causes which have operated to produce its present state, and the causes which must energize for its consummation. They do not know that woman is the recipient of celestial love, and that man is dependant on her to perfect his character; that without her, philosophically and truly speaking, the brightness of his intelligence is but the coldness of a winter moon, whose beams can produce no fruit, whose light is cheerless and depressing. They do not know that woman is all affection, and they cannot appreciate the comprehensiveness of the truth.

We have no disposition to flatter the sex; we would raise them above the humiliation of flattery. Adulation is not congenial with their better nature; and it is this we are desirous of unfolding. If they can only be made to understand their real character, they will feel and acknowledge the truth of this remark, that in proportion as they admit self-satisfaction from the praises of man, they are removed from his purest admiration. In this expression, we would not be understood as being the advocates of prudery, and of that false modesty, which prides itself in the distance it holds from men. On the contrary, we would expose the narrow minded views of that class of teachers, indicated in the "Young Lady's Friend," who, by warning the sex against unthought of improprieties, save no other end, but to suggest to them a wrong. Women ought to associate freely with men, according to the unwritten rules of decorum, which are stamped on the innocent heart. The precepts of prudery are steeped in the guilt of contamination. Truth, and the loveliness and delicacy of cherished affections, beautiful dreams of the ideal woman, gentle hopes and aspirations for the pure and perfect attainment of the angelic character, are enough for her guidance, without the transferred colorings of a stained sufferer.

Woman has heretofore occupied a false position in the world—an unnatural one. She has been so long regarded as a weak creature, an inefficient actress on the great stage of life, a mere puppet to fill up the drama of existence, that she has too often come to be of the same mind herself, and forgotten her high destination, in the frivolities of an hour. We have no patience with those persons, who treat her as a mere Rosa Matilda, who can be allured by a pretty compliment, and satisfied by the gossamer of romance. Beset as she has been by the intellectual vulgar, the selfish, the designing and the false, no wonder she has sometimes folded her wings in despair, and forgotten her heavenly mission in the delirium of imagination. But this cannot be always. There is a remnant of blessedness with her, in spite of evil influences; there is enough of the divine master left, though the portrait is worn and bleached; and the time is fast approaching, when the picture of the true woman will shine from its frame of glory to captivate, to win back and restore the objects of her mission.

—Rufus Dawes.

A TOUGH STORY.

Our Uncle Ezra is in the habit sometimes, of "stretching the truth" a little—a vicious sort of propensity from which the rest of the family are singularly free. We heard him tell Snooks a rather severe tale one day last week, which we have concluded to give to the world. "When I lived in Maine," said he, "I helped break up a new piece of ground; we got the wood off in the winter, and ardy in the spring we begun to think of ploughing out. It was so consarned rocky that we had to get forty yoke of oxen to one plough—we did, faith—and I held that plough die. It 'en a'most killed me, I van. Why, one day I was I hold'n, and the plough hit a stump which measured just nine foot and a half through it—hard and sound white oak. The plough split it, and I was going straight through the stump, when I happened to think it might snap together again, so I threw my feet out and I had no sooner done this, than it snapped together, taking a smart hold of my pantaloons. Of course I was tight, and I held on to the plough handles, and though the teamsters did all they could, that team of eighty oxen couldn't tear my pantaloons—nor cause me to let go my grip. At last though after letting the cattle breathe, they gave another strong pull all together, and the old stump came out about the quickest; it had monstrous long roots, too, let me tell you—My wife made the cloth for them pantaloons, and I ha'n't worn any other kind since."

The only reply made to this was—"I should have thought it would have come hard on your suspenders."—Yankee Blade.

EMPLOYMENT. It is dangerous for a man of superior ability to find himself thrown upon the world without some regular employment. The restlessness inherent in genius, being thus undirected, by any permanent influence, frames for itself occupations out of accidents. Moral integrity sometimes falls a prey to the want of a fixed pursuit, and the man who receives his direction in active life from the fortuitous impulse of circumstances, will be very apt to receive his principles likewise from chance. Genius, under such guidance, attains no noble ends, but resembles rather a copious spring conveyed in a falling aqueduct, where the waters continually escape through the frequent crevices, and waste themselves ineffectually on their passage. The law of nature is here, as elsewhere, binding, and no powerful results ever ensue from the trivial exercise of high endowments. The finest mind, when thus destitute of a fixed purpose, passes away without leaving permanent traces, of its existence; losing its energy by turning aside from its course, it becomes as harmless and inefficient as the lightning, which, of itself irresistible, may yet be rendered powerless by a slight conductor.

TO MAKE PEACH WINE. Take four or five bushels of ripe juicy peaches, mash or bruise them in a tub, and pour them into a barrel, large enough to contain them, and place it in a cool place. At the bottom of the barrel, before putting in the peaches, some clean straw must be placed to prevent the pumice from filling up the spigot. The head of the barrel must be covered. In about three days the Peach Wine is ready for use. Draw it off from the spigot, and if care and attention have been adopted, a delicious beverage will be produced.

A WOMAN OF GOOD TASTE. You see this lady turning a cold eye to the assurance of shopmen, and the recommendations of milliners. She cares not how original a pattern may be, if it be ugly, or how recent a shape, if it be awkward. Whatever laws fashion dictates, she follows laws of her own, and is never behind it. She wears very beautiful things, which people generally suppose to be fetched from Paris, or at least made by a French milliner, but which as often are bought at the nearest town, and made up by her own maids. Not that her costume is either rich or new—on the contrary, she wears many a cheap dress, but it is always pretty—and many an old one, but it is always good. She deals in no gaudy confusion of colors—nor does she affect a studied sobriety, but she either refreshes with spirited contrast, or composes you with a judicious harmony. Not a scrap of tinsel or trumpery appears upon her. She puts no faith in velvet bands, or gilt buttons, or twisted cordons. She is quite aware, however, that the garish is as important as the dress; all her inner borders and beading are delicate and fresh, and should anything peep out which is not intended to be seen, it is quite as much so as that which is. After all, there is no great art either in her fashions or her materials. The secret simply consists in her knowing the three grand unities of dress—her own station, her own age, and her own points! And no woman can dress well who does not. After this, we need not say, that whoever is attracted by the costume, will not be disappointed in the wearer. She may not be handsome, nor accomplished—but we will answer for her being even tempered, well informed, thoroughly sensible, and a complete lady.

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. It used to be the fashion to say that English—our own cartilaginous tongue, as a quaint writer styles it—is an unmusical language; and even Byron, whose own melodious verses show the infinite power and variety of our language, does yet, in one of his moments of impertinent caprice, describe it as—

"Our harsh northern, whistling, grunting guttural, Which we're obliged to hiss, and spit, and sputter all."

Yet this is most ludicrously untrue. English is to the full as noble and copious a tongue as that "miraculous language," the ancient Greek, and like it the appropriate vehicle to give forth to an admiring world—

"Man's towering thoughts in lofty language dressed."

Besides, the solitary exception of the Greek alphabet, which is beyond all criticism, gets that the children of clay have ever yet learned to use. That is to say, when properly and fully pronounced, judiciously read, or wisely and feelingly recited. But the fact is, not one in every ten thousand—nay, peradventure, not one in every hundred thousand—know how and feel how to do justice in reading or recitation to our English tongue. Man may learn most things abroad in schools and colleges; but the secret is, to read English well, the boy must learn to read at home under the guidance of gentle and accomplished parents, who know how to read themselves and have music in their souls. Read well, and you will disclose passages to the charmed ear in prose and verse—in Bacon, in Bolingbroke, in Burke, in Shakespeare, in Spencer, in Milton, and in a host of others, the leaders in our mighty literature—which are altogether unequalled in fervor, grace, and melody, except in the Greek.—Fraser's Magazine.

THE SLAVE'S IDEA OF LIBERTY. Gov. McDowell of Virginia, in a speech before the general assembly of that state, thus beautifully alludes to the idea of freedom in the mind of the slave:—"You may place the slave where you please; you may dry up to your utmost the fountains of his feelings, the springs of his thoughts—you may yoke him to your labor, as an ox, which liveth only to work, and worketh only to live, you may put him under any process, which without destroying his value as a slave, will debas and crush him as a rational being—you may do this, and the idea that he was born to be free will survive it all. It is allied to his hope of immortality; it is the ethereal part of his nature, which oppression cannot reach; it is a torch lit up in his soul by the hand of Deity, and never meant to be extinguished by the hand of man."

REMEDY FOR SLAVERY. There is one remedy for the great and growing evil of slavery; but it is slow in progress, like most good things. It will be found where it was found when slavery existed in Western Europe. It is in the interest of the owners of the slaves and the soil. Slavery was there gradually extinguished, not so much by legislation, as by the experiments made by the masters and landlords on the relative products of slave and free labor. There was first semi-slavery, then attachment to the glebe, then farming at halves, or small proportion, the landlord owning stock, tools, etc, finally by entire freedom with long and independent leases. In all these states the owners of the soil found that they were gainers; and that all powerful mover of man called interest, was the emancipator of the European white slaves. Human sympathy has done but little to alleviate the sufferings of mankind, and that which is called religion not much more; while interest, which is the first founder of society, must have the credit of giving us what little we possess above the savage state.

THE COUNTRYMAN AND CLAM SOUP. The Tregon State Gazette says that a few days ago, just before dinner, a hungry looking man entered a refectory in that city, and pronounced the usual interrogatory—

"Is this the place where they keep clam soup?"

"Yes, sir, how much will you have?"

"Well, (replied the customer,) I guess I'll take three cent's worth."

"Three cents' worth!" (exclaimed the astonished host;) why, man alive, where are you going to put three cents' worth? You certainly won't pretend to eat that quantity at one time?"

"How do you sell it?" asked the astonished countryman.

"One cent a gallon."

"Well, I'll try a gallon," said the countryman, as he leisurely took a seat in one of the boxes.

The keeper, who felt in the humor for a joke, measured out a gallon of clam soup, and had it carried to the customer. He commenced devouring it, and after several temporary suspensions, in order to wipe away the perspiration and breathe freer, he at length found the bottom of his soup dish. The waiter inquired of the customer whether he didn't want more?

He replied in the negative, and inquired, "How in the world do you manage to make soup so cheap?"

"Why in the spring we buy about a hundred clams, put them in a hoghead of water, and, by occasionally throwing in a few crackers and sufficient pepper and salt, in a few weeks have the soup ready for use, and can keep it the whole year round."

"Well, now! ain't that fast rate! What do you ask for the receipt?"

"For a country-right I ask fifty dollars, thirty dollars for a township, and three dollars for a family-right."

"That'll just suit us, for we don't get clams whar I live more than once a year. The next time I come down I guess I'll buy a family-right. I'm desperate fond of clam soup, myself!"

GOOD ADVICE. Somebody lays down the following rules to young men in business. They will apply equally well to young and old. 'Let the business of every one alone, and attend to your own. Don't buy what you don't want. Use every hour to advantage, and study even to make leisure hours useful. Think twice before you spend a shilling; remember you have another to make for it. Find recreation in looking after your business, and ing after recreation. Buy fair, sell fair, take care of the profits; look over the books regularly, and if you find an error, trace it out. Should a stroke of misfortune come upon you in trade, retrench—work harder, but never fly the trace; confront difficulties with unflinching perseverance, and they will disappear at last, and you will be honored; but shrink from the task, and you will be despised.'

SALE OF DEAD LETTER CONTENTS. A cart load of contents of dead letters and bundles were sold by auction in Washington, (D. C.) recently. Among the many articles, were a beautiful badge made of cassia seeds, fish hooks and lines, stockings, gloves, nightcaps, hats, razors, and strops, paints in bottles and boxes, sacking for beds, aprons, spectacles, vest buttons, bead bags and purses, miniatures, gold and brass breast pins and rings, a pack of cards, a box of tools (rather small,) silver crucifixes, handkerchiefs, book marks, calico from a yard to a frock pattern, medicine from a box of 'golden pills' to a box of cancer oil and a bottle of Bull's Sarsaparilla. Books, including two copies of 'Mother Goose,' and a dozen Bibles and Testaments in German and in English, prayer books, Graham's Magazine, grammars, sheet music, etc. A Dutchman's pipe was in the collection of curiosities; also, a garment, similar to a robe de chambre, with a black velvet belt, sewed fast, and trimmed at the edges with gold paper. It was doubtless a theatrical costume, intended for an amateur. Who would think such masses found their way into the mails?

HUMBUS. An intelligent female witness having been much perplexed by a barrister in a long cross-examination, happened, in replying to use the word 'humbus.' 'Madam,' said the man of law, 'you must not talk unintelligibly. What are the court and jury to understand by the word 'humbus?'

"The lady hesitated. 'I must insist, madam,' said the barrister, anticipating a victory, 'that you proceed no further, until you state, plainly and openly, what you mean by the word 'humbus?'

"Why then, sir," returned the lady, 'I don't know how better to explain my meaning than by saying, if I meet a company of persons who were strangers to you, and should tell them that when they saw you they might prepare to meet a remarkably handsome, genteel, agreeable looking man, that would be—a humbus.'

TO HAVE GOOD TEETH. We have seen some receipts for keeping away toothache by using charcoal powder for washing them, &c. We know of no substance equal to charcoal dust for a tooth powder, but if the stomach be disordered nothing can prevent its effects upon the teeth. The only true preventatives of toothache, are simple diet, plenty of exercise in the open air, and cleanliness in every respect.

THE BURROUGHS CAVE. The annexed is an account of a cave amongst the beautiful mountains of Vermont, which was once the place of seclusion of the notorious counterfeiter—Stephen Burroughs:—It is located in a spur of the Green Mountains, famous as the 'Cogniac Den,' (Cogniac being a term used to designate counterfeiters.) It is composed of four compartments—the outer one being in the form of an ellipse, fifty two by thirty seven feet, and nineteen feet in height; the second compartment is smaller than the first, and of a more irregular form, and so also is the third; the fourth is the grandest hall ever beheld, of a circular form, the diameter three hundred and twenty one feet, and over-arched by a magnificent dome, the extreme height of which apparently exceeds the diameter of the floor; the walls are composed of brilliant iron ore, and the light of torches is reflected in a thousand hues, lighting the whole with the brightness of a summer's day. The regularity of the wall could not be improved by art. In this cave the notorious Stephen Burroughs carried on his illegal occupation for some years. The villain had a good eye for the beautiful!

Burroughs preached his father's old sermons of a Sunday, and engraved plates for counterfeiting bank bills through the week. He wrote a book detailing his life, and made money from the proceeds. His daughter is still in a nunnery in Three Rivers. Burroughs's last days were spent in comparative honesty.

NAPOLEON. Napoleon conquered kingdoms and empires, and made Kings, Emperors and Princes; but he employed the spoils of victory for nobler purposes than piling up dollars and counting them; he triangulated a large portion of the earth's surface to obtain the measurement of the arc of its circumference for an invariable standard of weights and measures and on that established a system of decimal divisions, which will become the uniform standard of the world; he executed many, and contemplated more great works of physical improvement; he laid the foundation for the greatest moral reform which the world has seen since that began at Bethlehem eighteen hundred years ago, and which has so signally failed for the want of a moral arc in the heavens, as a standard for Christians, or rather for the ignorance, or perversity of the moral engineers, in Christianity. That great engine of moral reform was the civil and criminal codes executed by his orders; than which nothing has yet shed so much philosophical light on dark chaos of the laws or is likely to produce so great a change in the condition of man and society. Under this great light the laws of government must improve; the errors and fictions of the one are exposed, and the despotism of the other is weakened in the same proportion.

SPECULATION. To the multitude who know the value of money, and stock, and property, and some little else, is a matter of astonishment. But the scheme is simple enough and founded on the known cupidity and gullibility of human nature. For instance—some time ago, three keen brokers seated at a table smoking segars, examined the New York Stock list. Says one, 'why here is a canal whose stock is down to about three dollars per share.' 'Humph!' replied the other, 'it is not worth more than fifty cents.' 'Well, what's the difference,' said the third—'suppose we buy—purchasing will run it.' 'Good,' exclaimed his companions. Forthwith they purchased a thousand shares, and day after day, sold or pretended to sell to each other a few hundred shares of the stock of the Canal Company at advancing prices. The curious public looked on. Avarice got excited. Speculation was on the qui vive. The bait took, every body began to buy, and the worthless stock gradually ran up to over twenty dollars per share, while the original starters of the movement, having realized immense profits, sold out and left the stock in the hands of the many, to sustain or let fall as events might assist them. This is but one of a series of similar transactions.—Philadelphia paper.

SABBATH ON THE MADAWASKA. A correspondent of a New York paper, in recent letter, gives the following account of a Sabbath in a settlement on the Madawaska.

"As a matter of course, I attended church. The congregation was large, and composed entirely of Acadians, decked out in the most ridiculous gewgawish dresses imaginable. I noticed nothing extraordinary on the occasion, only at the threshold of the church was a kind of stand, where a woman was selling sausages and small beer. The services were read in Latin, and the sermon preached in French, which contained nothing but the most common place advice, and that all of a secular character. At the conclusion of the service the male portion of the congregation gradually collected together on the neighboring green, and the afternoon was devoted to the loudest talker, and the heaviest state planter, and that man was a disciple of the Pope, and the identical priest whom I heard preach in the morning. It will be rather hard for you to believe this, but I have written the truth, as well as my last line about the Acadian settlement on the Madawaska."

THREE WONDERS. If ever reach heaven, said Dr. Watts, I expect to find three wonders there: first, the presence of some that I had not thought to see there. Second, the absence of some whom I had expected to meet there. Third, the greatest wonder of all will be to find myself there.

TO SPORTING FRIENDS.

In these diggings, a certain Captain has rigged out a craft, called the —, to visit Long Beach, and spend a few leisure days or weeks, as seems best to himself. It is the wish of his friends, at home and abroad, that he treat his crew, and those who may visit him on this occasion, with that ease and gentlemanly deportment of which he is capable.

P. S. May plover and fish be furnished him in plenty, as it is well known that he is no shot at either of these fish. Be shy of THAT GUN.

ATTENTION—ATTENTION! All those indebted at this Office, either by Note or Account, for the Paper or for Advertising, for one year or more, are called upon for a settlement. Scattered as our accounts are, and in small sums, it would absorb nearly the whole amount to employ an Agent much longer to collect them; therefore an immediate attention to this last notice will save expense. Let none complain after this hint that harsh measures have been adopted.

MILITARY VISIT. The City Guards of Boston, under command of Col. N. A. Thompson, visited this town, on Tuesday of the present week. On their arrival they marched to the delightful residence of John L. Dimmock, Esq., after which they visited the beautiful seat of Col. George T. Bigelow, and at both places they partook of excellent collations. After going through the dress parade at each place, they repaired to the Hancock House where it is understood they dined. Their drill exercise showed a high state of soldierly discipline—the music by the Band was beautiful almost beyond imagination, and the entertainments given by the gentlemen above named were creditable to their generous feelings and clearly evinced that they were in the front ranks of those ready to give the soldier's welcome.

SUDDEN DEATH. On Thursday afternoon last, Mr. John Savil of Dover, (N. H.) formerly of this town, came to his death in that place, while assisting in raising the sign staff to the United States hotel. He was forty-eight years of age, and much esteemed for his virtues as a citizen. His burial will take place in this town, this afternoon at four o'clock, from the residence of Benjamin Curtis, Esq.

DROWNED. Winslow, son of William Hobart, 24, of this town, aged about ten years, was drowned near the mouth of Black's Creek, yesterday afternoon. He was bathing in company with several boys, but they were unable to save him.

FROM EUROPE. The steamer Caledonia arrived in Boston on Thursday last.

The commercial intelligence is of great importance. The Bank of England on the 5th ult. raised the rate of discount, a monetary panic followed, numerous heavy failures took place amongst the largest houses engaged in the Corn trade, and a very large number of American drafts, drawn upon these houses, are returned by the Caledonia protested for non-payment.

LIBERTY STATE CONVENTION. This body, which met at Worcester the past week, nominated the same candidates for Governor and Lt. Governor as on last year—Samuel E. Sewall and John M. Brewster. Resolutions were passed favoring the nomination of John P. Hale of New Hampshire as the Liberty party candidate for President.

GOOD PROFITS. It is said that Mr. R. Noyard has in the short period of seven months, realized fifty thousand dollars from his panoramic view of the Mississippi river, in Boston. He has purchased a lot of ground in Broadway, New York city, with a portion of the profits, and intends to erect a suitable building upon it, for the purpose of exhibiting his pictures.

THE WRONG MAN HUNG. A young printer, named Boyington, who served his time in the office of the New Haven Palladium, was hung a few years since, upon a charge of having murdered a companion with whom he was travelling. He protested his innocence to the last; but without avail. Recently the landlord, in whose house the murder was committed, confessed the crime on his death-bed!

THE WAR. There is no definite news concerning the movements of Gen. Scott with the army under his command. Parades, a former President of Mexico, has returned under a general amnesty recently granted to political offenders, and has successfully evaded the vigilance of the United States officers at Vera Cruz, where he landed in disguise. His arrival in Mexico may tend to prolong the war. Major. Gaines and Lieut. Rogers have made their escape from the Mexicans and arrived at Puebla.

A young lad belonging to Boston, while on a visit in a neighboring town, was playing with a cent by tossing it up and catching it in his mouth, and finally the coin lodged horizontally in his throat and all attempts to dislodge have been fruitless.

DEATH OF HON. SILAS WRIGHT. The Hon. Silas Wright, late Governor of the State of New York, died of apoplexy at his residence in Canton, (N. Y.) on Friday of last week. He was at the post office at the time he was attacked, but walked home, and soon after expired. Mr. Wright was one of the great men of America. His death has left a vacuum which cannot soon be filled. The biography of this distinguished Statesman may be thus summed up.

"Mr. Wright was born in the town of Amherst, (Mass.) on the 24th day of May, 1795. The subsequent year his father and family removed to Vermont. In 1815 he graduated at Middlebury College, in that State, and in the fall of that year removed to New York, to commence the study of the law at Sandy Hill. In the fall of 1823 he was elected to the State Senate from St. Lawrence County. In 1826 he was elected to Congress. In 1829 he was chosen State Controller, to which office he was in 1832 re-elected by the Legislature. In 1833 he was chosen United States Senator, to which office he was re-elected in 1837, for the term of six years. In 1843 he was again re-elected, and in 1844 he was called from the Senate to take the post of Governor, on which he entered on the 1st of January, 1845, and from it he retired on the 1st of January, 1847. He died aged 52 years."

Some weeks since, the merchants of New York city, subscribed a large sum of money to be expended in the purchase of a service of plate for presentation to Mr. Wright. The plate was ordered and is nearly ready for presentation. The inscription reads as follows: "Presented to Silas Wright by his mercantile friends of the city of New York, in testimony of their high respect and regard for his public and private character, 4th July, 1844." This testimony will not be presented to his family.

AN INCIDENT OF THE BATTLE OF MONTEREY. While Col. Davis, with his command, was hotly engaged with the enemy, exposed to their direct fire, a man in a long gray surtout suddenly rode up, and, dismounting, placed himself in the middle of the street. There, in face of the enemy, amidst the thickest of their fire, he coolly drew a case, suspended about his person, a spy-glass, with which, having adjusted it to a proper focus, he proceeded to reconnoitre the Mexican battery. Having satisfied himself as to the information he sought, he shut up the glass, returned it to its case, and, approaching Col. Davis, said to him: "Sir, the enemy has but two pieces, and by making a detour to the right you can take them in flank." "And who the devil are you?" "I, sir, am Major Mansfield, of the Corps of Engineers." "All right! come on boys!" responded the Colonel. The battery was soon carried.

IMMIGRATION. During the year ending 31st July, 1846, 91,280 steerage passengers arrived at New York, from the old world; the arrivals for the year, ending at the same date this year, amounted to, 151,116. Of the latter number, were from British (Bremen and Hamburg) 15,525; Belgium, 13,128; Holland, 5076; Sweden and Norway, 2021; Prussia, 274; Spain, 1; Italy, Sicily, and Sardinia, 114; all other ports, 465.

POPULATION AND COLLEGES. The following table shows the proportion of Colleges to the population in each of the States named: Vermont, with a population of 292,000, has two Colleges; Maine, 500,000, two do; New Hampshire, 284,000, one do; Massachusetts, 737,000, three do; Rhode Island, 108,000, one do; Connecticut, 310,000, three do; Central and Eastern New York, 1,600,000, four do; New Jersey, 373,000, two do; Pennsylvania, 1,725,000, eight do; Delaware, 80,000, one do.

A MATHEMATICIAN. We have received a communication from Mr. Peter M. Deshong, of New York City, who adds, subtracts, multiplies, divides, and performs other arithmetical operations with a rapidity that seems almost miraculous. He requests us to publish the following statements:

"First let a column of figures, say three thousand and in length, and ten or twenty in breadth, be placed before me, and in less than five seconds of time I will give the sum total, always commencing on the left hand side to place the answer down. It matters not what length the column is, or what breadth, I will give the sum total, as fast as the figures can be written down. Second, let a sum be written in multiplication, with one thousand figures in the multiplier, and as many in the multiplicand, and I commence writing down the product from left to right, all in one line as fast as the figures can be written down. Third, let a sum be written down in division, with any large amount for a divisor, and I commence writing down: the remainder first, then the quotient. Interest at any per cent. can be performed in the same manner without using any extra figures. Fractions, of every denomination, can be summed up instantly without reducing them to a denominator. These rules can be learned in one half hour by any person having the printed instructions."

A person wishing these rules, will enclose ten dollars through the New York post office, and on receipt thereof, I will forward a full set of these rules, by which they can become as expert in figures as I am.

PETER M. DESHONG, the Mathematician.
P. S. Editors copying the above, and forwarding Mr. Deshong the papers which contain it, will be furnished with a full set of the rules.

Another outrage is mentioned as having taken place in the Anti-rent district of New York. An attempt was made to shoot a deputy sheriff, but the gun snapped.

On the 21st day of August, 1844, a gentleman in Boston gave his son, who was then a student in Harvard University, a check on a Bank in Boston, for twenty dollars; the check was lost, and its payment stopped. On the 21st day of last August this check was presented at the Bank by a stranger, and was paid.

Amos A. Lawrence, Esq., of Boston, was elected one of the Trustees of Williams College, at the late Commencement.

Some persons will do more for a pet parrot or favorite monkey, than they would for one of their own race. A lady who died not long ago at Wakefield, (England,) left her dog thirty pounds, about one hundred and fifty dollars, a year for life. What a splendid education this might have successively given to a talented youth.

Five more regiments have been called out by the Secretary of War, to render service in Mexico, viz: two from Tennessee, two from Kentucky, and one from Indiana.

It is an extraordinary fact, says an exchange, that when people come to what is called high words, they pretty generally use low language.

An excursion for poor children, planned by Rev. John M. Spear, of Boston, took place on the 1st inst. About six hundred poor children, took the Old Colony cars and proceeded to Tenen Grove, Dorchester, where the day was spent in a joyful manner. There were speeches from several benevolent gentlemen, and a feast of good things liberally provided by the ladies of Boston and Dorchester.

COAL. It has been stated that the price of coal the present season, particularly the latter part, would be extremely high, and consequently purchasers should buy without delay. This is all moonshine, and we are glad that our friend of the Hingham Patriot has correctly informed his readers of this base design of speculators. He truly says, "The receipts, thus far, the present year, of all kinds of coal, have far exceeded those of last year up to the present time, and what evidence therefore is there that the quantity of this necessary article will be very scarce and the price be enormously high?"

Once More.

SEVERAL of my friends, in settling their accounts, have told me they have heard it generally spoken that I have advertised my leaving town merely to get my debts. I admit it would be a very good plan if I could get them settled in that way, but I would impress it on the minds of all those who owe me, by Note or Account, that I shall positively leave at the time stated in my advertisement, and would thank them not to leave their settling till the last day, as I shall be busy in making preparations to start.

I would also say I have a GOOD ASSORTMENT of things, made up and in pieces, that I will sell cheap before leaving for Cash and nothing else. I am thankful to my old customers for flocking in as they do to get what they want before I go, and should be most happy to attend to their wants in my line, let me be where I may.

The stand I am leaving would be a good chance for a young man just starting in business. He would find some first rate customers in this vicinity, and would do well to consult me before I leave.

AND WILD CHERRY BITTERS.

THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPARILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver—strengthens the Nerves, and at once secures
HEALTH AND VIGOR

to the whole system. In all cases of JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, LOSS OF APPETITE, HAEMORRHOIDS, COSTIVENESS, SCROFULA, HEADACHE, LANGUOR, and that DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS,

which is so common a complaint in the SPRING AND SUMMER
season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous of its peculiar virtues.

For further particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.
Be particular and ask for Doct. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters," pressed on the glass, and that each label on the bottle is signed by the proprietor, E. Thornton, Jr., New Bedford.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.
AGENTS.

"Palo Alto" Restorator.
THIS was the first of the series of glorious victories achieved by the Americans under "Rough and Ready" in the war with Mexico, so the subscriber, who has taken that long established stand in Cross Buildings, (so called) intends to be first on hand for the wants of customers and to keep a first rate Restorator.

The best of OYSTERS constantly on hand, will be served to order, and sold by the pint or gallon.
The usual variety of NUTS, together with CONFECTIONARY, FRUITS, etc., are also for sale.
Superior Bottled CIDER, ALE, PORTER, MINERAL WATER, and that excellent drink ROOT BEER.

Pickled Clams, Pigs' Feet, Lambs' Tongues, etc.
Order, neatness, and a desire to meet the wants of patrons, will ever characterize the generalship of the "Palo Alto" Restorator, and the "Rough" perhaps in his ways, though "ready" proprietor, hopes to obtain splendid victories by the liberal patronage of the community.

THOMPSON BAXTER, Collector.

Once More.
SEVERAL of my friends, in settling their accounts, have told me they have heard it generally spoken that I have advertised my leaving town merely to get my debts. I admit it would be a very good plan if I could get them settled in that way, but I would impress it on the minds of all those who owe me, by Note or Account, that I shall positively leave at the time stated in my advertisement, and would thank them not to leave their settling till the last day, as I shall be busy in making preparations to start.

I would also say I have a GOOD ASSORTMENT of things, made up and in piece, that I will sell cheap before leaving for Cash and nothing else. I am thankful to my old customers for flocking in as they do to get what they want before I go, and should be most happy to attend to their wants in my line, let me be where I may.

The stand I am leaving would be a good chance for a young man just starting in business. He would find some first rate customers in this vicinity, and would do well to consult me before I leave.

POETRY.

THE ALARMED SKIPPER.

Many a long, long year ago,
Nantucket skippers had a plan,
Of finding out, though 'lying low,'
How near New York the schooners ran.
The custom was to grease the lead,
And then, by sounding through the night—
Knowing the soil that stuck so well,
They always guessed their reckoning right.

A skipper grey whose eyes were dim,
Could tell, by tasting, just the spot,
And so below, he'd 'dowse the gim'—
After, of course, his 'something hot.'

Sung in his berth, at eight o'clock,
This ancient skipper might be found;
No matter how his craft might rock—
He slept—and skippers sleep profound!

The watch on deck would now and then Run down and wake him with the lead—
He'd up and taste, and tell the men
How many miles they went ahead.

One night 'twas Jotham Merden's watch;
A wag was Joe the pedlar's son,
And so he mused, (the warden wretch),
To-night I'll have a grain of fun.

We're a set of stupid fools,
To think the skipper knows by tasting,
What ground he's on,—Nantucket schools
Don't teach such stuff, with all their basting!

And so he took the well greased lead,
And tubed it 'er a box of earth
That stood on deck, (a parson bed),
And then he sought the skipper's berth.

"Where are we now, sir? please to taste,"
The skipper yawned out on his tongue,
Then ope'd his eyes in wondrous haste,
And then upon the floor he sprung!

The skipper stormed, and tore his hair,
Thrust on his boots and roared to Marden—Nantucket's sunk, and here we are,
Right over old Marm Hackett's garden!

THAT LITTLE GRAVE ON YONDER HILL.

There's a little grave on yonder hill,
No stone yet marks the spot,
Whoe'er it is that slumbers there,
In truth they're not forgot;
For some loving hand hath kindly placed
Each side that lonely mound,
A simple rose-tree, fresh and fair,
With waving grass around.

'Tis affection's tribute, planted there
By friendship's hand sincere;
A sweeter memorial than stone,
To the fond heart more dear.
It tells that the lov'd one resting there Still lives in memory's shrine,
Of her who the little offering gave,
As a touching proof divine.

More eloquence than chiselled stone,
Doth the silent rose-tree bear;
Though yet more brief may be its date,
Its lovelier form doth wear.
That sweet memorial breaths forth
Bright memories of the past,
Breathing to the reflective mind,
That time is fleeting fast.

I lingered awhile at the quiet place,
While saddened thoughts arose,
Of by-gone times and departed friends,
That a shade o'er my memory throw;
And I could not check the rising wish
That when I'm with the dead,
Some friendly hand may plant a rose Beside my humble bed.

IT SPOILS A MAN TO MARRY HIM.

Believe, dear girls, this maxim true,
In precept and in practice too,
That it spoils a man to marry him:
The creatures never ought to go Beyond a honey-moon or so;
If they survive that, they will show
That it spoils a man to marry him.

When first he kneels before your feet,
How soft his words! his look, how sweet!
But it spoils a man to marry him:
When once a late consent he'll wring,
And gets your finger in the ring,
Oh! then he's quite another thing,
It spoils a man to marry him.

Have you a fancy? you must drop it;
A will, it may be?—you must lop it
Before you think of marrying;
And even if you venture then,
Select the very worst of men,
There is nine chances out of ten,
'Twill spoil the wretch to marry him.

ANECDOTES.

A gentleman was one day arranging music for a young lady to whom he was paying his addresses. "Pray, said he, 'what time do you prefer?' "Oh, she replied, carelessly, 'any time will do—but the quicker the better.' "

Lord Castlereagh made so many new words, that Channing called him the literary coiner. "He has got a mint in his mind," said he. "Mint in his mind!" replied Tierney, "would he had a sage in his head."

"Miss Brown, I have been to learn how to tell fortunes," said a young fellow to a brisk brunette. "Just let me have your hand, if you please." "La! Mr. White, how sudden you are, well, go and ask my father."

A rowdy in New York, intending to be very witty, thus accosted a lady in the streets:—"Madam, can you tell me where I can see the elephant?" "No, but if I had a looking glass, I could show you a very large monkey."

MANHOOD.

CAUSES of its Premature Decline, with directions for its Restoration. Rescues the young from those suffering from the destructive effects of Excessive Indulgence, Solitary Habits, etc., etc. By L. Deslandes, M. D. Translated from the French, with many additions; By an American Physician. Twenty-seventh edition. 252 pp. 18 mo.

RECOMMENDATIONS.
"Physicians of extensive observations, and superintendents of establishments for the moral management of Lunatics, concur in assuring us that the cancer-worm of death is gnawing at the vitals of many youths of all ages, in all countries too, as portrayed by the author. If it were once freely circulated, the tendency would be beneficial, because like an alarm gun, it would give warning in season to avert threatened danger. It might thus drive away a fiend that would run soul and body at the same time and blight the dawn of life before the individual is conscious of his duty to himself, to society, or to his Maker."—Boston Medical and Surgical Journal.

"I consider Deslandes' book, as decidedly the best treatise extant in the French or English Language. The subject is extremely important, and one too much overlooked by our profession generally, and the evils of the vice, on which your publication treats are not appreciated by the community, although the cases presented in your book are frightful. Yet judging from many patients who have been under treatment they have not been overdrawn."—A. Sidney Doane, M. D., New York.

"The work of Deslandes, by pointing out the diseases resulting from excesses, the evils of which are manifest in every insane asylum, no less than in the shattered constitution of those indulging, will do much to prevent the vice, which by its prevalence among the young has so much influence on the present as on the future well being of the many."—Windsor Lewis, Jr., M. D., Boston.

"The vice is doubtless very much more common in this country than is generally supposed, or than most medical men are ready to believe; and it is a frightful source of ill health and fatal disease with the young. I have no doubt; I hope therefore it will go into extensive circulation. The views of the writer are excellent on this subject."—Dr. S. B. Woodward, Superintendent of the Insane Hospital at Worcester.

"The present work abounds in well authenticated cases going fully to substantiate the position taken by the author, and cannot be read without producing a deep conviction that something ought to be done to check this deplorable evil."—Zion's Herald.

"The volume as now published will prove eminently useful, and deserving the consideration of all to whom is committed the responsible trust of moral and physical education."—John W. Francis, M. D., New York.

"We recommend the work, entitled Manhood, etc., to the careful perusal of persons of all classes. The moral as well as the physical advantages sure to result from such perusal will be most readily recognized and felt by those who stand most in need of them."—Phœnix Journal.

"We do not think we go too far in saying that society is deeply indebted to the author for producing so useful, so much wanted, so valuable, and so truly moral a book."—Conservative Journal.

"The work entitled Manhood, is one of the few books now coming before the public on such a subject which can lay claim to the character of being strictly professional, at the same time that it is fully intelligible to all who read it. The moral and medical precepts given in it render it invaluable."—Register.

Public Notice.
THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to the community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash price.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality, at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before leaving elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULATING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading of a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c.

To all we say "encourage home manufacture, and patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign."

MISCELLANY.

TOO LATE.

It is well, said the venerable man to his wife as they sat together, late one evening in July, 1810,—it is well that we discovered the character and habits of the young man before he had advanced further in our esteem; he might else have enveigled our only daughter into a marriage and brought disgrace upon us, as well as misery upon our child.

Which would have been misery to us, too surely, said the wife.

It would have been insupportable misery—but thank God, continued he, raising his eyes in heartfelt gratitude, I was informed in season to prevent my child from the disgrace of a connection with a—

With a what? said a good looking young man, bowing to the venerable pair; with a what, sir? speak out now! I am your daughter's husband, and it seems not unkind that we should be so much confidence between father and son as that the latter should know the opinion of the former upon his pursuits, when the former knows the relation in which each stands to the other.

If it is too late to prevent the marriage, said the father,—

It is too late.

Then, at least, though my rights as a father may have ceased, those of a husband and a man are unimpaired, and if I cannot rule those in my house, I can at least say who shall be its inmates.

Father, said the bride, kneeling, with clasped hands, do not cast me from you; give me—give him time, at least, to prove that you have done him injustice. Mother, dear mother—

The closing of the door on the other side of the room drew the attention of the suppliant, and she found that her husband was the only one with her. It was too late.

Hand in hand the newly married couple left what had been to the wife an Eden of happiness. The stern commands of the father were there, at least, to be obeyed; and she was yet to learn whether a serious act of disobedience on her part, would ever be forgiven by one who had seemed wrapped up in her affections, whose life was apparently entwined with her obedience.

She left the Eden, then. Hand in hand the banished pair took their departure; and as the offending daughter and confiding wife turned back to look at the closing door of her paternal mansion, it seemed to her, as if some angel, severe in awful beauty, guarded the portal against her entrance to the place which she had desecrated by filial disobedience.

The pride of the new husband was just too much for his situation. He was anxious, not only to maintain his wife independently of her family, but to give her many of those comforts to which she had been accustomed. He met easily have attained the former, and had met all her wishes in that respect; but his pride induced him to neglect rational means of acquiring the ordinary comforts, and led him to what he deemed "chances" of sudden fortune.

He had, before his marriage, suffered in the estimation of many respectable persons, by his associating with certain dashing young men who to their other social qualities, were supposed to add that of fondness for games of hazard. He had amused himself in this way without pecuniary profits, and by observation had learned the tricks of the art, and without practicing them upon others.

Time passed onward, and the young wife became a mother, and saw in the birth of her boy the renewal of the attentions of her husband, which, without apparent lapse of affection, certainly without other evidences of kindness, had of late been pretermitted. He had absented himself from home until a late hour at night, and had appeared haggard and care far superior to the far famed Bogla Nigro, which which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant to and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores
the scalp to a healthy condition which must be ac-

With a what? said a good looking young man, bowing to the venerable pair; with a what, sir? speak out now! I am your daughter's husband; and it seems not unwelcome to me should be so much confidence between father and son as that the latter should know the opinion of the former upon his pursuits, when

The closing of the door on the other side of the room drew the attention of the suppliant, and she found that her husband was the only one with her. It was too late.

Hand in hand the newly married couple left what had been to the wife an Eden of happiness. The stern commands of the father were there, at least, to be obeyed; and she was yet to learn whether a serious act of disobedience on her part, would ever be forgiven by one who had seemed wrapped up in her affections, whose life was apparently entwined with her

She left the Eden, then. Hand in hand the banished pair took their departure; and as the offending daughter and confiding wife turned back to look at the closing door of her paternal

The pride of the new husband was just too to which she had been accustomed. He could easily have attained the former, and had met all her wishes in that respect; but his pride induced him to neglect rational means of acquiring the ordinary comforts, and led him to what he deemed "chances" of sudden fortune.

He had, before his marriage, suffered in the estimation of many respectable persons, by his associating with certain dashing young men who to their other social qualities, were supposed to add that of fondness for games of hazard. He had amused himself in this way without pecuniary profits, and by observation had learned the tricks of the art, and without practicing them upon others.

Time passed onward, and the young wife became a mother, and saw in the birth of her boy the renewal of the attentions of her husband, which, without apparent lapse of affection, certainly without other evidences of kindness, had of late been pretermitted. He had absented himself from home until a late hour at night, and had appeared haggard and careworn. It was also obvious that the means of support were diminished, and the wife began to feel many, very many, of her comforts curtailed.

The descent was rapid, and with it the renewal of absence of the husband at night; but no open unkindness was exhibited, nor was there reproach on her part, unless the pale cheek, the emaciated frame, and the heart broken sigh could be so construed.

Misery, wretchedness and absolute want beset the family; and the husband tore himself away from the bed of his wife and child early in the evening, with the determination to bring back to them some means of comfort. He met a friend who informed him that a place was vacant in an office, which with a security, would be his.

And who will be that security?

Who? Any one—I will. I told you so two years ago.

Will you now, indeed?

Present yourself to me to-morrow free of debt and I will insure you the place.

He was not free from debt, but a few hundred dollars would make him so. He felt assured that a few hours at the gaming table, the last time he would ever darken the accursed doors, would supply him with means to pay these debts; more than that he would not receive.

He hastened to the place, and paused at the last step of the door. Why should I go in?
The few hundreds which I owe I can soon save; and he who knowing my poverty, would be security for fidelity, would not think worse
of my character if I confess my indebtedness, and my determination never to place myself within the chance of such dangers again.

The resolution so excellent relieved his heart and he turned, with new feelings, to a course of virtue. It was then "too late."

He saw within a few yards of him, one of the officers of the institution in which he was to have a place of trust. To have turned from the door would be to expose himself, and he could not stand where he was. He entered—he played, and at midnight won a few dollars.
His luck had turned he said; he followed up the luck and daylight saw him possessed of more than the desired sum.

He left the gambling room a man of better resolves than he had been, though he had always resolved well. He thought of the pleasure in store; of the good he would yet do, and the delight he could yet enjoy.

The outer door of the house in which he lived was open. He stole quietly up stairs and gently lifted the latch of his room door. It was dark and still. He opened the door. He felt that his wife had occasion to complain of his long absence, but the joy of his heart was to make her understand the new resolution he had formed, and the means he now possessed of carrying it into effect. He called her by name—she did not answer. He then called again, but in vain. He then opened a window shutter, and the light of the morning poured full upon the face of his infant.
He went to the bed to awaken his wife, he laid his hand upon her arm, and his icy stillness struck to his heart. He threw himself upon his bed, and groined in anguish. The crying of the child called some of the tenants of the house to the room.

The coroner's aid was demanded over the dead body of the wife. The verdict of the jury was—Died of the visitation of God. But one or two thought that the anxieties and cares, the new feelings of suspicion, or the sense of utter abandonment that night, had been too much. Her heart had broken with over fight.

The pride of the injured father at length yielded, and with quiet efforts he traced out the residence of the daughter.

Determined to meet her at more than half way towards a reconciliation, he came as soon as the husband had awakened to a sense of his misery. It is "too late," said the latter and he pointed to the bed.

The pomp of a funeral did not insult the wretchedness of the living, or the emaciated form of the dead.

The grave is on the very verge of the western declivity of Laurel Hill. There is no stone to tell whose heart moulders there. Why should there be? What lesson could it teach?

He whose reformation was almost begun before her death, tried the path of virtue afterwards but it was "too late."

He had resolved to reform for the sake of his wife and not for the sake of virtue.

THE GREAT ELM. The large elm on Boston Common was set out about the year 1670, by Capt. Daniel Henchman, and is therefore a hundred and seventy seven years old. Capt.
H. was a schoolmaster in Boston from 1666 to 1671. He joined the 'Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company' in 1675. He was a distinguished captain in King Philip's War, of his company of infantry. Forty five years ago the great elm had a large hollow in it, and was rapidly decaying, but was treated in the mode recommended by Forsyth, by clearing the cavity of rotten wood and filling it with a new composition made principally of lime rubbish from old buildings, and clay, and thus restored it is now apparently as flourishing as ever, and without any appearance of the hollow, which was once large enough for a boy to hide himself in. The tree is a native elm, which is the most hardy kind. Many of the old elm trees are called English elms, with less extended roots and branches than the American.

A PATCH ON BOTH KNEES.

When I was a boy, it was my fortune to breathe, for a long time, what some writers call the 'bracing air of poverty.' My mother—light lie the turf upon the form which once enclosed her strong and gentle spirit—was what is called an ambitious woman, for that quality, which overturns thrones and supplants dynasties, finds a legitimate sphere in the humblest abode that the shadow of poverty ever darkened. The struggle between the wish to keep up appearances and the pinching grips of necessity, produced endless shifts and contrivances, at which, were they told, some would smile, and some, to whom they would recall their own experiences, would sigh. But let me not disturb that vale of oblivion, which shrouds from profane eyes the hallowed mysteries of poverty.

On one occasion it was necessary to send me upon an errand to a neighbor in better circumstances than ourselves, and before whom it was necessary that I should be presented in the best possible aspect. Great pains were accordingly taken to give a smart appearance to my patched and dilapidated wardrobe, and to conceal the rents and chasms which the envious tooth of time had made in them; and by way of throwing over my equipment a certain savor and sprinkling of gentility, my red and toil-hardened hands were enclosed in the unfamiliar casing of a pair of gloves, which had belonged to my mother in days when her years were fewer and her heart lighter.

I sallied forth on my errand, and on my way encountered a much older and bigger boy, who evidently belonged to a family which had all our down-dragging poverty, and none of our uprising wealth of spirit. His rags fairly fluttered in the breeze; his hat was constructed on the most approved principle of ventilation, and his shoes, from their venerable antiquity, might have been deemed a pair of fossil shoes
—the very ones on which Shem shuffled into the ark. He was an impudent varlet, with a dare-devil swagger in his gait, and a sort of "I'm as good as you" leer in his eye—the very whelp to throw a stone at a well dressed horseman, because he was well dressed; to tear a boy's ruffe simply because it was clean. As soon as he saw me, his eye detected the practical inconsistencies which characterized my costume, and taking me by the shoulders, turning me round with no gentle hand, and surveying me from head to foot, exclaimed, with a scornful laugh of derision, "A patch on both knees and gloves on!"

I still recall the sting of wounded feeling which shot through me at these words. I declared a celebrated line of the immortal Je-san—

"That day, I wore my gloves no more."

But the lesson, thus rudely enforced, sunk deep into my mind, and, in after life, I have had frequent occasion to make a practical application of the words of my ragged friend, when I have observed the practical inconsistencies which so often mark the conduct of mankind.

When, for instance, I see parents carefully providing for the ornamental education of their children, furnishing them with teachers in music, dancing and drawing, but giving no thought to that moral and religious training, from which the true dignity and permanent happiness of life alone can come, never teaching them habits of self-sacrifice and self-discipline and control, but rather by their example instructing them in evil speaking, in uncharitableness, in envy, and in falsehood, I think, with a sigh, of the patch on both knees and gloves on.

When I see a family living in a cold and selfish solitude, not habitually warming their houses with the glow of happy faces, but lavishing that which should furnish the hospitality of a whole year upon the profession of a single night, I think of the patch on both knees and gloves on.

When I see a house profusely furnished with sumptuous furniture, rich curtains and luxurious carpets, but with no books, or none but a few tawdry annuals, I am reminded of the patch on both knees and gloves on.

When I see the public men cultivating exclusively those qualities which win a way to office, and neglecting those which will qualify to fill honorably the posts to which they aspire
I recall the patch on both knees and gloves on.

When I see men sacrificing peace of mind and health of body to the insane pursuit of wealth, living in ignorance of the character of the children who are growing up around them, cutting themselves off from the highest and purest pleasures of their natures, and so per-verting their humanity, that that which was sought as a means insensibly comes to be followed as an end, I say to myself, "a patch on both knees and gloves on."

When I see thousands squandered for selfishness and ostentation, and nothing bestowed for charity, when I see fine ladies be-satined and bejeweled, cheapening the toil of dressmakers, and with harsh words embittering the bread of dependence, when I see the poor turned away from proud houses, where the crumbs of the tables would be to them a feast, I think on the patch on both knees and gloves on.

When I see men lynx-eyed to the faults of others, and mole-eyed to their own, when I see a savageness of virtue which forgives nothing, tolerates nothing, and makes allowance for nothing, when a decent life and conversation are thought sufficient warrant and excuse for evil speaking and all manner of uncharitableness,
I recall the patch on both knees and gloves on.

FIGHTING PARSONS. It is a well known fact that many of the southern Methodist and Baptist parsons are members of the church militant as well as the church triumphant. It is said that a Methodist minister was captain of a company in one of the Mississippi regiments.
Just before the battle of Buena Vista commenced, and whilst the troops were forming, he delivered the following pithy prayer, at the head of his company:

"Be with us this day in the conflict, oh
Lord! We are few, and the enemy are many.
Be with us as thou wast with Joshua when he went down from Gilgal to Beth-horon and Ajalon, to smite the Amorites. We do not ask thee for the sun and moon to stand still,
but grant us plenty of powder, plenty of daylight, and no cowards. Take old Rough and Ready under thy special charge. Amen!
Company, by the right flank, quick step, forward—M-a-r-c-h." His company, it is said, performed wonders on the field that day.

In the time of the civil wars in England,
between Charles the First and the Parliament, the Puritans always went into battle with prayers. An amusing anecdote is told of Sir Jacob Astley (a cavalier or royalist), who commanded the foot at the battle of Edge Hill.
Standing in front of his men, he delivered this prayer:

"Oh Lord! thou knowest how busy I must be this day; if I forget thee, do not thou forget me. March on, boys!" This was the more remarkable, as the prayers were generally from the opposite side.

THALES, ONE OF THE WISE MEN OF GREECE.
A sophist wishing to puzzle him with difficult questions, the sage of Miletus replied to them all without the least hesitation and with the utmost precision.

What is the oldest of all things? God, because he always existed.

What is the most beautiful? The world, because it is the work of God.

What is the greatest of all things? Space, because it contains all that has been created.

What is the most constant of all things? Hope, because it still remains with man after he has lost every thing else.

What is the best of all things? Virtue, because without it there is nothing.

What is the quickest of all things? Thought, because in less than a moment it can fly to the end of the universe.

What is the strongest? Necessity, which makes men face all the dangers of life.

What is the easiest? To give advice.

What is the most difficult? To know yourself.

CONTINUITY OF TIME. Among the fathom-less things that are about us and within us, is the continuity of time. This gives to life one of its most solemn aspects. We may think to ourselves—Would there could be some halting-place in life, where we could stay, collecting our mind, and see the world drift by us. But not even while you read this, you are not passing to read it. As one of the great French preachers says: We are embarked upon a stream, each in his own little boat, which moves uniformly onwards, till it ceases to move at all.
It is a stream that knows 'no haste, no rest,' a boat that knows no haven but one. The main object for the historian is to get an insight into the things which he tells of, and then to tell them with the modesty of a man who is in presence of great events, and must speak about them carefully, simply, and with but little of himself or his affections thrown into the narrative.

LIGHT HOUSE ON COHASSET ROCKS. Readers are doubtless aware that an appropriation was granted at the last session of Congress, for commencing the work of erecting a Light House on Minot's Ledge, or the outer rocks connected with that dangerous ledge which runs into the bay from Cohasset, and known as Cohasset Rocks. A plan for this Light House has already been adopted by the Topographical Bureau at Washington. It is to be placed on piles firmly fixed into the solid rock.
These piles are to be ponderous bars of wrought iron, nine in number, each thirty feet long, and sixteen inches in diameter. On the top of these piles, which, of course, incline towards a common centre, an iron platform is to be secured, on which will be erected on iron dwelling-house of small proportions for the keeper.
Above the house, or cage, will be fixed the iron lantern containing a light of great power, to give warning to the anxious mariner to avoid Cohasset Rocks. Alger, of South Boston, has commenced work upon the iron piles, and Mr.
Savage, well known for his connection with the Bunker Hill Monument, has undertaken the arduous and disagreeable task of preparing the rock, and drilling holes five feet in depth, to receive the piles. This will be a work of time and great labor, as the workmen cannot continue their task longer than three hours a day, and only when the weather is particularly favorable.

TO REMOVE DUST OR MOTES FROM THE EYE.
The following simple remedy is almost always near at hand, and in most cases will prove effectual: Fill a cup or goblet with clear cold water quite to the brim, and place the eye in distress in such a position as to be completely within the water in the cup; then rapidly open and shut the eye a few times, and the dust or mote will be immediately washed away.
If a cup or other vessel be not at hand, the eye
may be placed in a spring or bucket of water.

FALL RIVER ROUTE TO NEW YORK.

The stockholders of the Fall River Branch Railroad Company held their first meeting on the 23d of April, 1844, and made the first annual report of their acts and doings

est passage is made over the longest route. For instance, the Norwich line has frequently reached New York or Boston before that via Stonington.

It was not our object, however, when we commenced this article, to make an invidious comparison of the different lines between the two cities; but our attention was called to the subject from the circumstance of having recently taken the Fall River route to "Boston and back"; and as that is less known, although since it has been commenced it has received its full share of the travel, we concluded to collect and embody a few facts concerning its history and statistics.

The steamers connected with the Fall River Line, are the "Massachusetts" and the "Bay State," the former a comparatively old, but staunch and excellent sea-boat. Of her accommodations, however, we hear some complaints; and she does not, we presume, compare, in this respect, with those more recently built; besides, the best officers generally secure the command of the best boats; and there is not the same degree of ambition manifested by the officers and managers of an old steamer, that is exhibited by the same men in that of a new and more popular one.

The "Bay State," which runs on opposite days, in connection with the "Massachusetts," is a noble specimen of steamboat architecture, and was built expressly to ply between New York, Newport, and Fall River. The length of this boat is 315 feet; beam, 40 feet; depth of hold, 14 feet; which gives her a burthen of 1,500 tons. Her engine, a most finished specimen of mechanical skill, from the works of James P. Allaire, is 1,500 horse-power, being seventy six inch cylinder, and twelve feet stroke; and the connections of her engine are of extra size. She is the largest inland steamer afloat on the American waters, and has proved herself in several severe gales, in every respect a superior sea vessel. The proprietors of the "Bay State" have spared neither pains nor expense in her construction and fitting out, liberally adopting all the new improvements which have been found to lessen the risk of accidents, and to add to the comfort and convenience of passengers. Her interior finish is chaste and neat, but not gaudy. She has 420 permanent berths, including those in her state-rooms, which are commodious and well-ventilated. The owners have been quite fortunate in securing the services of Captain Joseph J. Comstock, a man, although in the prime of life, who has been in command of a steamer on the Sound for more than twelve years, and for six years previous to being employed in the steam service, was engaged in navigating the ocean. Combining the rare qualities of coolness, caution and courage, with a large experience, he may justly be considered as one of the most safe and efficient steam navigators out of any port of the United States.

The "Massachusetts," we are gratified to learn, will be withdrawn from this line, and her place supplied early next spring by a boat now in process of construction, which is to be in every respect, equal to the "Bay State," in still more elegant and every way better than the total cost of building and furnishing the "Bay State" amounted to $175,000.

CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

MR. EDITOR—It is near the time of the assembling of the Democratic State Convention for the purpose of nominating candidates to be supported for Governor and Lieutenant Governor at the ensuing election, and as it is generally conceded that the Hon. Isaac Davis will decline a renomination, it is natural and desirable that the democracy should interchange opinions for the purpose of selecting a candidate which will bring out the strength of the party; and I will take the liberty to suggest, that in my opinion the Hon. B. F. HALLETT is the man in whom is combined all the requisites for that position. His past labors for the cause of democracy have been immense; in fact, without disparagement to others, it may in truth be said, no ten men of the party have done as much, the past ten years, to spread the great principles of democracy. His body and mind has daily, I might almost say hourly, been engaged in the cause. His capacities are alike unquestioned by friend and foe, and no man is so abused as he by the federal party, a fact which should endear him more strongly to the supporters of liberal and democratic principles. His moral character is above reproach. His nomination would be hailed with joy and pleasure by the great democratic party of the whole Union, a party which is destined again and again to sweep in triumph over our country, and to uphold and carry forward that great principle of progress which has taken such deep root in the affections of the people of this Union.

POVERTY. Start not at the labor doom of honest poverty. To it we are indebted for the discovery of a new world; it made Franklin a philosopher, Hogarth a painter, and Napoleon the conqueror of Europe. The mightiest minds that ever astonished the civilized world, were nursed in the vale of poverty; that was their incentive to act, their stimulus to glory and immortality. Pine not then, at your lot if you be poor and virtuous: a large fortune to a giddy youth is the most painful judgment an indulgent heaven can inflict upon man. The inordinate love of wealth, so fatally prevalent in modern times, when, with a great majority riches are a test of respectability, and cash a token of worth and virtue, a cloak to screen from crime—is worse than famine, more fatal than the fostering folds to the public pestilence. Mourn not, then, that you are poor—push your faculties into a holier sphere, and reap an abundant store of mental gain in the extended field of an enlightened mind.

O'CONNELL. A tipsy Orangeman in a Liverpool steamer, once undertook to harass the Liberator by a series of petty annoyances. O'Connell, after having borne with this for a while, turned his very expressive eye on the man, and said—"I begin now to remember something of you." "Yes," said the other, "I have given you cause to remember me, may-be—may-be I'll give you more, Mr. O'Connell, before I have done with you." "Yes, sure enough," said the orator, mildly and quietly. "I now recollect perfectly; you're the very man I got off from the Kilkenny assizes, when you were tried for horse-stealing—more blame to me." The tormenter was at once extinguished. It was all in vain that he offered explanations, and references of undoubted respectability—his character was fixed for that voyage.

BREAKFAST ON THE EUROPEAN PLAN. A lady up town advertises in a morning paper, says the New York Mirror, to "accommodate gentlemen with breakfast on the European plan." Our up-town inhabitants are very partial to doing things in the European fashion, but we doubt whether they would relish a breakfast on any of the European plans now in vogue. To a gentleman at all particular in his breakfasts, it would be of some moment to know what part of Europe the lady intends to imitate. In England they breakfast on toast and black tea; in Scotland nothing will serve for breakfast but oat meal porridge; it is not safe to say what they breakfast on in Ireland, just now, but we fear that many a family have to be content with the "chamillion's dish." In France we have often seen them breakfasting on a loaf of dry bread and a bottle of thin wine; in Spain a cup of chocolate and a lot of garlic suties for the better orders, while the Germans make a morning meal of sour bread and sour beer. Of the other parts of Europe we have no personal knowledge, but having breakfasted on many plans, we say commend us, after all, to the American plan. Basil Hall said it was worth crossing the Atlantic to eat an American breakfast, in which opinion we heartily concur, and would advise all ladies who wish to secure boarders not to think of giving breakfasts on any European plan whatever. But, if they will adopt the European plan, let them advertise the particular part of Europe which they mean to imitate. There must be considerable difference between the breakfasts of Dublin and St. Petersburg.

PEACH PICKLER. One of the most agreeable and delicious pickles ever tasted is made from ripe Clingstone Peaches. Take one gallon of good vinegar and add to it four pounds brown sugar; boil this for a few moments and skim off any skum that may rise; then take clingstone peaches that are fully ripe, rub them with a flannel cloth to remove the down upon them, and stick three or four cloves in each; put them into a glass or earthen vessel, and pour the liquor upon them boiling hot. Cover them up and let them stand in a cool place for a week or ten days, then pour the liquor and boil it as before; after which return it boiling to the peaches, which should be carefully covered up and stored away for future use.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 11, 1847.

JOHN A. GREEN, Editor.

THE WAR. We have little additional information in regard to affairs in Mexico. Major Lally's command had reached Jalapa with some loss. Gen. Scott was at Ayotla, within twenty miles of the capital on the 13th August, since which we have nothing definite in regard to his proceedings. The guerrillas between Vera Cruz and Jalapa were increasing in numbers and ferocity. Several skirmishes have taken place between the Mexican under Gen. Urrea and American scouting parties and trains, on the road between Monterey and Matamoros. The enemy seem to have gained courage from the delay of Gen. Taylor in moving forward, and their attacks are boldly planned. About thirty Americans have been killed in these skirmishes.

ORDINATION AT ROXBURY. Mr. W. R. Alger, recently of the Cambridge Divinity School, was ordained on Wednesday, as minister of the "Mount Pleasant Congregational Society," gathered a few months ago.

MADAME RESTELL. This infamous woman has been arrested in New York, and taken to the Tombs. Bail was demanded in the sum of $10,000, which was refused. Her counsel, Mr. Brady, took immediate steps to have her released on a habeas corpus.

CITY OF BOSTON. The amount of property assessed in the city of Boston for the year 1847, as per Assessors' books, is as follows: Real Estate, $97,764,500; Personal do, $64,555,900; total $162,320,400. The tax six dollars per one thousand dollars, is $974,102.40; Polls 27,003, at $1.50, $40,512; Making the whole tax $1,014,614.40. Increase over 1846—polls, $1034; property, $13,520,800.

GOOD BREAD. The committee who have in charge the arrangements for the exhibition at Faneuil and Quincy halls, this month, offer to the bakers of this state a premium of fifty dollars or a gold medal of this value, for the best specimen of bread offered for competition during the continuance of the exhibition—the decision to be made by a committee of judges to be selected for this purpose. They might have added another of like amount, to the baker that could produce the largest loaf for five cents of good family bread.

SLAVERY ABOLISHED. The King of Denmark has issued a decree abolishing slavery in his dominions, to take effect on the 28th July, 1850, without compensation to the owners. All persons born after the 28th July this year are declared free. He owns three of the West India Islands—St. Croix, St. Thomas, and St. John, containing about thirty-five thousand slaves.

ENGINE VISIT. The Amazon Engine Company of Weymouth and Braintree, which visited Plymouth last week, were received by the Hook and Ladder Company, and the Rapid Engine Company, No. 3, and escorted through the streets to the armory of the Standish Guards, where a collation had been prepared. After the collation, the Glee Club sang several songs, and short speeches and sentiments were offered by several of the company. After trying the qualities of the engines, the companies repaired to the Old Colony House, kept by Mr. Randall, where they partook of an excellent dinner. The fine engine of the Amazon Company was elegantly decorated, and the company appeared in an appropriate uniform, says the Plymouth Rock.

MONEY FOR THE WAR. The Secretary of the Treasury, since the first of January last, has sent upwards of twelve millions of dollars to New Orleans—an amount unprecedented since the government was organized.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. The receipts on this road for the week ending August 28, 1847, was $4309; for the same week in 1846, $2712; being an increase of $1597; for the week ending Sept. 4, 1847, $4279; for the same week in 1846, $2556; being an increase of $1623.

BUSINESS OF QUINCY. Arrived at Quincy Point, on Wednesday, the 8th inst., schr. Ontario, of Quincy, Capt. Prior, from a whaling voyage of about nine months, with two hundred and seventy barrels of Oil, valued at over $8000.

ENGINE MATTERS. We learn that a trial will take place between the Hydrant and Fountain Engines of Milton, this afternoon, commencing at two o'clock, near the Hydrant's house. The celebrated Tiger Engine Company of this town, have been invited to be present, and we are informed that they will attend with their engine, accompanied by a portion of White's Cornet Band of Boston. The parties will partake of a collation at the Railway House, now under the supervision of William Souther.

INDIANA. The Senate of Indiana is again a tie; this being the third occurrence of the kind within the last four years. In the House the Whig majority is from four to six.

MARINES FOR MEXICO. A body of some five hundred marines, recently enlisted, who are now at the Marine Barracks in New York, will shortly take their departure for Vera Cruz in a vessel chartered by the government. They are destined to join the Marine battalion, which is now engaged in land service in Mexico.

CHANGE OF HOURS. The time for the starting of cars from Plymouth, on the Old Colony Road, have been changed; see advertisement.

MEXICAN VISIT. We understand that the Mechanic Regiment, of Boston, under the command of Gen. Chaney, will visit this town on Monday next and dine at the Hancock House. White's Cornet Band will accompany them.

VEGETABLE CURIOSITIES. A Rochester, (N. Y.) editor has seen "a limb of an apple tree which had upon it within the space of seventeen inches, no less than sixty-five apples! They were placed upon the stick like kernels upon a corn cob." Also, a cucumber "three feet eleven inches and a fraction" in length. This, the editor thinks, "beats all!" He also saw a branch of a peach tree about two feet long, which bore sixty three peaches!

Nine hundred men are now employed at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, (N. Y.) five hundred on the Dry Dock, and four hundred in other departments.

The Diving Bell Boat succeeded, a short time since, in raising about twenty-five thousand dollars in specie from the wreck of the Tennessee, which was sunk near Stack Island, in the Mississippi, about twenty-four years ago.

The potato rot, says the Baltimore American, has made its appearance in the glades in Alleghany County, Maryland.

The number of immigrant passengers arrived at New York during Saturday and Sunday last, amounted to eight hundred and forty.

It is supposed that about thirty-seven or thirty-eight millions bushels of grain were sent from the United States to Great Britain from the 1st of September, 1846, to the early part of last month. This was worth, at a fair average, about forty-five millions of dollars.

The body of a man supposed to be an Irishman, which appeared to have lain there for several days, was found near the arsenal in Watertown recently. From a fracture in the skull and other marks of violence, it is thought that his death was occasioned by violence.

To cure scratches on a horse, wash the legs with warm soap suds, and then with beef brine. Twice will succeed.

A man was bitten by a shark at Chelsea last week. He had shot a bird which fell into the surf, and in attempting to get possession his arm was horribly lacerated.

Another planet was discovered by Mr. J. R. Hind, at Bishop's Observatory, London, on the 8th August, which has been named Isis.

Hon. Samuel Haven, for many years Judge of Probate in Norfolk County, died in Roxbury on Saturday last week.

According to the Norfolk Democrat the Selectmen of Canton are busy prosecuting the rum-sellers of that town.

Running away with another man's wife is now called "stealing female clothing," as decided at Pittsburg, Penn.

At the 4th of July dinner at Vera Cruz, the following toast was given: The war Debt—How will the American people be able to pay their Scott and settle their Taylor's bill?

Barrel making forms no inconsiderable item of the mechanical business of Oswego, (N. Y.). One establishment turns out from one thousand to fifteen hundred barrels weekly, and gives employment to about thirty five workmen.

A merchant, well known in New York, who came from England long ago, at the age of twenty years, leaving behind seven brothers and sisters, went home on a visit after an absence of fifty years, and in four hours after his arrival six of the brothers and sisters were around him with their greeting. One sister had died the year before.

The President of Central America has addressed a proclamation to the people of that republic, calling on them to assist Mexico in her war against the United States.

Mr. Samuel Whitcomb of Boston, has opened an agency in that city to supply academies and schools throughout the United States with male and female teachers of any desired qualifications.

A woman fired a pistol at a man last week, in St. Louis, and missing him, threw the pistol at him. The public debt of Ohio is $20,000,000.

The first Unitarian Society in Lawrence was organized on Monday evening last.

Col. Fremont, lady and suite arrived at St. Louis, 28th ult.

Nature is not changed whether the birth takes place in a palace or in a hovel. It is more desirable to have brains and a virtuous heart than to be "a gentleman by birth."

A body of eighty colored persons left Baltimore, recently, for the colony in Africa.

A man belonging to Lowell, eloped from that place, recently, with a married woman belonging to that city. He left behind him a wife and three children.

A brick building at the corner of Tremont and Broomfield streets, Boston, has been moved eleven or twelve feet, including the cellar walls, upon a temporary railway, by means of jack screws. The building was estimated to be two hundred tons in weight, but scarcely a jar was felt in the process of moving—not so much as the rolling of a barrel of flour upon the floor—and the contents of the grocery store, for which it was used, were not removed but the ordinary business continued all the while without interruption.

A gentleman in Columbia County, (N. Y.) in attempting to destroy a hornet's nest under the eaves of his barn by burning it, set fire to the building, which was destroyed together with the contents, valued at twelve or fifteen hundred dollars.

I admit it would have been a very good plan if I could get them settled in that way, but I would impress it on the minds of all those who owe me, by Note or Account, that I shall positively leave at the time stated in my advertisement, and would thank them not to leave their settling till the last day, as I shall be busy in making preparations to start.

I would also say I have a GOOD ASSORTMENT of things, made up and in price, that I will sell cheap before leaving for Cast, and nothing else. I am thankful to my old customers for flocking in as they do to get what they want before I go, and should be most happy to attend to their wants in my line, let me be where I may.

The stand I am leaving would be a good chance for a young man just starting in business. He would find some first rate customers in this vicinity, and would do well to consult me before I leave.

Health! Health!! DR. WOOD'S SARSAPARILLA AND WILD CHERRY BITTERS.

THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPARILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver—strengthens the Nerves, and at once secures

HEALTH AND VIGOR to the whole system. In all cases of JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, LOSS OF APPETITE, HABITUAL COSTIVENESS, SCROFULA, HEADACHE, LANGUOR, and that

DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS, which is so common a complaint in the SPRING AND SUMMER

season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous of its peculiar virtues.

For further particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC. Be particular and ask for Doct. Wood's Sarsaparilla Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters," pressed on the glass, and that each label on the bottle is signed by the proprietor, E. Thornton, Jr., New Bedford.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.

AGENTS. Quincy, Messrs. CLAPP & RICHARDS; Dorchester, J. Marshall, Howland & Parker; Milton, M. D. Plumer; and by all respectable dealers in the United States.

Also—The above are agents for Dr. Wood's Compound Balsam of Boneset and Vegetable Family Pills.

POETRY.

TO MY WIFE THAT IS TO BE.

O fair unknown! we have not met—
We never have seen each other;
Nor in this heart hath love been yet,
Save that of son and brother:
But close though these affections twine,
There's one that twines nearest;
One that will knit my heart to thine,
Of all dear things the dearest!

I know I cannot love too well
Those kind ones now around me;
To those true friends I cannot tell
How many ties have bound me:
Yet oft when vacant seems this breast,
A consciousness will thrill it,
That there is room still unpossessed,
And your sweet self should fill it!

I miss thy smile of quiet mirth,
When other friends are merry;
But more I miss thee from my hearth,
When and where thou art so airy,
From sympathy to borrow
That charm which heightens every joy,
And lightens every sorrow.

Should sadness rule my heart's deep chords,
Or wrongs that wildly stir it,
How strong shall be thy gentle words
To soothe the wounded spirit!
And yet to hush thine own alarms
Will be employment dearer;
The more they trouble thee, my arms
Shall fold thee, love, the nearer.

How wilt thou, dearest! win my view?
With form for love's entwining?
And brightly dark, or deeply blue,
Thine eyes, of tender shining?
Wilt thou be fair? Wilt midnight be,
Or sunshine, on thy tresses?
Thy voice of witching melody,
And lips that woo caresses?

But ah! I care not for the hue
Wherewith thine eyes shall greet me,
If but the soul that trembles through,
Sincerely, warmly meet me!
A noble mind within the brow,
Who heeds what looks unweath' it?
The bosom may forget its snow,
When pure the heart beneath it!

But vain are all these imaginings!
My phantom spouse soon perishes;
And fades before "the truth of things"
Each picture fancy cherishes:
How dull our life-substantial seems,
Compared with life-ideal!
Tis with a sadness from its dreams
We waken to the real.

Farewell then, love! already dear;
It will perchance be pleasant
To read in some far distant year
The vows I write at present;
Fair be the world before thy feet,
Serene the sky above thee,
And when we (if we ever) meet,
How dearly will I love thee!

TO THE RAIN AFTER A DROUGHT.

Beautiful rain thou art come at last,
Gladdening the earth and the souls of men;
The burning days are gone and past,
And Heaven hath opened its heart again.
We were weary of gazing on changeless skies,
On withered flowers, and the parched-up plain;
But the clouds are cooling our aching eyes,
And we bid thee welcome, oh, beautiful rain!

The dust lay thick on the loaded leaves,
The roses that opened too soon fell fast;
The pleasant screen the woodbine weaves
Was stunted and shrunk in the Eastern blast;
And there was not a mist the hope to beguile
With a promise of rain in the cloudless air,
And the heavens looked down with a cruel smile,
Like the look of a beauty on love's despair.

But welcome, welcome, beautiful rain!
We trust that the days of drought are o'er;
An angel of mercy hath pitied our pain,
And we feel that the heavens can weep once more.
Thou art life to the buds on their slender stems,
And life to the poet's heart and brain;
Oh! gift of mercy—shower of gems!
Welcome, twice welcome, beautiful rain!

ANECDOTES.

"Supposing," said a preacher at the Isle of Shoals to his congregation, "supposing my brethren any of you should be taken short in the bay in a north-west storm, your hearts trembling with fear, and nothing but death before you, whether would your thoughts turn to what would you do? 'What would I do?' replied one of the hardy sons of Neptune, 'why I should up with the foremast and scud away for Squam.'"

A son of Erin, just arrived in this land of plenty, being in want, ventured to solicit a little aid from a person whose external appearance seemed to indicate that he could easily afford it. He was however, rudely repulsed with a "Go to h—ll!" Pat looked at him in such a way as to fix his attention and meekly replied, "God bless your honor for your civility; you're the first gentleman that's invited me to his father's house since I came to the land."

An unmarried lady, on the wintry side of fifty, hearing of the marriage of a young lady, her friend, observed with a deep and sentimental sigh, "Well, I suppose it's what we all must come to."

A poor widow woman was relating to a neighbor, how fond her husband was of having a good fire; how busy he would make himself in fixing it so that it would burn;— "Ah, poor dear man," she continued, "I hope he's gone where they keep good fires."

Has the cookery book got pictures? asked a Miss of the bookseller. "No, none." "Why," she exclaimed, "what is the use of telling us how to make a good dinner, if they give us no plates?"

Champooing and Hair-Cutting.

WILLIAM E. AMBUSH,

WOULD respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of Quincy, that he has constantly on hand a new and unexcelled

CHAMPOOING MIXTURE,

far superior to the late famed, Boyle Hyperion, which when scientifically applied, renders the Hair soft and pliable and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant to and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores the scalp to a healthy condition, which must be accomplished before the hair will make its appearance. It is the great desideratum of the age.

Ladies wishing this application will be waited upon at their residences, by W. E. Ambush, by leaving orders at his Emporium, Southern Building, Quincy.

N. B. CHILDREN'S hair cut at their residences at half price.

MISCELLANY.

CANT GET ALONG.
"I don't know how it is," said Felix Hall,
"that some people can get along so completely on a thousand dollars a year. We can't do it."
"I'm sure I try to economize all I can," returned Mrs. Hall, sadly, for she felt that her husband's remark was more than half intended as a reflection upon her. "I only keep one girl, and do all my own sewing."
"I don't blame you, Harriet," said Mr. Hall.
"I am sure I don't. I know you work hard—too hard, I often wish it was easier for you.
But what can I do? My salary is only a thousand dollars. And yet, that is all Hawkins receives, and he seems to get along so smoothly, and even lays by, he tell me, a hundred dollars a year."
"I don't know how they do it," replied Mrs.
Hall. "I know that Mrs. Hawkins doesn't work half as hard as I do, though her house always looks in better order than mine. They have better furniture than we have, and I am sure Mrs. Hawkins' clothes cost double what mine do. I don't think it my fault."
"I don't say it is, Harriet. I believe you do your part the best you know how. But something must be wrong, somewhere. Other people can live very well, on a thousand dollars, while we are always owing bills to this, that,
and the other one. Here is the quarter's bill for groceries amounting to sixty-five dollars, and I owe seventy to my tailor besides. Then there is an unsettled bill at the provision store of fifteen or twenty dollars, besides the rent, bread bill, the milk bill, and I don't know how many other bills."
"I wish these bills were not allowed to run on," remarked Mrs. Hall. "I'm sure it would be a great deal better to pay for every thing as we go along."
"So it would, but we haven't the money to do it with. It takes nearly my whole quarter's salary, regularly, to pay off the bills of three months; and then there is no way to live but to go on trust for almost every thing for three months longer. It's a bad system, I know, but there appears to be no help for it just now."
And in the full conviction that there was no help for Mr. Hall drew his quarter's salary of two hundred and fifty dollars, and went and paid off bills and borrowed money—debts acmounting to two hundred dollars. Then giving his wife ten dollars to get little things with,
he started, under a feeling of discouragement, on a new quarter, with but forty dollars in his pocket. Although he had paid two hundred dollars of debts, there was almost an equal amount still hanging over him.
Mr. Hall was a clerk in a bank, where he was engaged, regularly, from eight o'clock in the morning, until about four o'clock and sometimes five in the afternoon. He lived in a house for which he paid two hundred dollars a year, and paid his tailor from a hundred to a hundred and fifty dollars annually. He carried a gold lever watch that had cost eighty dollars, and wore a chain for which he had paid forty. He also indulged in one or two expensive breast-pins, and before his family had become as large as at present, had spent a good deal of money on jewelry for his wife.
But the dropping in of one child after another, until the number grew to five, interfered with these little indulgences very materially, and called so loudly for self-denial that the appeal could not be entirely disregarded. But the self-denial was practised more by Mrs. Hall—much more than by her husband. She denied herself almost every thing, even sufficient rest for her over-wearied body, while he went on,
in most things, about the same as he did when he and his wife paid eight dollars a week for their boarding, and had just the same income they had at present. But let us look a little more closely into his way of doing things, and see if it is not possible to discover what appeared so great a mystery to him.

On the day after Mr. Hall had spoken to his wife so dispondingly, he spent for tobacco and cigars, eighteen and three-quarter cents; for a luncheon and a glass of wine-sangaree, twelve and a half cents more; and in toys for the children, fifty cents. He also bought a bottle of wine, for which he paid seventy-five cents.
These items amounted to one dollar and fifty-six and a quarter cents, in a single day. On the next day he paid his barber's bill for three months, which was three dollars and a half;
and his boot black's bill, which was two dollars. Luncheon, and some cakes and candies for the children, cost twenty-five cents; and a very pretty paper folder that struck his fancy the trifle of twenty-five cents more. Here were six dollars for the second day, nearly all of which might have been saved if he had shaved himself and brushed his own boots, to do either of which would have been far more honorable, genteel and praiseworthy, than to indulge in the luxury of a barber and a boot black, and let his wife work herself half to death. On the third day he hired a chaise and rode out with his family after he had left the bank in the afternoon. The chaise hire was a dollar and a half, and toll-gates and refreshments for all, fifty cents more. Already, in luncheon, cigars, and one or two little matters, a half dollar had been expended by Mr. Hall in the fore part of the day, so that, on the third day of the week, three dollars were expended unnecessarily. During this time, for marketing, shoes for one or two of the children, and sundry expenses incident to a large family, six dollars melted from the hands of Mrs. Hall.
On the evening after the ride, Mr. Hall took out his pocket-book and counted his money.
To his utter astonishment, and almost dismay,
he found that he had only about twenty-three dollars and a half. He counted it over again, but couldn't make it a cent more. Three days before he had forty dollars. Where could sixteen and a half have flown to. He had never spent it; that to his mind was perfectly clear.
"Have you taken any money out of my pocket-book?" he asked of his wife.
"No, certainly not," she replied; "what should I take money out of your pocket for? You gave me ten dollars, and I have eight and a half of it left."
"Well, something's gone, with about ten dollars. I have but twenty-three and a half, and I had forty two or three days ago. Or course,
I haven't spent sixteen dollars and over in three days."
"Certainly not. But where can it have gone?
Have you counted right?"
"Oh, yes!" And Mr. Hall went over the money again to see if there was no mistake.
"Is too true. I have but twenty-three dollars and a half."
"Are you sure you haven't spent it for something?" suggested Mrs. Hall. "How else could it have gone?"
"Some one must have given me wrong change. I gave the carriage-driver a five dollar bill. Let me see. What change did he give me? It was a note, and I took it for three dollars."
Mr. Hall ran over the money in his pocketbook.
"Yes, here's a three dollar bill. He gave me the right change."
Mr. Hall's mind was in great perplexity.
His income was small enough compared to his expenses and, therefore, to lose eight or ten dollars, he felt to be no trifling matter.
"Suppose you count up what you have spent?" suggested Mrs. Hall, "and see how much it is exactly. Perhaps you have laid out more than you think for."
"I've not laid out half of sixteen dollars.
But we will count up."
In the first place the spendings for marketing, shoes and the sundries that went into the family were recalled with some effort, and the sum of six dollars finally made out.
"That's only six dollars you see," remarked
Mr. Hall, "leaving a deficiency of ten dollars and a half."
"But you forget the carriage hire."
"True. That was two dollars—making eight dollars."
"And you know you bought milk and cakes for the children, and paid the toll-keeper."
"So I did. Let me see how much I paid exactly. Just fifty cents to a fraction."
"Then we have eight dollars and fifty cents accounted for, which leaves eight dollars deficient. Think, now, what you spent for yourself, yesterday and the day before."
"Not eight dollars nor eighty cents. But let me see. There is my luncheon every day, for three days—just thirty-seven and a half cents. True! And there is the bottle of wine; I'd forgotten that—seventy-five cents.
Yes, and now I remember I paid half a dollar for the toys I bought the children."
"So much?"
"Yes. I had to buy for all of them, and even cheap toys, where you have to get so many of them, count up. But, we must indulge the children, sometimes. I have spent, also, for cigars and tobacco, the trifle of thirty-one cents; and for a paper folder a quarter.
And in cakes and candies for the children I may have spent, maybe, a shilling. Let me see how much all these amount to."
The items were soon summed up, and the product was two dollars and nearly a half.
"That, you see, reduces it to five dollars and a half," remarked Mrs. Hall.
"So it does," remarked the husband. "How many does slip through one's fingers! I wouldn't have believed it. But where is the balance? Where are the five dollars and a half? Even that is too much to lose. Let me see."

Mr. Hall thought for a moment, and then his thumb and finger gave a sharp crack, and he exclaimed—
"Yes! That's it! I paid my barber's and boot black's bills, which added together make just five dollars and a half. Well, I declare!
It is astonishing! Would any one have thought it? How money does go! I wish I could never see a dollar. Money melts out of my pockets like snow before the fire. I wish, in my heart, you would take it and see if you can make it go any farther than I do."
Mrs. Hall did not reply for some moments, and then she said—
"I will do so, provided you let me manage things in my own way for a year; and, also, provided that you will be contented with five dollars a quarter for your tobacco and segars;
also provided, that you will shave yourself, and black your own boots, or let me do it for you;
and also take your luncheon from home instead of buying it; by all of which about sixty dollars a year can be saved."
"Sixty dollars! It don't cost half of that sum, Harriet."
"Count it up for yourself, Felix. Why a shilling a day for lunch amounts to thirty-seven dollars a year."
"So it does! How little things do count up. Well, wife, if you'll take hold in good earnest, I'll do just as you say for one year, and if you bring down the cost of living as much as a hundred dollars, I will let you manage money matters ever after."
"If I don't bring it down three hundred dollars, I am mistaken," replied Mrs. Hall, in a confident tone; for light had suddenly broken into her mind. The account which her husband had given of three days' dispensation of money, under his system, showed her where the leak was.
"Here are twenty dollars to begin with, all that I have left from my last quarter's salary, after keeping three dollars and a half for my tobacco and segars during the next three months. When it is gone, I will borrow as much as you want to carry you on until I can draw more money."
At the rate Hall was going on, it would have taken him over a week to have entirely emptied his pocket-book, but it was a month before his wife asked for a fresh supply.
One of Mrs. Hall's first acts was to buy blackening and brushes, and discharge the boot-black. For a week, she brushed her husband's boots, every morning, before he discovered that the boot-black had been dismissed; then he accidentally caught her in the act of brightening his leather understandings, very greatly to his surprise. After that, he shaved himself and blacked his own boots without feeling himself in the least degraded thereby.
Five dollars a quarter for tobacco, cigars, and other little nick-nackeries, Mr. Hall found to be rather a limited income; but, as he had agreed to meet his extra expenses with this sum, he felt some pride in doing so. In order to accomplish it, however, he had to abate many glasses of wine and mineral water, and limited himself to a certain number of cigars daily.
At the end of the first quarter, Mrs. Hall received one hundred and seventy dollars from her husband. Eighty dollars she had received before, and as this had been borrowed by her husband, he kept that amount from his three months' salary in order to pay it back.
By extra exertions, and a system of almost pinching economy, Mrs. Hall managed, during the second quarter, to pay the rent, and a few small bills, and get through without asking her husband for a cent more; so that when the salary came due again, she had a much larger sum to start with. From that time not even a baker's bill was permitted to accumulate, and even her milk bill was settled once a week.
Mr. Hall sometimes complained a little at his wife's "short commons," as he called them, and at being cut off from all pleasure-taking,
but she consoled him by telling him, good hu-moredly, to wait awhile, that there was better time coming.
The year for which Mrs. Hall had undertaken to manage affairs at last came to a close, and one evening she said to her husband—
"Here are my accounts for the year. They are not very nicely kept, but I presume you will find all correct."
"Accounts! Have you kept accounts?" asked Mr. Hall.
"Oh, yes; to a penny."
"Well, how stands the balance?"
"Something in our favor, I think. There isn't a cent owed anywhere, except the balance of your tailor's bill, and you know I had over a hundred and fifty dollars to pay when I took the management of things."
"Possible!" said Mr. Hall, opening his eyes.
"Yes; and, what is better, I have about fifty dollars on hand."
"Incredible!"
"It is true."
"But how in the world did you do it?"
"Not by starving you all, you will admit."
"No, certainly,—we have had plenty of good, wholesome food to eat; though I must own to thinking sometimes, that you indulge us in little seasonable delicacies rather sparingly."
"It had to be done, or else I couldn't have got along on the reduced income of this year

—reduced by the necessity of paying off so many little old bills."
"But how have you done it, Harriet? You haven't given me the affirmative yet."
"By following this simple rule, Felix, never to buy anything that was not wanted, and being very careful when a want presented itself, to see whether it was real or imaginary. Hereafter I hope you will follow the same rule, and if you do, you can keep the family on as little as I have done."
"Thank you, Harriet!" returned Mr. Hall, smiling; "but I believe I won't supersede your administration of affairs; although, I shall insist upon one thing; and it is that you get a stout girl of thirteen or fourteen to assist you.
You are working too hard."
"Wait until next year."
"No. It must be done now. We can afford it. But, if you think we can't, I will give up my tobacco and cigars in order to help meet the extra expense."
"Oh, no. I won't ask that of you," said Mrs.
Hall.
"Then you must get the extra help."
"Very well, if you insist so strongly upon it
I suppose it must be done."
And it was done. Three or four years have passed. Mr. Hall is quite as well dressed as before, and his wife much better. Several articles of new furniture have been added to their house. Mrs. Hall keeps a cook and a girl to help about, and has a more cheerful and less broken-down appearance. She doesn't work over half as hard as she did. And to all this the fact, that there is not a cent owed anywhere, and from one to two hundred dollars always lying by, and the lender will agree with Mr. Hall, who has quite changed his mind on the subject, that a man can get along on a thousand dollars; that is, if he have a right kind of a wife, and is willing to let her manage things with prudence and economy.
THE BROKEN-HEARTED WOMAN.
How many bright eyes grow dim, how many soft cheeks grow pale, how many lovely forms fade away in the tomb, and none can tell the cause that blighted their loveliness. As the dove will clasp its wings to its side, and cover and conceal the arrow that is preying on its vitals, so it is the nature of woman to hide from the world the pangs of wounded affection.
The love of a delicate female is always shy and silent. Even when fortunate, she scarcely breathes it to herself; but when otherwise, she buries it in the recesses of her bosom, and lets it cower and brood among the ruins of her peace. With her the desire of the heart has failed.
The great charm of existence is at an end.
She neglects all the cheerful exercises that gladden the spirits, quicken the pulse, and send the tide of life in healthful currents through her veins. Her rest is broken; the sweet refreshment of sleep is poisoned by melancholy dreams; "dry sorrow drinks her blood," until her enfeebled frame sinks under the last external assault.
Look for her after a little while, and you find friendship weeping over her untimely grave, and wonder that one who lately glowed with all the radiance of health and beauty, should now be brought down to "darkness and the tomb." You will be told of some wintry chill, some slight indisposition, that laid her low;
but no one knows the mental malady that previously snapped her strength, and made her too easy a prey to the spoiler.
She is like some tender tree, the pride and beauty of the grove; graceful in its form, bright in its foliage, but with the worm preying at its core. We find it suddenly withering, where it should be most fresh and luxurious. We see it drooping its branches to the earth, and shedding leaf by leaf; until, wasted and perished away, it falls even in the stillness of the forest, and, as we muse over the beautiful ruin, we strive in vain to recollect the blast or thunderbolt that could have smitten it with decay.
I have seen many instances of woman running to waste and self-neglect, and disappearing gradually from the earth, almost as if they had been exhaled to heaven, and have repeatedly fancied that I could trace their deaths through the various declensions of consumption, colds, debility, or melancholy, until I reached the first system of disappointed love.
—Irving.
WEALTH OF HARVARD COLLEGE. The bequests made to this institution are enormous.
In the annual report of the overseers not less than ninety bequests, which average more than $20,000 each! The available funds of the College given for specific purposes, the interest of which only is used, exceed six hundred thousand dollars! The Law Department has funds exceeding $40,000, and the Theological School more than $80,000! This opulence is the result of individual liberality of citizens of Massachusetts.
HARD BISCUIT. One quart of flour, and half a teaspoonful of salt; four great spoonfuls of butter rubbed into two-thirds of the flour; wet it with milk till a dough; roll it out again and again, sprinkling on the reserved flour till all is used; cut into round cakes, and bake in a quick oven on buttered tins.
TO CURE WARTS. Dissolve as much common washing soda as the water will take up;
wash the warts with this for a minute or two,
and let them dry without wiping. This repeated, will gradually destroy the ugliest wart.

SLAVERY. Slavery is the worst wrong that can be committed upon man save the taking of his life, and in the abstract, death even is preferable to it. It is that kind of an injury, for which there can be no reparation, a wrong for which there is no restitution.
It is true that the enslaver may deliver up to the bondman that which he had unrighteously withheld from him, his right to himself, yet this does not even though he pay him ten fold as a recompense, justify him for the injury received at the hand of the oppressor. Nor does this injury stop here—it extends even to the most distant posterity of the enslaved, and only ceases, as its traces are lost in the progress.
It may also be set down as the means of all other evils, which have contributed to the curse of the human family. It is an advantage taken by the strong over the weak—of the more intelligent over the ignorant. A betrayal of the trust and confidence of the simple hearted and unsuspecting, by the dishonest and the treacherous—a daring invasion, a foul usurpation of the poor by the more favored and wealthy among men.
It degrades the lofty sentiments of the soul,
the miserable necessity of craving pity. It bows down the upright and unflinching spirits, to the humble attitude of a creature of beggarly favors. It at once transforms humanity, to a thing inferior to its kind. There is neither an attribute in Heaven nor Hell, to justify such wrongs as these.—The Mystery.
COURTING. A well known lawyer did his courtship off hand. He had a good practice and a high reputation, as well for what his noddle contained of Coke and Blackstone, as for being a very eccentric chap in all his ways, sayings and doings. His eccentricity got him into the notion that it wasn't "meet that woman should be alone," and so of a delightful summer's eve, when the roses smiled and the cowslips laughed, Sunday evening, too, mind ye, gentle reader, that—
"Delightful hour of witching love," he caught up his hat and was seen ascending the steps of the cottage beside the hill where rippled
"A lovely damsel, bright and fair."
She opened the door, and he politely asked,
"Is the Chief Justice within?" "No sir," said
the pretty one, "but will be shortly." "Ah!
it's no matter," said the counsellor, as he was curtised within the door—"I did not come to see the father; my client is interested only in the testimony of the daughter. My client, madam, owns the mansion you see from the window, and the pitch of the suit is to ascertain if you would have any objection to become his mistress. I'll call next Sabbath evening for your answer." "Why, sir, it won't be necessary to suspend the suit. I think your client's case is founded in justice, and I am sure he will win his point without any special pleading;
but as my father has been twenty one years upon the bench, it would be but decorous to see if his opinion does not confirm mine."
"Certainly, madam," said the lawyer, as the father entered the apartment. It is needless to say that the full court did not reverse the decision—and the happy pair signed the bond, and went into possession in four weeks from that night.
A YANKEE GAME COCK. A Spanish bark, on her voyage from New York to Havana, was boarded by a young eagle. Where he came from no one could imagine, unless he had escaped from some vessel and lost himself on the ocean. He seemed completely fagged out, but was taken down, fed and petted, and soon became a great favorite with the sailors. Havana, it is well known, is a great place for cock fighting, and one of the sailors, a long legged Yankee, proposed that they should go into a little speculation with their eagle. This was agreed to, and the bird was accordingly furnished with a beautiful red flannel comb and gills, a neat coat of paint, a pair of gaffs, and he was metamorphosed into a respectable looking fighting cock. The intelligence that a Yankee game cock was to be seen on board the bark was soon spread through the city, and crowds came down to see him. He was kept in the forecastle, and a few at a time admitted at a small charge. But this was not enough—they wanted to see him fight—but none were bold enough to risk a favorite cock against such a formidable looking customer. A match was finally made up by giving large odds, and the pit was crowded almost to suffocation. Every thing having been prepared, the cocks were scientifically put into the ring, but alas! for those who had taken so much trouble, the fight was of the shortest kind. The eagle not having been fed for a couple of days, was of course hungry, and not knowing the use of his spurs, nor understanding in the least what was expected of him, eschewed all fancy tricks, dashed in eagle fashion upon his adversary, struck him with his beak, and seizing a leg in each of his talons, tore him completely open, and commenced eating him with extreme gusto! The astonishment of the Spaniards may possibly be imagined, but cannot be described—there was some most horrible swearing in Spanish, with a slight sprinkling of broken English, and all d—d Yankee game cocks were unanimously consigned to a place of the warmest description.
Injuries may be atoned for and forgiven, but insults admit of no compensation; they degrade the mind in its own esteem, and force it to recover its level by revenge.

SET OUT STRAWBERRIES. This month is the best time to set out strawberries preparatory for a good crop next year. It would be well for those who can do it as well as not, to have a small bed of good kinds. If properly managed, nothing is more easily raised, and they are the earliest fruit of the summer, coming at a time when most of the last year's fruits that have been preserved during the winter are eaten and gone, they are always acceptable. A gentleman who raises the finest kinds, pursues the following plan: In August he sets out a row of young roots, about six inches apart, cultivating them well until fall. During the next summer, and after the fruit had been gathered, he would direct the runners so that they would take root in a space about a foot from the parents. In August again he would clip off all but what he wanted to save in the new row, and dig the rest up, carefully cultivating what he had left standing. These would bear abundantly the ensuing year, after which he would train their runners back to the space from which they originally started, for a new crop. In this way, in a plot of land two feet wide, and about a rod long, he used to obtain, year after year, a good crop of this excellent and wholesome fruit. A moist soil is best for this plant, and if your soil is dry, perhaps you can contrive some way to irrigate it occasionally. In a rich, deep, somewhat moist soil, they strike their roots down strong much farther than many people are aware.

SPITZBERGEN ISLANDS. These islands constitute the most northerly land discovered. Willoughby saw them first in 1533, and the Dutch visited them in 1595. The interior of them has been supposed to be uninhabitable—deserted as they are of almost every thing of the vegetable or animal kind. A St. Petersburg letter says that fifteen men of Archangel, all accustomed to cold and good hunters, proceeded in the month of May, last year, to Barents, one of the most northern of the Spitzbergen Islands, and fixed themselves in the centre of the islands. Six of them fell victims to the extreme severity of the climate, but the others have returned to Archangel, bringing with them a number of new vegetable productions and animals, particularly fish. Of all the privations which these men had to undergo at Spitzberg, that which they felt the most was the total absence of the light of the sun during five consecutive months.

PROGRESS OF ASTRONOMICAL DISCOVERY. In 1600 seven bodies were known to belong to our system—the Sun and Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn. In 1700 there had been added eleven, namely, four satellites of Jupiter, five of Saturn, the Earth itself, which was now fully recognized as a planet, and Halley's Comet, though the prediction had not been verified. In 1800 there had been added nine, namely, Uranus with six satellites, with two satellites of Saturn. William Herschel left the solar system half as large again in number of bodies as he found it. Since 1800 there have been added nine, namely, Venus, the one yet unchristened, (Hanccke's,) Astraea, Juno, Ceres, Pallas, Neptune, Encke's Comet, and Biele's Comet. If M. Lassell should be right in what he suspects to be a satellite of Neptune, for nine we must read ten.—Boston Transcript.

ROMANCE IN REAL LIFE. About twelve years ago, a young gentleman residing in an interior county of Kentucky, became smitten—as falling in love is usually termed—with the daughter of a wealthy merchant. His love was requited by the fair and lovely girl, but the young man being poor, without influence, and having nothing to depend upon but his own industry and resolution, his suit was looked upon with a favorable eye by the wealthy father. In a moment of chagrin and disappointment, the proud youth left the home of his childhood—and twelve years rolled by; during which time no word was heard of him. He went to the West Indies a penniless adventurer, and a short time since returned home, the possessor of an immense fortune. In the meantime, the father of his beloved had failed, and died a poor broken-hearted man, leaving his wife and daughter dependent upon the cold charities of the world. Yet in poverty as well as in wealth the two lovers had remained faithful to their youthful vows, and two days after the return of the wanderer, he led his long cherished idol to the Hymeneal altar. How beautiful, in a cold, heartless world like this, is the fidelity of two loving hearts.

SADNESS. There is a mysterious feeling that frequently passes like a cloud over the spirit. It comes upon the soul in the busy bustle of life, in the social circle, in the calm and silent retreat of solitude. Its power is alike supreme over the weak and iron-hearted. At one time it is caused by the flitting of a single thought across the mind. Again a sound will come booming across the ocean of memory, gloomy and solemn as the death knell, overshadowing all the bright hopes and sunny feelings of the heart. Who can describe it, and yet who has not felt its bewildering influence? Still, it is a delicious sort of sorrow; and, like a cloud dimming the sunshine of the river, although casting a momentary shade of gloom, it enhances the beauty of returning brightness.

BUBBLES. Iceland has probably been the scene in past ages, of the most tremendous convulsions of nature. In proof of this, Henderson mentions that in many parts of the Island large bubbles still remain, which formed on the enormous streams of molten lava that flowed from Hecla. Some of these lava bubbles which he saw, were fifteen feet high and were occupied as huts or dwellings by the natives, entrances being made by breaking through the crust.

FISHES TAMED BY A CHILD. In a quarter of the town of Hingham, known as Rocky Nook, there is a pond, where a little girl not six years old, who resides near the bank, has tamed the fishes to a remarkable degree. She began by throwing crumbs into the water. Gradually the fishes learned to distinguish her footsteps, and darted to the edge whenever she approached; and now they will actually feed out of her hand, and allow her to touch their scaly sides. A veteran turtle is among her regular pensioners. The control of Van Amburg over his wild beasts is not more surprising than that which this little girl has obtained over her finny playmates. Visitors have been attracted from a distance of several miles to witness the spectacle she exhibits. The fishes will have nothing to do with any one but their tried friend. They will trust no one else, let him come with provender ever so tempting. Even fishes are not so cold blooded but they will recognize the law of kindness, and yield to its all-embracing power.

FALL TRANSPLANTING. The experience of many able orchardists and terraculturists would seem to indicate the fall as a much more favorable season for transplanting than the spring. In cases, however, where the subsoil is hard and impervious to water, large and deep holes should be excavated, and the bottom filled in with small stones—the rest with loam, the finer and fresher the better. A little lime mixed with the loam, will be found very beneficial.

THE SPANISH REAL. The Spanish Real in Massachusetts, is called a "ninetycent," in New York a "shilling," in Maryland a "levy," in South Carolina a "seven penny," and in Louisiana a "bit"; the half Real in Massachusetts "fourpence-half penny," in New York "sixpence," in Maryland a "flip," and in Louisiana a "picayune."

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 18, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

THE UNION MAGAZINE. This periodical, published by Israel Post, New York, is out for September, and is emphatically the best work of its class in America. Its external appearance is in exquisite taste. The paper, in especial, is infinitely superior to that used by its competitors, and permits the illustration of the text by well-printed woodcuts—a most capital and effective feature. Here are, moreover, a mezzotint, a fine line engraving, a beautifully colored fashion-plate, and two pages of original music. The typography is excellent; the headings of the various articles are particularly neat—and the only objection we have to make is to the black type of the words "Union Magazine" on the opening page. The letters here have a massive air, quite out of keeping with the lightness of the general typography. The contributions in the present number are by Mrs. Kirkland (the editor), Mrs. S. H. Whitman, Miss Sedgewick, Miss Gould, Miss Sloman, Grace Greenwood, Miss L. O. Hunter, Mrs. E. Little, Elizabeth Emmet, Herbert, J. H. Bryant, and several with initials or pseudonyms. There is not an indifferent paper in the number—but we cannot refrain from expressing our admiration, in especial, of some truly beautiful stanzas, by Mrs. Whitman, of Providence, entitled "The Golden Ball."

IMPORTANT FROM MEXICO. Despatches have been received at Washington from Gen. Scott, by which accounts of a great battle fought on the 20th August, are confirmed. The American forces, seven thousand in number, met the Mexicans, thirty two thousand strong, at Churubusco, four miles from the capital. The Mexicans had an immense battery of heavy guns. After a fight of two hours duration, the Americans carried every thing at the point of the bayonet. The American loss was less than a thousand, but the loss of the Mexicans was immense. An armistice had been agreed to and five commissioners had been appointed on the part of Mexico to treat for peace. Two meetings had been held.

The American loss falls most heavy on the South Carolina and New York volunteers: the 6th Infantry, Smith's Battalion, Magruder's and Taylor's Batteries.

Later accounts represent the American loss at about eleven hundred. Gen. Scott was wounded below the knee by a grape shot, but not seriously. Quite a number of deserters were taken, and the whole number of prisoners is said to be at least three thousand. There are a great many conjectures and rumors about the prospect of peace, settlement of the boundary line, etc, etc, none of which can be relied upon.

THE MECHANICS' FAIR. This exhibition, held triennially under the direction of the "Massachusetts Charitable Mechanics' Association," commenced in Faneuil and Quincy Halls, in Boston, on the 15th inst. The managers offer a premium of one hundred and fifty dollars to the inventor or proprietor of such machine or implement not before exhibited, or such scientific discovery as shall be deemed most important to mankind; also, one hundred dollars for the second best, and fifty dollars for the third best—it being understood that these machines are to form part of the present exhibition. Medals of gold and silver, or honorable diplomas, will be awarded, as the articles exhibited may deserve. In the distribution of prizes, the Managers promise the strictest impartiality.

A new mode of dispersing mobs has been discovered out west, which is said to supersede the necessity of military force. It is, to pass around a contribution box.

MISSIONARY MEETING. The American Board of Foreign Missions assembled at Buffalo on the 8th inst.—the Hon. Theodore Frelinghuysen in the chair. Under the care of the Board are now twenty-six missions, embracing ninety-six stations. The whole number of persons depending on the Board mainly for their support, is five hundred and twenty-six. This is twenty-two more than were reported last year. Of printing establishments there are eleven; also six type and stereotype foundries. At these presses are fonts of type and other requisites for printing in nearly thirty languages besides the English. The Society was reported to be embarrassed by the great diminution of contributions. The expenses could be brought down to $280,000, but if no greater amount than heretofore is subscribed the debt will be $100,000.

COAL. The quantity of coal forwarded from the coal region in the vicinity of Pottsville, already exceeds one million of tons, and the region will furnish, according to the Miner's Journal, 1,500,000 tons the present year, provided the market will require that quantity, which will be an increase of about 250,000 tons over the shipments of last year. For the week ending the 11th ult. 13,013 tons of hard coal were received in Boston, nearly all from Philadelphia. During the same period 2,340 chaldrons of soft coal arrived from Pictou, (N. S.) and Sydney, (C. B.).

SICKNESS IN NEW ORLEANS. The yellow fever still continues to increase in New Orleans, and universal alarm and distress pervades the inhabitants. All have left, or are preparing to leave, except such as wait of means or imperious engagements compel to remain in the city. The city wears a melancholy and desolate aspect. It being on the route to and from the army, makes the matter still worse—persons who otherwise would escape are exposed to dangers which their unacclimated habits render more imminent. From present appearances, the disease threatens to be more than usually virulent in its character and longer in its duration.

STEAMBOAT ACCIDENT. The steamboat Mayflower, which runs between Boston and Hingham, met with a slight accident in Boston harbor one day this week. The collar of her safety valve gave way, and she was consequently incapacitated from proceeding. The R. B. Forbes went down and towed her up.

TOBACCO. So sensible is every brute creature of the poisonous and deleterious quality of this plant, that no one of all the various tribes of beasts, birds or reptiles, has ever been known to taste of it. It has been reserved to man alone to make of this poisonous plant an article of daily necessity for the gratification of his depraved appetite.

MAINE ELECTION. Returns indicate an increased Democratic vote over that of last year. The Democrats have probably elected their Governor, filled the vacant Congressional Districts, and chosen an increased number of members to the Legislature.

GOOD ADVICE. A writer recommends every one going abroad to subscribe for a paper from his native town, "for even the advertisements are of interest, and distance lends enchantment to the marriages."

DANCING. We have been requested to direct attention to the advertisement of Mr. W. N. Bell, who will open a school for instruction in dancing, waltzing, etc. Due notice will be given of the commencement. "Gentlemen, take partners."

COLD WATER ARMY. The juveniles of Quincy comprising the "Cold Water Army," with their parents, friends and teachers, mustered in goodly numbers, last Wednesday afternoon, presenting quite a formidable appearance. After parading the streets with a band of music they enjoyed a "Pic Nic" at the Town Hall. We have not been furnished with an account of the proceedings, but learn that they had an agreeable time with plenty of good cheer. A dance came off at the Lyceum Room in the evening.

NOTICES.

The Whig citizens of Quincy are requested to meet at the Lyceum Hall, on SATURDAY EVENING, Sept. 18th, at half past seven o'clock, to choose the requisite number of Delegates to attend the Whig State Convention to be held at Springfield on the 29th inst., and to transact any other business that may properly come before them.

Per order of the Town Committee.

GEORGE NEWCOMB, Chairman.

COAL. It has been stated that the price of coal the present season, particularly the latter part, would be extremely high, and consequently purchasers should buy without delay. This is all moonshine, and we are glad that our friend of the Hingham Patriot has correctly informed his readers of this base design of speculators. He truly says, "The receipts, thus far, of the present year, of all kinds of coal, have far exceeded those of last year up to the present time, and what evidence therefore is there, that the quantity of this necessary article will be very scarce and the price exorbitantly high?"

The Governor of Kentucky has been called upon, by the War Department, for two Regiments of Infantry, for the war; and he has issued his proclamation accordingly.

The two "Brazilian Slaves," who were said to have gone to Canada from New York by the "Underground Railroad," left Boston recently on a trip to Saint Domingo.

Some of the physicians of New Orleans say that the yellow fever of the present season exhibits unusual symptoms, something of a combination with typhoid or ship fever.

The editor of the National Watchman, a "colored" paper at Troy, says that one of the thirty-seven Southerners who issued a circular to establish a pro-slavery paper in Washington, to his "certain knowledge, has a colored family, consisting of a beautiful woman, a swarthy prototype of Hagar, and five children."

Commodore Ballard, on the Chesapeake, near Annapolis, raises peaches that weigh eight and one half ounces each.

So strict an eye is kept over the movements of foreigners in France, that an American, having lately forgotten his lodgings, was obliged to go to the police office to obtain the necessary information, when to his great surprise, he was told who he was, where he lodged, and where he had taken dinner.

More than fifteen hundred men are employed on the New York and New Haven Railroad. The whole is now under contract, and the work is progressing with great rapidity.

Five dollars will enable a person to visit almost every prominent place within a hundred miles of the city of New York, including ferries both ways.

A speaker at a Labor Reform meeting in Manchester, (N. H.) told the girls that they should not yield an inch to the corporations—that in opposing the present system of labor they should all be united to a man.

One ton of silver bullion was stored in a St. Louis warehouse recently. It belongs to Santa Fe traders, and is on its way to Philadelphia to be converted into legal currency.

Lead has been discovered in Tazewell county, (Ill.). The mine is but a short distance from the Illinois river. It is apparently very rich, and will yield eighty per cent.

A male convict has been living for four years as lady's maid with a female of rank, in London.

The letters lately stolen from the Post Office, at Northampton, have been found in a corn-field near the town.

Col. Jefferson Davis has written a letter to the Governor of Mississippi, accepting the appointment of United States Senator, which the Governor was pleased to confer upon him.

Small tickets of the value of five and ten cents for the envelopes of unpaid letters, have been issued by the Postmaster General. They may be had at the Boston Post Office.

Capt. Stairs, pilot of the Cunard steamers, who has brought them from Halifax to Boston, and taken them hence, ever since the line commenced, died at Halifax, a short time since.

The sun has now, says Professor Mitchell, a spot on its surface of sufficient dimensions for our Earth to pass through.

A man calling himself True F. Young, has been arrested in Boston for passing altered bills of some broken bank, to the Falmouth Bank.

Elizur Wright, editor of the Chronotype, has again been arraigned at the Municipal Court, in Boston, charged with a libel upon Lieut. Col. Isaac H. Wright, in publishing a letter charging him with drunkenness, &c.

Senator Bagby of Alabama, was recently sued in Washington, (D. C.) for $25,45, for the tuition of his children. He pleaded exemption, on the ground that he was a member of Congress, and also that imprisonment for debt was abolished in the district. Judgment, however, was given against him, and he was compelled to pay.

NOTICES.

The Whig citizens of Quincy are requested to meet at the Lyceum Hall, on SATURDAY EVENING, Sept. 12th, at half past seven o'clock, to choose the requisite number of Delegates to attend the Whig State Convention to be held at Springfield on the 29th inst., and to transact any other business that may properly come before them.

For order of the Town Committee, GEORGE NEWCOMB, Chairman.

COAL. It has been stated that the price of coal the present season, particularly the latter part, would be extremely high, and consequently purchasers should buy without delay. This is all moonshine, and we are glad that our friend of the Hingham Patriot has correctly informed his readers of this base game of speculation. He truly says, "The receipts, thus far, the present year, of all kinds of coal, have far exceeded those of last year up to the present time, and what evidence there is that the quantity of this necessary article will be very scarce and the price be enormously high?"

In this town, 12th inst., by Rev. S. A. Davis, Mr. Nelson Mace of Boston, to Miss Eliza Ann Pope of this place.

VERMONT. There is no choice for Governor by the people. The Legislature is very evenly balanced, but probably the whigs will have a small majority in both branches.

DIED.

In this town, 11th inst., George A., son of Mr. John S. and Mrs. Ellen Packard, aged 5 months and 12 days.

In this town, 13th inst., Charles Alfred, son of Mr. Sylvanus and Mrs. Eliza S. B. Rowe, aged 1 year and 18 days.

Same day, Theodore G., son of Mr. Theodore W. and Mrs. Calantha Fowle, aged one week.

In Lawrence, 15th inst., Joseph E., son of Mr. Seth and Mrs. Maria Crane, recently of this town, aged 8 months.

In North Weymouth, 4th inst., very suddenly, Josephine, daughter of Mr. Albert F. and Mrs. Rachel Ann Speer, aged 21 months.

O where is our much loved daughter gone?

She's numbered with the dead,

But O we trust her glorious form

To that bright world has fled.

Caution.

THE public are hereby cautioned against trusting any person on my account without a written order.

Once More.

SEVERAL of my friends, in settling their accounts,

have told me they have heard it generally spoken that I have advertised my leaving town merely to get my debts. I admit it would be a very good plan if I could get them settled in that way, but I would impress it on the minds of all those who owe me, by

Note or Account, that I shall positively leave at the time stated in my advertisement, and would thank them not to leave their settling till the last day, as I shall be busy in making preparations to start.

I would also say I have a GOOD ASSORTMENT of things, made up and in piece, that I will sell cheap

before leaving for Cork and nothing else. I am thankful to my old customers for flocking in as they do to get what they want before I go, and should be most happy to attend to their wants in my line, let me be where I may.

The stand I am leaving would be a good chance for a young man just starting in business. He would find some first rate customers in this vicinity, and would do well to consult me before I leave.

SONGS SUNG AT THE PIC NIC
Of the Cold Water Army, held at the Town Hall, Quincy, Sept. 15th.

The tetrallars are coming,
The tetrallars are coming,
The tetrallars are coming,
With the pure Cold Water Pledge!
We're a band of freemen,
We're a band of freemen,
We're a band of freemen,
And we'll stand it through the world.

March for reformation,
By all in every station,
Throughout this wide creation;
Take the Cold Water Pledge,
We're a band of freemen, &c.

We mean to save our bacon,
And all the land awakes,
Stand firmly and unshaken,
To the Cold Water Pledge,
We're a band of freemen, &c.

We will save our sisters, brothers—
And our fathers, sons, and mothers—
With our neighbors and our brothers,
By the Cold Water Pledge,
We're a band of freemen, &c.

May no evil e'er betide us,
To sever or divide us;
But the God of Mercy guide us
With the Cold Water Pledge,
We're a band of freemen, &c.

Friends of Freedom! swell the song;
Young and old, the strain prolong,
Make the Temperance army strong,
And on to victory!

Lift your banners, let them wave,
Onward march a world to save;
Who would fill a drunkard's grave,
And bear his infamy.

Shrink not when the foe appears;
Spurn the coward's guilty tears,
Hear the shrieks, behold the tears,
Of ruin'd families!

Raise the cry in every spot,
"Touch not—Taste not—handle not!"
Who would be a drunken sot,
The worst of miseries!

Give the aching bosom rest,
Carry joy to every breast;
Make the wretched drunkard blest,
By living soberly.

Raise the glorious watchword high—
"Touch not—Taste not—handle not!"
Let the echo reach the sky,
And earth keep jubilee.

God of mercy! hear us plead,
For thy help we intercede;
See how many bosoms bleed,
And heal them speedily.

Hasten, Lord, the happy day,
When, beneath thy gentle ray,
TEMPERANCE all the world shall sway,
And reign unopposedly.

TUNE—Tyrone's Song of Liberty.
Merrily every bosom boundeth,
Merrily O! merrily O!
Where the song of temperance soundeth,
Merrily O! merrily O!

Where the parent's smile bath more brightness,
There the youthful heart hath more lightness,
Every joy the home surroundeth,
Merrily O! merrily O!

Merrily O! merrily O!
Merrily O! merrily O!
Merrily O! merrily O!
Merrily O! merrily O!

Wearily every bosom pineth,
Wearily O! wearily O!
Where the song of temperance twineeth,
Wearily O! wearily O!

Where the parent's smile yields to sadness,
There the youthful heart hath no gladness,
Every flower of life declineth,
Wearily O! wearily O!

Wearily O! wearily O!
Wearily O! wearily O!
Wearily O! wearily O!
Wearily O! wearily O!

Cheerily then awake the chorus,
Cheerily O! cheerily O!
Abstinence will restore us,
Cheerily O! cheerily O!

Now the parent's smile beams the clearest,
Now the parent's hopes are the dearest,
Every joy is now before us,
Cheerily O! cheerily O!

TUNE—Auld Lang Syne.
Shall e'er cold water be forgot
When we sit down to dine,
O no, my friends, for it is not
Poured out by hands divine?

Poured out by hands divine?
Poured out by hands divine?
Poured out by hands divine?
Poured out by hands divine?

To Beauty's cheek, 'tho' strange it seems,
'Tis not more strange than true,
Cold Water, 'tho' itself so pale,
Imparts the rosiest hue.

Imparts the rosiest hue,
Imparts the rosiest hue,
Imparts the rosiest hue,
Imparts the rosiest hue?

Yes, Beauty's cheek, 'tho' strange it seems,
'Tis not more strange than true,
Cold Water, 'tho' itself so pale,
Imparts the rosiest hue.

Imparts the rosiest hue,
Imparts the rosiest hue,
Imparts the rosiest hue,
Imparts the rosiest hue?

MISCELLANY.

AN AFFECTING TALE OF TRUTH.

BY MRS. LYDIA M. CHILD.

In a city, which shall be nameless, there lived long ago, a young girl, the only daughter of a widow. She came from the country and was as ignorant of the dangers of a city, as the squirrel's of their native fields. She had glossy black hair, gentle, beaming eyes, and lips like wet coral. Of course she knew that she was beautiful; for when she was a child, strangers often stopped as she passed, and exclaimed,
'how handsome she is.' As she grew older,
the young men gazed on her with admiration.
She was poor and removed to the city to earn her living by covering umbrellas. She was just at that susceptible age, when youth is passing into womanhood; when the soul begins to be permeated by 'that restless principle, which impels poor human nature to seek perfection in union.'

At the hotel opposite, Lord Henry Stuart, an English nobleman, had at that time taken lodgings. His visit to this country is doubtless well remembered by many for it made a great sensation at the time. He was a peer of the realm, descended from the royal line, and was, moreover, a strikingly handsome man of right princely carriage. He was subsequently a member of the British Parliament, and is now dead.

Lord Henry invited her to visit the public gardens on the Fourth of July. In the simplicity of her heart, she believed all his flattering professions, and considered herself his bride elect; she therefore accepted the invitation, with innocent frankness. But she had no dress to appear in on such a public occasion, with a gentleman of high rank, whom she very supposed to be her destined husband. While these thoughts revolved in her mind, her eye was unfortunately attracted to a beautiful piece of silk belonging to her employer. Ah, could she not take it without being seen, and pay for it secretly, when she had earned money enough?
The temptation conquered her in a moment of weakness. She concealed the silk and conveyed it to her lodgings. It was the first thing she had ever stolen, and her remorse was painful.
She would have carried it back, but she dreaded discovery. She was not sure that her repentance would be met in a spirit of forgiveness.

On the eventful Fourth of July, she came out in her new dress. Lord Henry complimented her upon her elegant appearance; but she was not happy. On their way to the gardens, he talked to her in a manner which she did not comprehend. Perceiving this he spoke more explicitly. The guileless young creature stopped, looked in his face with mournful reproach, and burst into tears. The nobleman took her hand kindly, and said, 'My dear, are you an innocent girl?' 'I am, I am!' replied she with convulsive sobs. 'Oh, what have I ever done or said, that you should ask me that?'

Her words stirred up the fountains of his better nature. 'If you are innocent,' said he,
'God forbid that I should make you otherwise.
But you accepted my invitation and presents so readily that I supposed you understood me.'
'What could I understand,' said she, 'except that you intended to make me your wife.'
Though reared amid the proudest distinctions of rank, he felt no inclination to smile. He blushed and was silent. The heartless conventionalities of life stood rebuked in the presence of affectionate simplicity. He conveyed her to her humble home, and bade her farewell, with a thankful consciousness that he had done no irretrievable injury to her future prospects. The remembrance of her would soon be to him as the recollection of last year's butterflies. With her the wound was deeper. In her solitary chamber she wept in bitterness of heart, over her ruined air-castles. And that dress which she had stolen to make an appearance befitting his bride! Oh, what if she would be discov-

'If you are innocent,' said he, 'God forbid that I should make you otherwise. But you accepted my invitation and presents so readily that I supposed you understood me.'

'What could I understand,' said she, 'except that you intended to make me your wife.' 'Though reared amid the proudest distinctions of rank, he felt no inclination to smile. He blushed and was silent. The heartless conventionalities of life stood rebuked in the presence of affectionate simplicity. He conveyed her to her humble home, and bade her farewell, with a thankful consciousness that he had done no irretrievable injury to her future prospects. The remembrance of her would soon be to him as the recollection of last year's butterflies. With her the wound was deeper. In her solitary chamber she wept in bitterness of heart, over her ruined air-circles. And that dress which she had stolen to make an appearance befitting his bride! Oh, what if she would be discovered!

And would not the heart of her poor widowed mother break, if she should ever know that her child was a thief? Alas, her wretched forebodings were too true. The silk was traced to her; she was arrested on her way to the store, and dragged to prison. There she refused all nourishment and wept incessantly.

On the fourth day, the keeper called upon Isaac T. Hopper, and informed him that there was a young girl in prison, who appeared to be utterly friendless, and determined to die by starvation. The kind hearted old gentleman immediately went to her assistance. He found her lying on the floor of her cell, with her face buried in her hands, sobbing as if her heart would break. He tried to comfort her, but could obtain no answer.

'Leave us alone,' said he to the keeper, 'perhaps she'll speak to me if there is none to hear. When they were alone together, he put back the hair from her temples, laid his hand kindly on her beautiful head, and said in soothing tones, 'My child consider me as thy father. Tell me all thou hast done. If thou hast taken this silk, let me know all about it. I will do for thee as I would for a daughter; and I doubt not that I can help thee out of this difficulty.'

After a long time spent in affectionate entreaty she leaned her young head on his friendly shoulder and sobbed out, 'Oh! I wish I was dead. What will my poor mother say when she hears of my disgrace?'

'Perhaps we can manage that she shall never know it,' replied he; and alluring her by this hope he gradually obtained from her the whole story of her acquaintance with the nobleman. He bade her be comforted and take nourishment; for he would see the silk was paid for, and the prosecution withdrawn. He went immediately to her employer, and told him the story. 'This is her first offence,' said he, 'the girl is young, and the only child of a poor widow. Give her a chance to retrieve this one false step, that she may be restored to society, a useful and honored woman. I will see that thou art paid for the silk.' The man readily agreed to withdraw the prosecution, and said he would have delt otherwise with the girl, had he known all the circumstances. 'Thou shouldst have inquired into the merits of the case, my friend,' replied Isaac. 'By this kind of thoughtlessness, many a young creature is driven into the downward path who might easily be saved.'

The good old man then went to the hotel and inquired for Lord Henry Stuart. He said his lordship had not risen. 'Tell him my business is of importance,' said Friend Hopper the servant soon returned and conducted him to his chamber.

The nobleman appeared surprised that a plain old Quaker should thus intrude upon his luxurious privacy; but when he heard his errand, he blushed deeply and frankly admitted the truth of the girl's statement. His benevolent visitor took the opportunity to 'bear a testimony,' as the Friends say, against the sin and selfishness of profligacy. He did it in such a kind and fatherly manner, that the young man's heart was touched. He excused himself by saying that he had not been hampered with the girl if he had known how to be virtuous. 'I have done many wrong things,' said he, 'but thank God, no betrayal of confiding innocence rests on my conscience. I have always esteemed it the basest act of which man is capable.' The imprisonment of the poor girl, and the forlorn situation in which she was found distressed him greatly. And when Isaac represented that the silk had been stolen for his sake, that the girl had thereby lost profitable employment, and was obliged to return to her distant home, to avoid the danger of exposure, he took out a fifty dollar note, and offered it to pay her expenses. 'Nay,' said Isaac, 'thou art a very rich man; I see in thy hand a large roll of notes. She's the daughter of a poor widow, and thou hast been the means of doing her great injury. Give me another.'

Lord Henry handed him another fifty dollar note and smiled, as he said, 'You understand your business well. But you have acted nobly, and I reverence you for it. If you ever visit England, come to see me. I will give you a cordial welcome, and treat you like a nobleman.'

'Farewell friend,' replied Isaac, 'though much to blame, in this affair, thou hast behaved nobly. Mayest thou be blest in domestic life, and trifle no more with the feelings of poor girls; not even with those whom others have betrayed and deserted.'

Luckily the girl had the presence of mind to assume a false name when arrested; by which means her true name was kept out of the newspapers. 'I did this,' she said for my poor mother's sake.'

With the money given by Lord Henry, the silk was paid for, and she went home to her mother well provided with clothing. Her name and place of residence remain to this day a secret with her benefactor.

Several years after the incidents I have related, a lady called at Friend Hopper's house and asked to see him. When he entered the room, he found a handsome dressed young matron, with a bloming boy of five or six years old. She rose to meet him, and her voice choked as she said, 'Friend Hopper, do you know me?' He replied that he did not. She fixed her tearful eyes earnestly upon him, and said, 'you once helped me in great distress.' But the good missionary of humanity had helped too many in distress to be able to recollect her without more precise information. With a tremulous voice, she bade her son go into the next room, for a few minutes; then dropping on her knees, she hid her face in his lap, 'I am the girl that stole the silk. Oh! where should I now be, if it had not been for you?'

When her emotion was somewhat calmed, she told him that she had married a highly respectable man, a Senator of her native State. Having a call to visit the city, she had again and again passed Friend Hopper's house, looking wishfully at the windows to catch a sight at him; but when she attempted to enter, her courage failed.

'But I go away to-morrow,' said she, 'and I could not leave the city without once more seeing and thanking him who saved me from ruin.' She recalled her little boy, and said to him, 'Look at that old gentleman, and remember him well; for he was the best friend your mother ever had.' With an earnest invitation that he would visit her happy home, and a fervent 'God bless you,' she bade her benefactor farewell.

My venerable friend is not aware that I have written this story. I have not published it from any wish to glorify him, but to exert a genial influence on the hearts of others; to do my mite towards teaching society how to cast out the Demon Penalty, by the voice of the Angel Love.—Parlor Annual.

WHY THE OCEAN IS SALT.

The saltiness of the ocean has usually been regarded as a special provision of nature to guard against certain inconveniences which otherwise might have resulted. The presence of so much saline matter in solution depresses the freezing point of the water many degrees, thereby diminishing the dangerous facility with which fields of ice are produced in the polar regions. It has been said, also, that the salt is useful in checking evaporation, and also aids in preventing the corruption of the water by the accumulation of animal and vegetable remains. Without for a moment questioning the incidental benefits resulting from the circumstances under discussion, and which in one case are quite obvious, it may be suggested that the saltiness of the sea may be considered rather an inevitable result of the present disposition of things, than a special arrangement, expressly intended to fulfill certain particular objects.

The rain that falls upon the earth is due to the condensation of aqueous vapor previously existing in the atmosphere, and which is evaporated in a great part by evaporation from the surface of the sea—the air of the latter compared with that of the land being very great, necessarily so, perhaps, to furnish the requisite extent of evaporating surface. This water, as is well known, is perfectly fresh and pure, the saline constituents of the ocean having no sensible degree of volatility at that temperature at which the vapor has been raised. No sooner, however, does it reach the earth than it becomes contaminated with soluble substances which it meets while flowing on the surface of the ground or percolating beneath. It is thus that the waters of springs and rivers invariably contain a greater or less amount of alkaline and earthy salts, which all eventually find their way into the sea, and there remain, since there is no channel for their return. The same condition of sea water is but an exaggeration of that of ordinary lakes, rivers and springs; the materials are the same, and of necessity so;—the ocean in fact being the great repository of all soluble substances which during innumerable ages have been separated by a process of washing from the land. The case of the sea is but a magnified representation of what occurs in every lake into which rivers flow, but from which there is no outlet except by evaporation. Such a lake is invariably a salt lake. It is impossible that it can be otherwise; and it is curious to observe that the condition disappears when an artificial outlet is provided for the water. It will be remembered that the saltiness of the ocean is very far exceeded by that of several inland lakes of the kind described. That of Aral near the Caspian, and the Dead Sea in Judea, are remarkable examples.

BEFORE THE WEDDING.

'We shall be very happy together!' said Louise to her aunt, the evening before the wedding. And her cheek was tinged with a rich color, and her eyes sparkled with soulful happiness. When a young bride says 'we,' it may easily be imagined whom she is talking of.

'I doubt it not, dearest Louise,' answered her aunt, 'take heed only that you remain as happy.'

'No fear of that, my prudent aunt. I know myself and my own faults; but my love for him will correct. So long as we love each other, we can never be unhappy; and our affection cannot change.'

'Ah! said the aunt sighing, 'you talk like a girl of nineteen on the eve of marriage in the hey-day of hope and bright anticipations. Dear child! believe me—even the heart grows old. The day must come, when the rapture of passion will decay; when the illusion is over, and we stand revealed in our real characters. After custom has robbed beauty of its dazzling charms—after youth has departed, or shadows mingled with the light of home; then Louise, the wife may talk of the excellence of her husband, or the husband of the admirable qualities of his wife. But the day before the wedding such encomiums go for nothing with me.'

'I understand you, dear aunt. You mean to say the virtues only of each can give lasting pleasure to the other. Now—for myself I say nothing—for I can boast only of good will; but you cannot deny that my betrothed is the best and most deserving of all the young men of this town! Are not all virtues that lead to happiness blooming in him?'

'I will do you both justice,' answered her relative, 'and acknowledge that virtues bloom in both; I can say that to you without flattery. But, my love, they only bloom and need a lifetime of rain and sunshine to ripen them. No blossoms are more deceitful at their first opening. We cannot know in what soil they are rooted. Who knows the hidden heart?'

'Nay, my dear child, even could you always remain as you are, youth and beauty would lose the power to charm, with habit and their constant presence. Men soon grow weary of the loveliest face. Besides, your husband must grow old himself; and then youthful manners will cease to please him. Your habits, your tastes, would no longer be congenial.'

Louise sighed.

'I could store your memory,' resumed her aunt, 'with precepts to guard your happiness. I could tell you to beware of the first quarrel, never to contend even in jest; to have no secrets from each other, lest the springs of confidence be insensibly snapped; to beware of the interference of relations. But these are maxims which our own prudence will sufficiently impress upon you, and their observance at best will have but a negative effect.'

'Would you have the secret of perpetual loveliness? It is treasured—not in feature or complexion, but in the soul. Men worship beauty for the inward graces for which it is the pledge. Would you know how to keep the soul fair? Religion is the only secret for that.'

'Thus you see, my love, how little we can depend on personal perfections; how little upon mental excellencies or amiable traits of character. But the virtues born of, and nourished by religion, are immortal. Seek them from Him who is the Author of religion; and seek them daily from Him. Be assured thus, that you will ever remain fair and amiable in the eyes of your husband—and be blessed in every relation of life.'

Louise flung her arms round her aunt's neck, and thanked her, with tearful eyes, for her lesson.

Depend upon it, there is nothing like 'making a noise in the world,' more to the pity, but we can't help that. Sometimes, your quiet, say-nothing, modest sort of folks, get along, and accomplish something in their way—but your real heroes are the men who kick up a fuss, and make a great noise. Sometimes we wish we could make a noise.

But we were not going into a general course of remark upon this important matter. We were only going to say that the expediency, 'if not the necessity of making a noise, is fully illustrated in the case of fire—and incidents at a late fire drove us in this course of reflection. Now, our staid, sober citizens, who don't know the luxury of making a noise, when they see a band of spirited fellows engaged in any thing, who go it with a hurrah, whatever they go—are very apt to ask, 'what is the use of all this racket?' 'If you are going to a fire, why don't you go like civilized beings—not like yelling savages?'

Why, we can tell these lovers of order that the whole town might burn up, before an engine would arrive at the fire, if there was nobody to shout 'head with her! Head with her! And when they get there, if nobody sung out 'up and down! Give it to her! That's the talk!—and so forth, the water would run out of the hose-pipe as it would out of the bung of a barrel without vent. There are a great many folks who can't have 'a good time,' if they can't holler. In old times, when bad liquor used to be an accompaniment to 'good times,' we used to give the liquor all the credit of making the noise. But the veriest teetotalers that ever lived, will put old times to shame, even in these temperance days. It may argue an empty-headedness—drums are very noisy—but the mass of mankind like to make a noise in the world. Some of them do it to marvellous little purpose, to be sure, and in questionable taste—but 'nil disputandum'—we don't know the rest of the quotation.—Nashua Telegraph.

RECIPE FOR MAKING YEAST. To two middling sized potatoes add a pint of boiling water, and two table spoonfuls of brown sugar. One pint of hot water should be applied to every half pint of the compound. Hot water is better in warm weather. The yeast being made without fire, will keep longer in hot weather, and it is said to be much better than any in previous use.

COLD BEDROOMS. A person accustomed to undress in a room without a fire, and to seek repose in a cold bed, will not experience the least inconvenience, even in the severest weather. The natural heat of his body will very speedily render him even more comfortably warm than the individual who sleeps in a heated apartment, and in a bed thus artificially warmed, and who will be extremely liable to a sensation of chilliness as soon as the artificial heat is dissipated. But this is not all—the constitution of the former will be rendered more robust, and far less susceptible to the influence of atmospheric vicissitudes than that of the latter.—Journal of Health.

WALKING. Walking is good, not merely stepping from shop to shop, or from neighbor to neighbor, but stretching out into the country, to the freshest fields, and highest ridges, and quiet lanes. However sullen the imagination may have been among its griefs at home, here it cheers up and smiles. However listless the limbs may have been sustaining a too heavy heart, here they are braced, and the lagging gait becomes buoyant again. However perverse the memory may have been in presenting all that was agonizing, and insisting only on what cannot be retrieved, here it is at first disregarded and then it sleeps; and the sleep of the memory is the day in Paradise to the unhappy. The mere breathing of the cold wind on the face of the commonest highway is rest and comfort, which must be felt at such times to be believed.

BOXING IN HEAVEN. A stout fisted Irishman, who had long gloried in the name of the 'Village Boxer,' and had spent a long life in learning and supporting this pugilistic reputation, was at length tripped up by sickness, and to all appearance was soon going to be completely 'floored,' and put under the necessity of 'knocking under to death.' He was visited by a priest who sought to draw his attention to spiritual matters. The sick man asked who there were in Heaven. He was told, he 'would set down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.'

'Ah! ejaculated Paddy, with a sigh, 'There will be no fun to set to with them. But is Sampson there?'

He was told that he was. Clenching his fists, he exclaimed, 'Then wait till I get there too. By the powers! won't we have a glorious round or two. He won't beat me so easy as he did the Philistines!'

CITY AND COUNTRY. A New York paper asks, what would be thought in the country of a sight like this?—Nine women standing in front of so many hog-heads of molasses, and scraping with a spoon into tin pails, the froth which oozes from the bungs? Such a sight we saw the other day in Wall street; and this is but one of many of a similar character. Every morning may be seen the chiffoniers raking the gutter for rags and paper, and men sifting the coal ashes thrown from the houses of the rich. Nails, pieces of tin and iron, hoops and bits of board are all carefully collected by this class of 'life which they follow, and one in no way to be compared with that which may be enjoyed in the country, where there are pure air, good food, and healthful occupation in the field.

ESQUIMAUX PHILOSOPHY. Amongst the Esquimaux, according to Sir John Ross, the crime of murder very rarely occurs. When it does, the murderer's punishment consist in being banished to perpetual solitude, to be shunned by every individual of his tribe; inasmuch that even the sight of him is avoided by all who may inadvertently meet him. On being asked why his life was not taken in return, it was replied 'that this would be to make themselves equally as bad; that the loss of his life would not restore the other; and that he who should commit such an act would be equally guilty.'

THE HOG'S LIFE. The natural term of the hog's life is little known, for the plain reason that every man's hand is raised against them, as if he was hostes humani generis a pirate and an outlaw! But it is related by Rev. Gilbert White on this subject, that a neighbor of his kept a half-breed Bantam sow, 'who was as thick as she was long, and whose belly swept the ground, until she was seventeen, when she showed some tokens of age, by the decline of her fertility, and was then fattened—killed. For ten years she produced two litters annually, of about ten, and once above twenty at a litter. At a moderate computation, she was allowed to have been the mother of some three hundred pigs!'

PICKING CUCUMBERS. To each hundred of cucumbers, put a pint of salt, and pour in boiling water sufficient to cover the whole. Cover them tight to prevent the steam from escaping and in this condition let them stand for twenty-four hours. Then they are to be taken out and after being wiped perfectly dry, (care being taken that the skin is not broken,) placed in the jar in which they are to be kept. Boiling vinegar is then to be put on them, the jar to be closed tight, and in a fortnight, delicious hard pickles are produced, as green as the day they were upon the vines. The best vinegar is to be used.

AFFABILITY. 'The southern ladies are not deficient in levity, but what renders them and all ladies so much more charming is their affability. Never losing their self-respect; they are yet exempt from that affectation of exclusiveness and ill-born pride that spring from sudden opulence, acquired sometimes by one means and sometimes by another—sometimes by being a fashionable muffin-maker, and sometimes by a run of luck in trade.'

MAGIC OF WEALTH. It is wonderful to see what richness and point the possession of wealth imparts to a dull man's sayings. A joke from a man worth fifty thousand is a hundred times wittier, and elicits a ten times louder laugh, than one from a man worth but five dollars. It is hard for a rich man to say a poor thing; but a poor man can't pass off a joke or a guinea, without its being suspected as counterfeit.

CHAMPOOING MIXTURE.

for superior to the far famed Eagle Balm, which when scientifically applied, renders the hair soft and pliable and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

It would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores the scalp to a healthy condition, which must be accomplished before the hair will make its appearance.

It is the great desideratum of the age.

Ladies wishing this application will be waited upon at their residences by W. E. Ambush, by leaving orders at his Emporium, Southern Building, Quincy.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MONTREAL, Aug. 8, 1847.

FRIEND GREEN—After a week's journey from home, I arrived safe in Her Majesty's dominions, and thus far have enjoyed the trip very much. Dubuque's hotel, where I am now writing from, is the best hotel in the city, situated on Notre Dame street, its location is high and airy, its accommodations are spacious and commodious. The landlord is very attentive to the wants of his guests, and nothing is wanting to make the stay of the traveller pleasant and agreeable. I find that there are many things here to remind one that he is not in the United States. Soldiers, dressed in gaudy uniforms, are met at every turn. Priests in long robes and emigrants in rags and wretchedness are frequently seen. Officers of government and wealthy gentlemen ride by, with their liveried attendants and gilded equipages, while at the same time, the Canadian pony is seen dashing along, driven by a Canadian peasant, in a Calash. This is the common vehicle of the country, and resembles the chaise of Massachusetts, with the exceptions of the tops, the Calash, being open and more heavily and clumsily built. Cabs are numberless and the cabmen are generally as polite as in the cities of the United States.

There are now, and have been, but few travellers here this season, owing no doubt to the many alarming reports, that have been circulated in all the papers in the Union, of the great mortality from Ship Fever, and great danger to travellers.

This, so far as danger to travellers is concerned, is a great humbug. The sickness is in almost every case confined to the emigrant Sheds, and I am told by residents of the city, that they have not known a single case of fever, where the person has not exposed himself down at the Sheds or in personal contact with the sick in some way. These Emigrant Sheds, as they are called, are situated about a mile from the main part of the city, near the terminus of the Lucerne Canal. They are about thirty in number, built of rough boards, and slightly raised. Here are congregated all those emigrants who are sick with fever, numbering at the present time about six thousand men, women and children, in all stages of the disease, while many are dying daily. The people of Montreal, have become disgusted with the conduct of many of these emigrants, said a gentleman to me as we were walking by the Sheds. The more we do for them, the less they will do for themselves, many who are well repair to this place and begin sick, rather than work, and no longer ago than last week, when the physicians went round to inspect them, they found six hundred of these imposters who when the medicine was offered would not need any, but when the best case they could take their share, and like Oliver Twist ask "for more." The city asking charity rather than earn an honest living. But nevertheless the emigrants are indeed to be pitied, and one can imagine the pitiable and miserable condition they are in who has not been here. Those who are not confined to the Sheds are wandering about, many of them knowing not where to go or what to do, looking more like walking shadows than human beings. Broken down in body and mind, having left both family and disease at home, and alas! many of them finding but the same here. In my next I will give you a description of the city, some of its public buildings, &c.

Yours truly, AMERICUS.

Triemagistis advised his son Tatius, to have no commerce with a single man; believing, no bachelors could be honest. Georgius Wicelusus thus concludes the twenty-six arguments in favor of marriage: "No one can either live piously or die righteously without a wife."

The Cunard line of steamers, it appears by a report made to the House of Lords, pays to the Government in postages, more than the amount paid for conveying the mails. The amount received was £83,024, and that paid Cunard, £80,360.

Judge Cove of Nashua, (N. H.) has been appointed Superintendent of the Nashua Railroad, and will shortly leave the bench, to enter upon the duties pertaining to that office.

There are some pretty tall officers in Mexico. Gen. Scott stands six feet, four. Generals Worth and Twiggs, Colonels Harney and May, and Major Lally, are all six feet or over; Colonel Doniphan, six feet, two; Captain Pike, him of "the lyre and sword," about the same height. No wonder the Mexicans are astonished.

Rev. Austin Willey was cowled in the streets of Hallowell, (Maine), recently, by a quiet and respectable citizen of that town, in repayment for an atrocious indignity which was inflicted upon a little daughter, by the reverend gentleman.

No less than one hundred and thirty vessels arrived at Boston last Saturday, bringing large quantities of produce of various kinds, among which were 7,700 barrels of flour, and 7,800 tons of coal.

The Board of Missions, in session at Buffalo last week, adjourned to meet in Boston next September.

John H. W. Hawkins, the renowned temperance lecturer, is laboring in the state of Connecticut.

The ship Swatara, with two hundred and sixty passengers on board, arrived at Philadelphia a day or two ago, from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 14th of March last—having accomplished her voyage in six months and four days. She was three times dismantled, and had to put back for repairs.

A new issue of counterfeit American quarters has appeared in Cincinnati. They are extremely difficult of detection.

WHIG STATE CONVENTION. The whigs of this State will hold a Convention at Springfield, next Wednesday, 29th inst., at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to nominate candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor, choose delegates at large to attend the next Whig National Convention, and the transaction of any other necessary business. The whig citizens of this town, met last Saturday evening for the choice of delegates to this convention, and the following gentlemen were selected, viz:—Horatio N. Glover, Josiah Brigham and George W. Beale.

FROM EUROPE. The steamer Britannia arrived at Boston on Sunday morning, fourteen and a half days from Liverpool. She struck on Cape Race, (Newfoundland), on the 14th inst., but was got off in about half an hour without having sustained any damage. The news of this arrival is unimportant. The money market had not undergone any improvement. There were quite a number of heavy failures in different parts of England. The corn market was depressed, the cotton market dull, and the state of trade throughout the manufacturing districts was gloomy. The steamship Great Britain has been raised and taken to Liverpool.

DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE. At a meeting of the democratic citizens of this town, held at the Lyceum Room on the 16th inst., the following gentlemen were chosen the Town Democratic Committee for the ensuing year:—Wyman Abercrombie, Joseph W. Robertson, Nathan H. White, Jonathan Baxter, Jonathan Jameson, Dudley Folson, Joseph G. Brackett, James M. Glover, George Baxter, James Lovell, Naaman B. Holmes, and Charles Swift.

NEW FLOUR. The flour from the new wheat is said to be very superior this year, from the fact that the unexampled demand for bread-stuffs during the last year, has thrown into market the surplus on hand, so that the usual custom of mixing old with new wheat, grinding it together, and sending it to market as new flour, is largely diminished if not entirely prevented.

THE PLAYMATE. A new monthly Magazine, for children, has just been issued, called "The Playmate; A Pleasant Companion for Spare Hours." It is most attractively embellished, and judging from the specimen number, the juveniles will find a rare treat in the work. See advertisement in another column.

DROWNED. The body of James Colburn, who Village, since 18th inst., was found on Wednesday, in a mill pond in that town. He was laboring under an attack of delirium tremens when he left his home. He has left a widow and three children, the youngest born since he has been missing.

PORK. The Western papers say that the number of hogs slaughtered this year will greatly exceed the number slaughtered last season. From all accounts, the provision business will be active during the coming season.

POSTAGE STAMPS. The Postmaster General has directed small tickets of the value of five or ten cents to be prepared and sold at the Post Office, for the convenience of the public. The thing is not understood, however, universally, among the craft. Instances have occurred in which postmasters, not understanding the tickets, have required the postage again.

DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION. This Convention met at Worcester on Wednesday. Charles G. Greene of Boston, was elected President, with the usual number of Vice Presidents and Secretaries. The convention then proceeded to business, and nominated Caleb Cushing as candidate for Governor, and Henry W. Cushman, Lieutenant Governor. B. F. Hallett, of Boston, and Chester W. Chapin, of Springfield, were chosen as delegates to the National Democratic Convention at Baltimore.

THE MECHANICS' FAIR. This exhibition at Faneuil and Quincy Halls, Boston, continues to be visited by multitudes. It is really worth witnessing.

On Tuesday evening, 28th inst., there will be a grand exhibition of Fireworks, for premium, (in connection with the Fair,) on Boston Common, commencing at half past seven o'clock.

A train of Old Colony cars leave their Depot, in Boston, every evening during the Fair, at half past nine o'clock.

SAMOST HOUSE, PLYMOUTH. We are gratified at the favorable notice the editor of the Plymouth Rock has seen fit to give of the Samost House, in that place. While his columns are open to free discussion, still he will not let malice or slander go unrebuked. He doubtless justly says that the Samost House is all (pleasant) landlord—excellent accommodations, etc., that can be required of a good hotel.

LOVE WILL YET CONQUOR. A young couple from Lynnfield, (Mass.) who had forsaken "father and mother," for the purpose of being made one, arrived in Boston, and without delay proceeded on towards Providence, (R. I.) The guardian of the young lady was in hot pursuit, however, and arrived in Providence in the same train of cars with the juveniles. He accordingly separated the loving couple, and by the aid of some sort of a writ, took the female into his custody, and proceeded back to Lynnfield.

WHIG COUNTY CONVENTION. A Convention of the whigs of Norfolk County will be held at the Phoenix Hotel, Dedham, on Wednesday, October 6th, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the office of State Senators, and electing a County Committee for the ensuing year.

ANTI-SLAVERY MEETING. A Quarterly Meeting of the Old Colony Anti-Slavery Society will be held at South Bridgewater, on Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 2d and 3d. The meeting will be held in the spacious Town House, only a few minutes' walk from the depot, and continue through each day and evening. Meeting will commence at half past nine o'clock in the forenoon.

COURT. The Court of Common Pleas at Dedham, closed its session last evening. Judge Washburn of Worcester, having presided. Several liquor cases were tried, and the defendants found guilty. O'Brien for breaking into the store of E. Packard of this town, was put under two thousand dollar bonds for his trial at the next term of the Court.

MEXICO. There is no later news from this country. The prospects of peace look rather dubious. Gen. Scott, at last accounts, was ready when the armistice had been terminated, if peace was not concluded, to take possession of the city of Mexico.

VERMONT. The Legislature elect of Vermont, stands—one hundred and four whigs, eighty democrats, and twenty abolitionists, according to a Vermont paper.

Two things a man should never be angry at—what he can help, and what he cannot help.

Four incendiary attempts were made in Charlestown, between Saturday and Monday noon.

The Ten Hour Law of New Hampshire has given occasion for serious difficulties in the Mills at Nashua, from a half to two thirds of the hands recently employed in which have been discharged because they would not waive the rights conferred upon them by that law, and give their employers two hours more labor per day for the same pay, than the law requires of them.

Let none think themselves too great or too good to take pains.

Major Edward Webster, of the Massachusetts regiment, has left Boston for New Orleans on his way to Vera Cruz, where his regiment has been ordered. His health has been re-established.

There seems to be, in the people of this generation, a wonderful disposition to change—an itching, a hankering after something new.

Hon. Cave Johnson, Postmaster General, is seriously indisposed.

The Purser of the United States ship Savannah, just returned from a four years' cruise, drew upon the government for $150,000 to pay off the crew.

Win. L. Garrison, of Boston, is in Cleveland, (Ohio), quite low with a bilious fever. Visitors are prohibited by his physician from calling upon him.

The infamous Mrs. Restell has been again released from imprisonment, having obtained bail in the sum of $10,000.

Sir Robert Peel defines Protection to be "a tax on industry."

H. Dearborn, Esq. of Roxbury, son of Gen. H. A. S. Dearborn, has been appointed Superintendent of the Norwich and Worcester Railroad, in place of J. W. Stowell, resigned.

In a hotel in Trinidad, a man named Drum is bar-keeper. His friends call him "Spirit-stirring Drum."

Lieut. Irons, who acted as aid-de-camp to Gen. Cadwallader, died of the wounds received in the engagements of the 19th and 20th ultimo.

The South Carolina regiment of volunteers, which left their homes six months ago, about eight hundred strong, can now only muster one hundred and thirty-five men spared by pestilence and war.

Accounts from Halifax (N.S.) state that the crops generally are good. In and about Annapolis, the potatoes were entirely free from rot.

The whole American force in the field in the late battles was from thirteen to fifteen thousand; but they were scattered to make different attacks, and they presented only about six thousand to meet the Mexican masses at one point. Worth, with six thousand men, attacked Santa Ana with twenty thousand on the second day's fight, and drove him from the field.

"There are two things," says a noble historian, "which are generally popular in their beginning; the first is a war, and the second a peace."

Dr. Lyman Beecher lately said, "young women, whenever you see a young man nibbling at cloves or nutmegs on his entering a church, you may safely say, 'that man has just taken a drink.'"

Rev. Noah F. Packard, a native of Abington, (Mass.) died of the fever in New Orleans, on the 3d inst. He studied theology in New York, and went to New Orleans as a Missionary some time last fall or winter.

Henry Clapp, Jr., editor of the Lynn Pioneer, came passenger in the Ocean Monarch, which arrived in Boston last week, from Liverpool.

There are twenty seven thousand Daughters of Temperance in the United States.

Mr. Shaw, son of Robert G. Shaw of Boston, was ordained a priest of the Catholic Church, on last Saturday forenoon, at the cathedral in that city. Mr. Shaw studied in Rome for some time.

The new regiment now organizing in Indiana, has been ordered to join General Scott.

The amount of Treasury notes outstanding on the 1st instant, was $15,808,438.

Gen. Franklin Pierce, in a private letter to a friend, states that in his belief peace will be the result of the late battles. Gen. P. is one of the Commissioners, and probably the principle manager of the American side of the negotiation.

The Treasury of Maryland will be more than able, on the 1st of January next, to pay the interest due on that day on the State debt.

The political friends of Silas Wright, met in county convention, at Canton, (N. Y.) have resolved to erect a monument over his grave.

In some parts of California the dew is so heavy that they wet through an India rubber coat, or a six inch plank, in a single night.

The Western Rivers are so low as to render navigation exceedingly difficult.

Pens made of flint glass are coming into vogue. They are said to be excellent, and are not subject to corrosion.

NOTICES.

A meeting of the "Union Board" will be held at the house of Mr. G. S. P. Whiting, next MONDAY EVENING, at eight o'clock precisely. A full and prompt attendance is important. S. ADAMS, Sec. of the Union Board.

An adjourned meeting of the Quincy Lyceum, for the choice of Officers, will be held at the Lyceum Hall on WEDNESDAY EVENING next, at half past seven o'clock.

It is hoped that all who feel an interest in the Lyceum will be present and assist in devising means for a course of Lectures if thought expedient, and in other wise advancing the character of the Lyceum, agreeable to the wishes of those by whom it was established. J. M. WADE, Secretary.

Come and Hear!

Mr. Jacob Carter of Philadelphia, will deliver a Temperance Lecture in the Town Hall, next SUNDAY, (to-morrow) EVENING, commencing at seven o'clock.

All who like to hear eloquent speaking and good singing, are cordially invited to attend, as Mr. Carter has the reputation of being a first rate speaker and singer.

N. B. Mr. Carter is poor, but charges nothing more than the audience may feel disposed to contribute for his services. A collection will be taken for his benefit.

Per order of the Officers of the Union Board, SETH ADAMS, Secretary.

COAL. It has been stated that the price of coal the present season, particularly the latter part, would be extremely high, and consequently purchasers should buy without delay. This is all moonshine, and we are glad that our friends of the Hingham Patriot have correctly informed his readers of this base design of speculators. He truly says, "The receipts, thus far, the present year, of all kinds of coal, have far exceeded those of last year up to the present time, and what evidence therefore is there that the quantity of this necessary article will be very scarce and the price be enormously high?" POETRY.

THE STRANGER.

The noise of day was hushed and still,
Beneath night's gentle spell,
And beautiful on Bethlehem's hill
The quiet moonbeams fell;
Yet there was one whose mournful eye
Was tracing all the scene,
With saddened thoughts of days gone by—
Of life's first early dream.

When resting in her childhood's home,
Like fond and nestling dove,
She felt not that she e'er should roam
From mother's eye of love—
And seek, in poverty and want,
On far off foreign soil,
A lowly pittance—mean and scant—
By her own daily toil.

Then came the recollection bright,
Of life's most balmy hour,
When Mahlon, with his eye of light,
First owned her gentle power—
And in his own bow, hurried tone,
Spoke of fair years to come—
With her his treasured one his own,
The sunlight of his home.

How faithfully did memory trace
His noble form and art;
Each feature of that worshipped face—
The brow—the raven hair—
The beaming smile of that dark eye,
Fraught with the light of mind,
Radiant with lofty soul and high,
Touched by a fire divine.

And now, where he in early hours,
With joyous foot had been,
She stood, by the same blooming flowers
His hand had nurtured then—
And the pure mountain air, that fanned
In youth his glowing brow,
Through the old roof-tree, soft and bland,
Was breathing round her now!

"Mahlon, my own beloved one!
How quiet now thy rest—
Where Eden's peaceful streams flow on,
An angel with the blest.
Thy hand oft resting on my brow,
With prayer for blessings then—
A golden harp is tuning now,
In Gabriel's song to share.

"Thou had'st me, with thy last, low tone,
Gladden thy mother's way—
To cheer her dreary path and lone;
With her to live and pray;
And where she goes, there will I go,
A sharer in her grief—
Gladly my little all bestow,
To give that heart relief.

Methinks thy smile I see,
And when she bendeth low in prayer,
Thy voice comes back to me.
Without a sigh, do I resign
Kindred and native clime,
To make her home, her people mine,
And the same Lord divine!"

The tear upon the wanderer's cheek
Was dry—no trace was left,
That might a sudden heart bespeak,
Or tell of hopes bereft;
Yet she ne'er dreamed of honors bright,
Encircling round her name,
Through ages, with the living light
Of an immortal fame.

But well she knew that one was near,
And with his wing should shield
The stranger, even though she were
A gleaner of the field!
How pure the light that o'er her shone,
As cheerfully she trod
The narrow path of duty on—
And she was blest of God!

ANECDOTES.

"John," said a master to his head apprentice, as he was about starting on a short journey, "you must take my place while I am gone." "Thank you, sir," demurely replied John; "but I'd rather sleep with the boys."

A merchant, examining a hoghead of hardware, on comparing it with the invoice, found it all right except a hammer less than the invoice. "Oh! don't be troubled my honey," said the Irish porter, "sure the nigger took it out to open the hoghead with."

A gentleman praising the generosity of his friend, observed that "he spent his money like water." "Then of course he liquidated his debts," rejoined a wag.

"Betty," said Deacon Marvin to Betty Lee, as he dismounted from his horse before the door of Betty's cottage, one frosty morning in November. "Betty, the Lord has sent me here to marry thee." "The Lord's will be done, Deacon," replied Betty with a sigh; and so they soon became one flesh.

"Where did you come from," said Wilkie to a beggar from the Isle of Wight. "From the devil." "What's going on there?" "Much the same as here." "What's that?" "The rich taken in, and the poor kept out."

An old woman in the country said to a neighbor, that she couldn't see the use of having thunder with lightning. "It ain't no use," said she, "it only makes a great noise and frightens folks." "Madam," asked the other, "how would silent thunder suit you?" "Oh laddy suz, yes! that's just what I should like!" she exclaimed.

"John, I'd like to bet you, three to one, that I can spell barrel with one letter." "Well, I'll take you." "Now then, John, if you were to write the word yourself, and had but little room to do it in, wouldn't you think a bare L would be enough?"

Champooing and Hair-Cutting.

POSTSCRIPT
WILLIAM E. AMBUSH,

WOULD respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of Quincy, that he has constantly on hand a new and unequalled

CHAMPOOING MIXTURE,

far superior to the far famed Bogle Hyperion, which when scientifically applied, renders the Hair soft and pliable and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant to and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores the scalp to a healthy condition which must be accomplished before the hair will make its appearance. It is the great desideratum of the age.

Ladies wishing this application will be waited upon at their residences by W. E. Ambush, by leaving orders at his Emporium, Southern's Building, Quincy.

N. B. CHILDREN'S hair cut at their residences at half price.
Quincy, May 15.

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to the community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality, at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is amply sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we should be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULATING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading of a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c.

To all we say "encourage home manufacture, and patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign."
